3 charged in Rembrandt art theft; ransom found

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Three men were charged Monday in connection with the theft of two Rembrandt paintings, one returned by the thieves and the other recovered after payment of $100,000 ransom by Taft Museum.

Carl Horsley, 21, Raymond McDonough, 21, and Henry Dawn, 22, all of Loveland, Ohio, were held on charges of receiving stolen property. Authorities said the trio will probably be arraigned Wednesday in Cincinnati Criminal Court.

A fourth man also had been held under "investigative detention" Monday after the second stolen Rembrandt was returned and nearly all the $100,000 ransom was recovered. Police would not say what became of the fourth suspect.

Because $4,000 of the ransom money was still missing, police were tight-lipped about some details of the weekend chain of events which ended five days of bizarre negotiations and a late-night rendezvous to recover the masterpieces.

Nine persons, seven men and two women, had been held at first, but five were released after day-long questioning Sunday.

The "Portrait of an Elderly Woman," was returned by the thieves last Thursday night, and then demanded $200,000 ransom for the second painting, "Man Leaning on a Sill."

After lengthy negotiations through a local realtor designated as a go-between, the thieves agreed to a $100,000 offer from museum officials. The money, in small bills in two white sacks, was taken late Saturday night to the thieves' requested "drop off" spot, a propane gas tank alongside a road about 25 miles northeast of downtown Cincinnati.

An unidentified caller telephoned police about three hours later to tell them the painting could be found under a rural house several miles from the money "drop" point.

Police said the arrests were made about two hours later and $50,000 of the $100,000 ransom money recovered. Later Sunday another $46,000 was recovered.

Police refused to elaborate on how the arrests were made and where the money was recovered.

Although there was a "minor" scratch on the first Rembrandt painting returned, authorities said the second painting "appears to be in good shape."

The works were appraised for insurance purposes more than 10 years ago at $330,000, but some art critics put their value in the millions of dollars.

Biggest haul in U.S. history

$20 million marijuana seizure; 11 arrested

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Federal, state and local law officers arrested 11 persons Monday and seized between 25 and 30 tons of marijuana, believed to be the largest seizure in U.S. history. Authorities estimated its street value at over $20 million.

In a joint statement, the Florida Department of Law Enforcement (FDLE) and federal authorities said they "believe Monday's arrests have broken the back of the major supplier for the southeastern United States."

FDLA spokesman Jack Dawkins added authorities had established a connection between the Florida Christmas Eve marijuana haul and the recent seizure of some six tons of marijuana in Bay Minette, Ala., where one man was arrested.

The 11 were arrested in five Florida counties in the raid that spread from late Sunday to Monday morning. Five vehicles were seized along with the huge stash of marijuana.

According to authorities, the marijuana came from Colombia and was smuggled into Florida by a small boat that anchored in a remote canal along the Gulf Coast near Port St. Joe. The marijuana was unloaded and transported to a barn, from which it was to be shipped to various destinations by trucks and campers.

FDLE Commissioner William Troelstrup said the marijuana seized totaled between 25 and 30 tons and had a value "on the street" of over $20 million.

Authorities said they struck after tracking the marinuana from the boat to the barn to the assorted vehicles which then headed for neighboring counties.

The first taken into custody was Lavel Raffield. He was held in the Gulf County jail in lieu of $150,000 bond.

Others who were arrested were identified as Theo George Fotianos, 24, William Edwin Northup, 25, Jorge Enrique Soto, 24, and Charles Lane Martin, 23, all of Gainesville, Fla.

Also, David Ronald Bateman, 31, and Kenneth Earl Taylor, 36, both of Quitman, Ga., and Raymond Eugene Hawkins, 29, and Karen Margaret Hawkins, 19, both of Madison, Fla., Thomas Michael Patton, 25, and Ernest Eugene Williams, 25, of Gainesville,

All were charged with possession of marijuana.

Troelstrup said agents from the U.S. Customs Service, the Federal Drug Enforcement Administration, the Internal Revenue Service, Florida Marine Patrol, Alachua County Narcotics Task Force and the Florida Highway Patrol cooperated in the five-week investigation which led to the crackdown.

Simon sees 8-11 cents gallon hike

NEW YORK (UPI) — William Simon, head of the federal energy office, was quoted by the American Broadcasting Co. (ABC) Monday as forecasting an eventual increase of 8 to 11 cents per gallon in the price of gasoline and heating oil as a result of the announced Persian boost of crude oil prices and expected similar action by Venezuela.

In contrast, the director of the American Petroleum Institute said Monday that doubling of crude oil prices by the Persian Gulf states will have only a marginal effect on the American economy.

Frank Ikard said he doubted that the hike to more than $11 a barrel would have a "significant impact" on the domestic oil situation.

Prices in the U.S. are largely based on local oil production, which provides more than 85 per cent of domestic needs, he said.

"You can look for an increase of 8 to 11 cents per gallon in price as a result of this when we get the full effect of the flowthrough," Simons said in an interview with ABC correspondent Roger Peterson. "Remember, we import only about 30 to 35 per cent of our needs, so the impact will not actually be as great as in Japan or obviously in the less developed countries."

Family loses everything

Firemen douse blaze in home then play Santa for victims

HACIENDA HEIGHTS — County firemen tried to make a tragic Christmas a little brighter for a Hacienda Heights family Christmas Eve by giving gifts to children of a family that several hours before lost their home and belongings in a fire.

A fire Monday morning started in a rear bedroom of the residence of Raymond David Stilley, 45, of 15824 Novak St., and spread to other areas of the house while some members of the family were still sleeping.

A niece, Katherine Leach, 12, sustained second degree burns to her right hand fleeing from the fire and Mrs. Vivian Stilley, 45, was suffering from shock. Both victims were given emergency treatment by the county paramedic team from the City of Industry station.

Firemen said the fire gutted the house and destroyed most of the contents including the family's Christmas gifts. The family is staying with friends in the neighborhood.

Two nieces and three grandchildren were staying with the couple. Several members of the family were watching television in the living room when smoke was seen in the hallway about 9:40 a.m.

The cause of the fire is under investigation.

Firemen from engine company 43 under the leadership of Capt. Joe Sotro returned to the scene of the fire later in the day to give Christmas gifts to the children, whose ages ranged from 3 to 16 years. Citizens leave the gifts at the station house each year before Christmas for the annual Toys for Tots Drive sponsored by the U.S. Marine Corps.

'Archie Bunker' fed up with Nixon; wants impeachment

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Actor Carroll O'Connor, whose Archie Bunker television role projects his political image to the right of the John Birch Society, Monday called for the impeachment of President Nixon.

O'Connor, writing in the December edition of the Texas AFL-CIO Labor News, said Nixon's Watergate, economic and energy problems indicate that "he's got to go."

The wavy-haired star of "All In The Family" wrote his column in the Archie Bunker talk-style, but not political philosophy.

"We wouldn't take a stand against Nixon last year," O'Connor wrote. "Maybe we weren't for him either, but we shouldn't have copped-out on that election. We shouldn't have let Nixon and his crowd fool us. Look who tried to steal the country? Creeps, they call 'em now."

O'Connor said the Nixon administration's economic policies have reduced the average worker's paycheck "even with its puny 5.5 per cent raise" to $5.83 less than it was worth a year ago.

Winds rip Ontario; to subside

Winds gusting up to 70 miles an hour ripped through central and south sections of Ontario Monday, shattered windows and knocked down power lines and trees.

The winds are expected to subside today and be replaced by mild and sunny weather throughout the Pomona Valley.

A tree limb crashed on top of two parked cars at Fourth Street and Euclid Avenue as numerous trees fell throughout the area.

A trailer blew over in the 1400 block of South Euclid Avenue and all windows of the Post Office Annex at Fourth Street and Grove Avenue were blown out during the strong gusts.

Officials said there were isolated problems of trees falling on service lines but, for the most part, West End customers were inconvenienced by power outages for only a short period during the storm.

Other West End communities reported only minor damage from the strong winds.

A traffic advisory was in effect most of Monday, said California Highway officials, because of high winds and blowing dust in the West End areas east of Ontario Motor Speedway.

Campers and trailers were advised not to use the San Bernardino Freeway where high winds were stalling some cars and reducing visibility to almost zero at times.

Tow trucks were used to remove about a dozen stalled cars from the freeway, and water trucks were used to wet down the dust along the freeway edges.

Fire in kitchen

ONTARIO — Fire caused $450 estimated damage in the kitchen of the home of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Cuccia behind Vince's Spaghetti, 1206 W. Holt Blvd. about 10:51 a.m. Monday.

Mrs. Cuccia reported that a fan candle she had lit to send a pleasant aroma throughout her home caused the short-lived blaze in the cupboard area.

Christmas story for the young, lonely—and 'Spook'

By TOM TIEDE

NEW YORK (NEA) — It hadn't snowed that week before Christmas. Everett, Washington, had rainy winters, with only some occasional white ash falling from the pulp and paper company chimneys.

Had there been some ice, I would have been sledding; as it was I was out peddling newspaper subscriptions, my friend Danny along, the both of us being eight or nine years old.

Danny was a nincompoop of sorts. Irish parentage, red hair, large freckles, he was the only kid I knew who smoked cigarettes and showed me occasional pictures of women in brassieres.

We made a team. I didn't smoke, but I thought the pictures were delightful. In the fourth grade Danny and I ran together, best pals; a little wild, we were, and especially him, since he had a cousin with a car and sometimes they would drive all the way to Seattle.

It was raining that afternoon. We carried subscription forms door to door. The town paper had a special gimmick: Lads could win a midget racer for selling two subs or a motorized midget racer for seven. Knock-knock. "You wanta buy the paper?"

We were getting little else but wet by the time we reached the woods where the spook lived. Actually, it wasn't a woods but a lot of front-yard tangle, and the spook was an old man who lived in the house beyond.

We called him spook because everybody else called him spook. Nobody had ever seen him, for all we knew, but everyone had heard the stories: He had a deranged daughter behind those doors, who ate scraps from the floor; he had a wife who'd been in prison; he himself, though nobody could prove it, walked around the house with no clothes on and threw knives at visitors fool enough to call.

Danny made the dare. He suggested we yell for the spook from back off the porch, because if we got closer we might get grabbed. God only knew what happened to the kids grabbed on that porch. Danny said he had a friend who had a friend who read meters who one time got cut by a knife on the porch.

I said who was that? Danny said just a guy. Danny was uncomfortable, when pressed for details, and snapped: "Are we gonna do it or not?"

We did. Danny yelled for the spook and retreated to the mailbox. When the old man came out he was wearing a

Arabs mull progress of 'oil war' against West

KUWAIT (UPI) — Arab oil ministers, many who joined in a weekend decision to double oil prices, met in Kuwait Monday to review the progress of their "oil war" against the West and discuss possible future action.

It was the fourth meeting of the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries (OAPEC) since Oct. 17, the date they first wielded the "oil weapon" against the United States in support of the Arab countries fighting Israel.

The top item on the agenda for Monday's meeting was a report from Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi Arabian Oil Minister, and Algerian Industry Minister Belaid Abdesselam, about a tour they made of Western capitals.

The two ministers, acting as representatives of all the OAPEC states, went to Western Europe, the United States and Japan to explain the use of the oil weapon.

The Arab oil producers have stopped deliveries to the United States and the Netherlands and have cut production by around 30 per cent in an attempt to pressure the West into forcing concessions from Israel in the Middle East conflict.

The OAPEC states have said they will continue their boycott and production cuts until Israel commits itself to complete withdrawal from occupied Arab territories.

Many of the ministers attending Monday's meeting flew in from Tehran, where they had attended a two-day meeting for Persian Gulf members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

The six Persian Gulf states— including non-Arab Iran—decided to more than double crude oil prices on Jan. 1, 1974. The posted price of the "marker" crude, Arabian Light, will jump from $5.11 to $11.65.

Kuwait's Oil Minister, Abdel Rahman Salem Atiki, said on his return from Tehran Sunday he considered the price increase "moderate and fair."

Atiki said the new prices would apply through the first quarter of 1974, indicating they would be reviewed in March or April.

A ministerial conference of all members of OPEC will be held in Geneva or Vienna Jan. 7 to examine the decisions taken at the Tehran conference.

The members of OAPEC are Kuwait, Libya, Saudi Arabia, Abu Dhabi, Algeria, Bahrain, Dubai and Qatar.

Ex-POWs look back at Yuletimein enemy hands

By WARREN L. NELSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Christmas hymn thundered out with some strange variations on "Hark the Herald Angels Sing."

One husky voice sang:

"My name is Tom McNish. I live in the Zoo."

Another carolled his name, rank and serial number.

It was Christmas in North Vietnam last year and for many American prisoners of war more than the first away from home.

Many of the 563 who came back in February and March reminisced Monday on past Christmases spent in cold and dreary prison camps nicknamed "The Zoo," "Dogpatch" and the like.

This will be their first Christmas at home, far different from those spent in Hanoi singing hymns while the North Vietnamese took propaganda pictures.

As the men boisterously sang out last Christmas, others holding song books sang different words —exchanging information to be fed into the prison grapevine.

It was the one-time prisoners were brought together from scattered camps.

Air Force Col. James F. Young spent last Christmas at Dogpatch, a bleak maximum security prison in the mountains.

This year—"the first one at home in eight years" —Young was surrounded by his wife, mother and three daughters.

"We'll go to midnight services Christmas Eve and then spend Christmas day eating and talking and reminiscing," he said.

It won't be a happy Christmas for all returnees —or the relatives of some.

Of those who came back, two committed suicide. About 10 per cent of the 420 married POWS have gotten divorces or are in the process of securing them.

About 6 or 7 per cent are unfit to return to military duty because of ailments and injuries. At least two will probably be wheelchair cases the rest of their lives. And about 5 per cent suffered serious mental problems, according to defense and health officials.

Navy Cmdr. Hugh A. Stafford remembers Christmas during his 5-½ years as a prisoner in North Vietnam.

"Those Christmas services were really a good thing because they let us communicate with other camps," Stafford told UPI. "I'd get up close to a strange face and he'd sing in tune with the hymn, 'My name is Tom McNish. I live in the Zoo.'

"The North Vietnamese preacher sounded just like the interrogators. He spouted the same party line about this 'illegal, immoral and unjust war'."

On Christmas and Tet, the Vietnamese New Year, POWS got one special meal —turkey, potato soup with onions, egg roll and salad.

"The turkey was the stringiest thing I'd ever eaten," Stafford said. "But it was seasoned food unlike the usual bland meals we got."

As soon as they got their plates and were paraded in front of the propaganda cameras, the prisoners were herded back to their cells to eat.

V.A. makes only small dent in easing student aid snafu

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Southern California regional office of the Veterans Administration worked through the weekend on orders from President Nixon to straighten out a huge foulup that has prevented thousands of student veterans from getting benefits for months.

But the workers made only a small dent, checking files and writing checks by hand, and said they would miss today's federal employe holiday and probably work through Christmas as well.

The snafu, when it was revealed, drew heavy criticism from local congressmen and protests by the veterans to the President.

Nixon ordered VA Administrator Donald Johnson to have the Los Angeles staff work through the weekend, and to submit to the White House today a report telling how the foulup happened and detailing what steps are being taken to make sure it never happens again.

An estimated 5,000 veterans attending school in Southern California say they have not received benefit checks—which range from $220 to $300 a month—since September.

Spokesmen for campus veterans groups say the delay has caused a number of veterans to drop out of school to support themselves or their families, and others are living on food stamps or loans from relatives, or just "walking around hungry."

VA officials said the problem is apparently the result of a plan put into effect in September to send veterans a two-month advance in that month, when their school expenses are highest.

Rather than send the checks to the students' homes, a computer was supposed to send them to campus veterans benefits offices to be distributed, the VA said.

The computer sent the checks to the wrong campuses, and persons, sent some of them out of the state and did not send others at all, the VA said.

California congressmen said they could not understand why the foulup affected only one region, they demanded an explanation of why only the Southern California regional office, of more than 50 in the nation, had such a problem.

"To say it's all the computer's problem is a bunch of crap—human error was involved," said Curtis Mack, assistant to Gordon Elliott, VA administrator for Southern California.

But at least one error, Elliott said, was in Chicago. He said the Chicago VA office was supposed to send Los Angeles a list of hardship cases, but sent the list to San Francisco instead.

Workers estimated they hand processed about 300 checks Sunday, making little dent in the estimated 2,000 hardship cases that are to be cleared up first.

"This place is in a panic," said veterans counselor Alex Mirosav.

The President's order to spare no effort to pay the veterans demolished holiday plans by the VA office staff. Mack cancelled his birthday party Sunday and Mirosav said "my wife's about ready to throw a brick through the window" because he cancelled plans to visit relatives in San Diego.

Other workers had already left on their expected four-day holidays when the presidential command was relayed Saturday and they were being called back as fast as they could be located. A staff of 50 was rounded up for work Sunday, and more were to be on hand today, Mack said.

The tree, sitting atop a 250-foot deep landfill, is being lit from electricity powered by gas from all the garbage decaying beneath the hill. It is thought the fill could provide enough gas for about 25,000 homes.

GM delays introduction of Rotary engine Vega

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors will not bring out its rotary-engined Chevrolet Vega at the start of the 1975-model year as originally planned, a company spokesman said Monday.

Problems with fuel economy, pollution control and general belt tightening by the world's largest automaker are believed the main reasons for the delay.

Instead of introducing the Wankel rotary Vega at the start of the 1975 model year next September, the spokesman said introduction will "probably" come some time during the model year. It will be offered as an option as soon as it is ready for mass production, he said.

GM later this week will announce a second round of cutbacks in production and in spending on some projects as a result of the slowdown in big car sales, industry sources said. The spokesman refused to confirm reports of further cutbacks.

Chairman Richard C. Gerstenberg is expected to make further announcements Thursday on future production plans in light of the downturn in big car sales caused, in part, by the fear of gasoline rationing.

During the week before Christmas, GM idled 137,000 workers and cut 79,000 big cars out of its December production schedules. The new cutbacks are expected to include several ongoing projects as well as actual production.

GM had hoped to be the first U.S. automaker on the market with an alternative to the present reciprocating piston engine. About 120,000 Japanese-built Mazdas with the Wankel rotary engine were sold in this country during 1973.

Fuel economy seems to be the biggest factor in GM's decision to continue working on the engine before introducing it to the public.

While it would not make specific mileage figures public, recent tests by the Environmental Protection Agency showed Mazdos getting among the poorest fuel economy in the 3,000-pound class cars—about 10.3 miles per gallon.

In the same EPA tests, the 2,750-pound Vega hatchback, with a four-cylinder aluminum engine, is at the top of its class with 24.6 m.p.g. The same car with an automatic transmission in place of the three-speed manual transmission got 19.6 mpg.

"All of our engine programs are undergoing revaluation because of the energy situation," the GM spokesman said.

GM already has paid $25 million to Curtiss-Wright Corp, Audi-NSU and Wankel GmbH of West Germany on its five-year license agreement. It plans another $10 million payment this Friday and will still owe $15 million before it can build and sell the rotary engine worldwide without any further royalties.

Nixon signs D of C home rule measure

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon Monday signed compromise legislation giving partial home rule to the District of Columbia. He called it a measure "of historic significance" for residents of the nation's capital.

Under the bill, signed by Nixon at the White House, the District of Columbia could have its first locally elected city government in 100 years, with a mayor and 13-member city council to be chosen next November for terms beginning Jan. 2, 1975.

Voters will have a chance to decide May 7 in a charter referendum if they want the elected city government provided by the bill.

Critics in Congress had opposed the legislation because it will continue significant federal controls on major aspects of government in the city, including the budget.

Nixon, in a statement issued as he signed the bill, said he had long been a supporter of self-government for the District of Columbia and that the home rule measure was an important step in his administration's attempt to give local governments more authority and resources to serve their communities.

"As the nation approaches the 200th anniversary of its founding, it is particularly appropriate to assure those persons who live in our capital city rights and privileges which have long been enjoyed by most of their countrymen," Nixon said.

'Christmas story' . . .

bathrobe and Danny started to laugh. I remember the old man waving.

I said: "We're selling subscriptions to the paper." Danny made more giggling sounds. The spook waved us through his door.

I was surprised at the house. It was normal, orderly, clean; a little better furnished than my own, actually. The man had been reading a paper in a chair, a pole lamp turned on over a lace doily, so I knew he didn't need a paper subscription.

The man asked how we were. I said fine, uneasily. Danny, the dummy, was still making sounds, trying not to laugh, snorting through his nose he tripped on the rug and howled.

The old man had his teeth out. No, he said, he didn't need a subscription, and he said "subskiption" so funny I almost laughed myself. Then he picked a large bowl of candy off his coffee table and offered it.

It was Halloween candy, he said, and excused the fact that by now it was all stuck together. "I always have a big bowl of it on Halloween, but nobody ever comes around. It just sits and melts for the rest of the year."

We started to leave but the man suggested we sit down. I did. Danny's didnt. And after that, for no particular reason that I remember, the old fellow began talking about Christmas.

He said he came from Minnesota, where it snowed every December, and when he was young he would take his family for a ride on a sleigh. "Bells and everything." He talked of cutting down his own tree, and choosing presents from the most colorful pages of the catalog, and going into Duluth to see the decorations.

He said he remembered playing Santa once, years before, in the school his children attended. He seemed to remember everything about it. He said he went from class to class with a bundle of small gifts, one for each student and teacher. He said it had been a proud day for him, as well as a happy one. His children, he said, talked about it for years, as did his wife.

He said nothing else about his family. There were photos on a credenza of two girls and a thin woman, but there was nobody else evident in the house and the old man indicated he had lived alone for years. Not until now have I wondered what happened to them.

As Danny and I left the old man offered more candy and told us to come around more. Then, I recall, he wondered hopefully if our school ever needed a Santa Claus.

I said no, because there was a fat kid in our class who played the part each year. The man nodded. He watched us leave the porch and closed the door.

In the street Danny slowed up. He was still smirking. He picked up a rock and threw it at the old man's roof. I called him a name for it; then we got out of there as fast as we could.

We sold no more subscriptions that night. I never saw the old man again. After that I stopped playing with that nincompoop Danny.

Christmas Eve theater holdup

MONTCLAIR — A Christmas Eve gunman corraled the manager and four employes into the office of the Montclair Theatre, 4377 Holt Blvd. about 3:45 p.m. Monday, took $230 in bills from the office safe and ticket booth, and fled in a San Bernardino station wagon taxicab.

The Montclair Police Department received a call about the holdup about 4:05 p.m. The holdup man, a Negro, 25, 165-170, with a 1-inch Afro, cut the phone lines in the theatre, and told his victims to stay there 25 minutes. They complied.

Police Sgt. Clyde Graham recalled seeing the taxicab about the time of the holdup at Holt Boulevard and Ramona Avenue, but he was not alerted to the robbery until he was at Montclair Plaza.

Girl, 3, overcome by smoke but saved

ONTARIO — A 3-year-old Ontario girl was enjoying her Christmas this morning after a brush with death Saturday night.

Little Michelle Caldera, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Caldera of 1152 Caroline Court, was overcome by smoke Saturday night about 10:30 p.m. when a nightgown draped over a lamp in her bedroom caught fire near her bed as she lay sleeping, firemen said.

As Michelle lay semi-conscious her two baby sitters, 12 and 13, smelled smoke and ran next door to the home of Mrs. Barbara Hebert of 1143 E. Caroline Court and asked for help.

Mrs. Hebert called the Ontario Fire Department and then ran next door to get Michelle out of her bedroom. When firemen arrived Michelle was lying on the front lawn barely breathing with Mrs. Hebert trying to comfort her. Firemen administered oxygen to the little girl and went inside the home to douse the fire in the bedroom.

Fire inspectors said the little girl had apparently draped a nightgown over a bare lightbulb when she went to bed, unknown to the baby sitters. A short time later the nightgown burst into flame and fell, igniting the floor covering. Fire inspectors said the two young baby sitters did exactly what was right. They got out of the house immediately and summoned help.

Mrs. Hebert was able to get the little girl out of the bedroom before the fire spread. Firemen said damage to the bedroom was estimated at $100 with damage to its contents listed at $25.

Ontario pair robbed driving into garage

ONTARIO — Police Monday continued their search for three men, one armed with a shotgun, who robbed an elderly couple of a small amount of cash and some jewelry in a garage at 406 E. Sunkist St., Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Walter McCurdy, both in their 80s, told police they drove their car into their garage about 6:42 p.m. Sunday. They were followed by a man carrying a shotgun with a white stock.

The McCurdys said the man pointed the shotgun at them and took their valuables in a wallet and a purse. The robber ran out of the garage and got into a car parked on the street. Two other men were inside of the car, the McCurdys auto.

The robber was described to police as a Caucasian, 35, 6 feet, wearing a wide-brimmed hat and a dark jacket. The McCurdys could not describe the other men in the car.

Walnut to get report on park plan

WALNUT — The City Council will receive the final feasibility report on the proposed Winnett Ranch park project Wednesday at its 8 p.m. meeting at City Hall.

The proposed plan calls for the creation of an 80-acre natural park with hiking and riding trails, picnic areas and other facilities. Funding for the project, estimated at about $700,000, would require passage of a municipal bond proposal.

The feasibility study has been put together by Lampman and Associates of Pomona.

Other agenda items for the meeting include a public hearing and final council consideration of the Environmental Resources Mangement Element (ERME), which includes the city's conservation, open sapce and recreation plans.

Drivers help selves at open pumps

ONTARIO — Gene Tennis, the owner of a Texaco Service Station at Euclid Avenue and Mission Boulevard gave a little more for Christmas than he intended to Sunday.

Police said one of Tennis' customers called the police station about 10:04 a.m. to report that he had followed another car into the service station and started to fill up his tank with gasoline when he noticed the station was closed. The customer said he saw the man in the other car before him fill up his tank and leave.

Tnenis checked his pumps Sunday and discovered that 187 gallons of gasoline had been pumped out.

Auto repossession ends up in fracas

ONTARIO — A tow truck operator attempting to repossess a car for a West End bank was injured Sunday when the irate former owner of the vehicle jumped onto the moving tow truck and hit the driver with a wrench, police reported.

Police said the tow truck driver, Robert Cohen, 21, of Montclair, temporarily lost control of the truck and scraped the side of a Southern California Edison pole. The guid wire on the Edison The guide wire on the Edison er of the car, Frank Leon Williamson, 28, of 1145 W. I St., off the side of the tow truck and knocked him unconscious.

Police said Cohen and an Ontario Bank of America employe, Bruce David Chase, 21, went to repossess the car at Williamson's apartment about 11:06 a.m. Sunday. The two men put the car on the tow truck hook and began to drive away when Williamson suddenly ran out from the apartment complex garage and jumped on the side of the truck, ordering Cohen to stop so he could get his personal belongings out of the car. Cohen contisued to drive and Williamson allegedly grabbed a star wrench from the bed of the tow truck and began hitting the side window.

Police said that the wrench broke the window, and hit Cohen in the neck. Cohen lost controll of the truck and Chase grabbed the wheel. The truck hit the curb and the car it was towing scraped the side of the Edison pole. The Edison pole guide wire caught Williamson in the head knocking him from the side of the truck.

Police said both men were taken to Montclair Doctors Hospital for treatment. Williams was kept at the hospital overnight for observation and treatment for a head injury. Cohen was given first aid treatment for a neck injury and released.

Fuel priority requested for fishing fleet

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The state Fish and Game Commission has called on federal and state officials to give a high fuel priority to California's commercial fishing industry and commercial passenger fishing fleet.

In a resolution released Monday, the commission cited contributions of the fishing industry to the world's protein supply and the "efficient utilization of a renewable resource which cannot be stockpiled."

It said California's 5,000 commercial fishing boats produced an annual catch grossing more than $100 million at dockside and processing worth an additional $320 million.

The state's partyboat fleet of nearly 500 boats carries about 720,000 fishermen and generates $6 million yearly, the commission added.

Chino crash hospitalizes Ontario driver

CHINO — A 26-year-old Ontario woman was released in good condition from Chino General Hospital Monday with a leg injury suffered in a two-car collision at the intersection of Philadelphia Street and Central Avenue Saturday.

Patricia Ann Hargrove of 505 W. Ralston Ave., Ontario, was injured when her car, westbound on Philadelphia Street about 11:27 p.m. Saturday, collided broadside with another car southbound on Central Avenue. The driver of the second car, Ysabel Munoz, 15, of 1646 Farman Place, Pomona, was not injured.

Space going to work in next year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There won't be any manned space shots for the next year and a half, but the space agency plans to double its unmanned satellite missions in 1974 with the heaviest emphasis yet on practical work.

Twenty-six satellites are on NASA's schedule for the new year, the most since the 28 flights in 1967. Twelve of the upcoming launchings are for communications satellites and five are for weather watchers. Most again will go from Cape Canaveral.

There were 13 civilian shots in 1973, including the launch of the Skylab space station in May and three crews rendezvousing with it in May, July and November. The final three-man team of Skylab astronauts is scheduled to return Feb. 8 after spending a record 12 weeks in orbit.

If the current flight in the big orbiting lab goes as long as planned, the nine Skylab crewmen will have logged more than 12,000 man-hours in space —almost double the time recorded on 27 earlier spaceflights. But Project Skylab is conducting research for the future, while the 1974 unmanned missions will have a more immediate payoff.

Unless a Skylab rescue flight is required, the U.S. will not be launching astronauts again until July, 1975, when three Apollo pilots will go into orbit to rendezvous and dock with a two-man Russian Soyuz spacecraft.

The new generation space shuttle rocket plane will be making major headway on the drawing boards and in the test labs of many aerospace contractors, but it won't fly in space until 1979 at the earliest.

Besides the ongoing Skylab mission, NASA has three unmanned spaceflights carrying into the new year. The Pioneer 10 probe is now on its way out of the solar system after an historic flight past Jupiter Dec. 3, and a twin called Pioneer 11 is cruising to a February rendezvous with Venus and on to a March passby of Mercury.

There are several new scientific missions on the 1974 schedule, including an unprecedented German-American probe close to the sun, but the communications and weather satellites will be the big job of the year.

Three of the radio relay satellites will be the first designed solely to relay messages data and television communications within the United States. The first of these new relay stations, called Westar and owned by Western Union, is to be launched April 11 from Cape Canaveral.

Six other companies are moving into the domestic communications satellite business and tht outlook appears unlimited. NASA's role is limited to launching and initial tracking services, for which it is reinbursed.

"You can get a feeling for the potential of the newly instituted domestic satellites by looking at current revenue of telephone, radio and TV which is about $18 million a year," said Nasa administrator James C. Fetcher.

The International Telecommunications Satellite Consortium (INTELSAT), of which America's Comsat Corp., is the principal partner, is the pioneer in the commercial satellite business and now has an annual revenue of $260 million and a global network of satellites.

Three more large INTELSAT 4 satellites are scheduled for launch in 1974 from the Florida spaceport. One is to go into a 22,300-mile high stationary orbit Jan. 30, the other two are set for flight in June and August.

In addition, Comsat is having two new satellites built to relay communications from ships at sea to all sides of the oceans. They are called Marisats and will be leased by the U.S. Navy at first and later used for commercial maritime traffic. The first Marisat is set for launch in September, with the second to fly two months later —both from Cape Canavral.

NASA also will launch two Skynet 2 military communications satellites for Great Britain on Jan. 17 and in June. And the agency plans to orbit an experimental applications technology satellite in

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

Howard Hughes was named to the 1973 Aviation Hall of Fame. In 1935, Hughes set a world's speed record of 352 m.p.h. for land aircraft in a plane he designed and manufactured, The World Alamanac recalls. In 1937, he set a new transcontinental record of 7 hours and 28 minutes. In 1938, Hughes and four assistants made a record round-the-world flight in 3 days, 19 hours and 8 minutes.

April that, among other things, will beam educational television to remote areas in the United States.

The last launch of 1974 is scheduled to be the first flight of a new experimental communications satellite, Symphonie, built by France and West Germany.

Three of the five weather satellites on the 1974 launch schedule will be new type spacecraft designed to soar into stationary orbits where each will be able to maintain a constant watch on the clouds over one third of the globe.

Like the communications satellites, they take advantage of the phenomenon whereby the orbital speed of a satellite 22,300 miles high matches the rotation of the earth—thus the satellite remains over one point.

NASA also will launch an operational, lower altitude weather satellite for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) in July from the west coast space center at Vandenberg AFB, Calif. An advanced, experimental Nimbus weather satellite also is set for launch from California in June.

The only experimental rocket flight is set for Jan. 24 from the Cape when a combination of the Air Force's triple-barrelled Titan 3 and NASA's Centaur upper stage will be test flown into orbit. This Titan-Centaur is scheduled to launch Viking Mars landing craft in 1975.

Two of the 1974 launchings will be carried out Jan. 30 and in April by Italian engineers from the Indian Ocean firing platform called San Marco, off the coast of Africa. U.S.-built Scout rockets will orbit scientific satellites built by Italy and Britain.

Returns stolen drill with $20 for 8-year use

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Police got a package in the mail recently and thought it was a bomb.

Demolition experts found there were no explosives in the box but there was an electric precision drill along with a $20 bill.

A letter with a return address of L. W. Montgomery, Route 1, Landis, Tenn., explained that a drill was stolen from a construction project here eight years ago and the sender wanted it returned with interest for use.

Police said they did not know what to do with the drill and they were not planning to question Montgomery.

Casino device spots cheaters

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — A computer device to stop slot machine cheaters by sounding an alarm or stopping the machine will get a trial run in a Las Vegas casino.

A 60-day trial for the device at the MGM Grand Hotel was approved recently by the state gaming commission.

Cheaters bilk Nevada slot machines of $10 million a year, using everything from gum wrappers to hairpins, the commission was told. But the new device will spot any irregularity in a machine and ring a bell or lock the "one arm bandit," an electronics expert said.

Arab action has Europe, Japan limp

By United Press International

By United Press International

The decision by the Persian Gulf oil producing Arab countries to double the price of petroleum brought more dismay Monday to a world already hard hit by Arab cutbacks of oil production. The Tokyo stock market fell and there were predictions of widespread unemployment in Europe.

There were warnings throughout Europe of sharp increases in the price of gasoline, and French economists predicted it would go to $2 a gallon. Venezuela hinted it would follow the lead of the Persian Gulf states, which would increase the price of gasoline in the United States.

Indications were that the Arab use of the oil weapon against nations considered too friendly to Israel might be extended. Ministers of the Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries (OAPEC) met in Kuwait to consider further steps against the west and the Kuwaiti Oil Minister said the squeeze would go on.

Britain already was putting industry on a three-day workweek, and political sources said in London Monday that doubling of oil prices was a serious blow to Britain's program to hold down prices and curb inflation. It also will worsen Britain's serious balance of trade deficit. Experts estimate it will add up to $2.5 billion to Britain's import bill and raise gasoline prices by 18 cents a gallon from the current range of 95 cents to $1.10.

Oil-starved Japanese began selling cars, stocks and the national currency Monday following the decision taken Sunday in Tehran by the six Persian Gulf oil states to double oil prices. The Tokyo Stock market plunged and the average of 225 industrial stocks dropping more than 106 points to 4,028 during a two-hour morning session.

Japanese motorists were warned the price of gasoline soon might rise to $1.68 a gallon and many said they would put their cars up for sale. The price of the Japanese yen also dropped in relation to the American dollar anl the Bank of Japan was forced to intervene to hold it at 200.

The energy crisis was so bad in Japan that a commercial bear farm on Japan's northern island of Hokkaido announced it would have to kill 55 of the beasts because protective devices to keep them from escaping depended on fuel oil.

Frenchmen, assured on several occasions that France would remain a "privileged country," stared in disbelief at the Monday headlines. Economists predicated the rise would add another 2 per cent to France's cost of living, already rising at 12 per cent a year. The newspaper France-Soir said the oil rise would cost another $4 billion—five times France's balance of payments excess, half of its monetary reserves and half of the national education budget for 1974.

Adolf Hallmann, president of the West German oil industry, warned that motorists must be prepared to pay up to $1.60 a gallon for gasoline, a rise of 15 to 20 per cent. He predicted industrial costs would rise up to 25 per cent and that West Germany's Gross National Product growth rate might reach zero.

South America also was hit by the oil shortage but it is summer in the southern hemisphere and there is less of a heating crisis. Argentina was blacked out in many areas Sunday night but the government pledged there would be lights for Christmas Eve.

In New Delhi a Planning Commission official said the rise of crude oil prices could wreck India's five-year plan before it gets started in April. India had planned to spend $667 million for oil but the price hike takes the amount to $1.33 billion.

Industry and government sources in Bangkok said the price increase would cost Thailand an additional $300 million annually and drastically affect the nation's economy. In Singapore, industrialists warned that prices could escalate and increase the dangerous level of the cost of living.

Denver hardest hit

Winter storms mar Yule

By United Press International

A full-blown winter storm left metropolitan Denver under snow drifts as much as 10 feet deep Monday and played havoc with Christmas Eve highway travel from the Rockies to the Great Lakes.

The Colorado capital's Stapleton Airport was virtually shut down. Snowplows gave up trying to clear two bogged eastwest runways until the wind died down.

Ambulances, police and fire vehicles were stuck along with private automobile traffic in Denver's 3 to 10 foot drifts. All major east-west highways in the area were reported closed, plows quit trying to operate in populous Jefferson County, west of downtown Denver, and in suburban Aurora the only police unit reported moving was a World War II tracked "Weasel."

The storm laid belts of snow and freezing rain eastward across the Plains and Midwest. Much of eastern Nebraska was coated with ice and the state highway patrol recommended motorists stay off the highways. State offices were ordered closed in Des Moines, Iowa, and ice buildups on electric lines caused power failures in several southeastern Iowa communities.

Ice blockages backed up water in sewers in Council Bluffs, Iowa. Semi trailer rigs were scattered along roadsides in western Iowa after they slid off the ice-glazed pavement.

An accident involving a semi-trailer truck and several cars blocked the westbound lanes of Interstate 80, a major coast-to-coast highway, between Waverly and Greenwood, Neb. Indiana State Police closed Interstate 65 at Lafayette when a one-inch layer of ice formed on the route linking Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville.

A double threat—a treacherous glaze on the highway and fog that cut visibility to 20 feet —slowed motorists in north central Illinois.

Farther south, rain was a boon to snow-bogged Effingham, Ill., and the St. Louis area. Temperatures were above freezing and the rain knocked a deep snow pack down to less paralyzing proportions.

Nine inches of snow fell at Grand Rapids, Neb., 3 to 8 inches bogged parts of Minnesota and Iowa and 5 to 12 inches hit Lower Michigan.

Death penalty, new speed limit, etc.

Many changes facing state in 1974

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Capital punishment will be reinstated, welfare grants will go up and the maximum speed limit will go down when hundreds of new California laws take effect New Year's Day.

Anticorruption measures prompted by Watergate, a bill requiring prices of the top 100 prescription drugs to be posted publickly, and legislation permitting less beer per bottle also will become law Tuesday.

Other bills range from designating the prehistoric sabre-tooth tiger as the official state fossil to granting women equal community property rights and credit opportunities.

The measures are the product of the first half of the new two-year, congressional-style legislature—which Asstmbly and Senate leaders have praised as highly successful. The second half of the 1973-74 legislature convenes Jan. 7.

Gov. Ronald Reagan signed 1,217 bills during 1973, and most of them take effect Jan. 1.

The maximum speed limit will be reduced from 65 miles an hour to 55 m.p.h. on New Year's Day under a bill by Democratic Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti.

The measure sped through the legislature during a December "mini-session" in reaction to the national energy shortage. It is expected to save 300 million gallons of gas annually.

Another law passed during the December session will provide hefty welfare increases to 500,000 blind, aged and disabled Californians.

Tye increase, averaging $38 per recipient, is coupled with a new federal law which will result in the Social Security Administration issuing aid checks to adult recipients from Washington starting Jan. 2.

The death penalty will be restored in California for 11 categories of murder under a bill by Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach. The restoration was authorized 14 months ago by voter passage of a constitutional amendment calling for the ultimate penalty. A spokesman for the state Department of Corrections said the apple-green San Quentin gas chamber has been maintained in working condition and is ready for use at any time. However, he said there are no plans to institute another "death row"—at least for a while.

Some 105 prisoners were on "death row" awaiting execution when the state Supreme Court ruled in February, 1972, that capital punishment was unconstitutional. A subsequent U.S. Supreme Court ruling indicated the death penalty could be reinstated if applied on a mandatory basis.

Beginning next Tuesday, capital punishment will apply to hired assassins, police slayers, life-term convicts who kill guards, mass and repeat murderers, train wreckers, killers of witnesses to crime, and persons who commit murder during rape, robbery, kidnaping, burglary and lewd acts involving children.

Politicians will have to disclose more about their financial holdings to the public under two Watergate-spawned bills.

Already more than a dozen local officials have quit instead of complying with the new conflict-of-interest bill. A companion bill will require candidates in the 1974 elections to disclose more details on their campaign contributions and expenses.

Some 5,000 pharmacies in California will begin posting the prices of the 100 most widely used prescription drugs under another new law. The posters, prepared by the state Department of Consumer Affairs, will display the names and the costs of the drugs so consumers can compare prices more easily.

Beer cans and bottles will be alowed to contain less of the frothy beverage than their labels say they do under a new law by Assemblyman Ray E. Johnson, R-Chico.

The law permits beer containers to have only about 11 ½ ounces of the liquid when the label declares the contents weight 12 ounces. Sponsors said the law was needed because beer brewers' measuring machines are not accurate enough to measure any closer than that, and they otherwise would face harsh penalties.

Other new laws will:

—Impose strict new logging standards on the $1 billion-alyear California timber industry to protect privately-owned forests from massive overcutting. The compromise measure was passed after two years of bitter battling among environmentalists and timber men.

—Reduce the mandatory jail term for second drunk driving convictions from five days to two. Judges have been reluctant to impose the five-day sentence, contending it was too harsh.

—Create new penalties for health care violations in nursing homes.

—Require testing by the department of Health of all glazed ceramic products imported into California. The measure was passed two years ago but its impact was delayed until Jan. 1.

—Stiffen penalties for killing threatened wildlife ranging from the humpback sucker to the California Yellow-billed Cuckoo.

—Grant private duck clubs in Merced County a tax break on marshlands in an attempt to preserve the waterfowl habitat.

—Increase registration fees for commercially designed vehicles such as vans and pickup trucks.

Above adv for pw's Wednesday dec 26 and thereafter.

Connecting link

SKAGWAY, Alaska (UPI) — The Canadian government will complete the Carcross-Skagway highway with construction of 33.6 miles of road through the northeastern part of British Columbia.

The route is to be completed by 1976 at a cost of $10 million and will connect the Alaska portion built out of Skagway.

Nixon, Kissinger confer on Mideast

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon conferred with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger on the Middle East peace conference Monday and was expected to meet with him again today.

The diplomatic developments meshed with holiday festivities at the White House.

Kissinger, who returned Saturday from a 15-day tour of Europe and the Middle East, said his hour-long meeting with Nixon was a "full discussion of the Middle East," but he declined to comment further on the session. The White House also declined to give details of the first face-to-face conference the two have had since Kissinger returned.

As he left the White House and entered a waiting limousine, Kissinger told reporters he expected to meet with Nixon again today. He also said he has cancelled plans to fly to Acapulco, Mexico, for a two-week vacation "because I have much work to do' on the Mideast peace conference in Geneva.

Nixon meantime signed compromise legislation giving partial home rule to the District of Columbia.

Several other pieces of legislation, passed by Congress in the final hours before adjournment, awaited Nixon's consideration. They included a bill to hike Social Security benefits by 11 per cent in 1974, a $73.7 billion defense appropriations bill and authorization for a major job training program that includes provisions for unemployment caused by the energy crisis.

Legislation granting a near record $5.8 billion allocation for foreign aid and a proposal to merge seven bankrupt Northeastern and Midwestern railroads into one modernized rail system also await Nixon's consideration.

The Nixon family will gather at the White House Tuesday for a morning of gift-opening and traditional celebrations followed by a turkey feast. Both daughters, Tricia Nixon Cox and Julie Nixon Eisenhower, and their husbands, will be on hand.

There still was no word whether Nixon would go to Key Biscayne, Fla., for a work-play vacation through New Year's day.

Bridges on hand to salute 1st China-bound freighte

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The first ship carrying general cargo from San Francisco to China left port this week, following a salute from Harry Bridges.

Bridges, longshore labor leader whom the government once tried unsuccessfully to deport as a communist, spoke at a celebration in the crew's messroom aboard the MV Caspian Sea.

Standing under a portrait of Chairman Mao, Bridges spoke both as president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Association and as a member of San Francisco's Port Commission.

"It's a great day for our organization," he declared.

His hosts served Tsingtao beer and a Chinese soda pop that one reporter said tasted faintly of oranges.

An invitation to Bridges to visit the People's Republic of China was withdrawn after his union's newspaper printed articles that appeared unflattering to Peking.

The ship was loaded with cotton and aluminum ingots.

Reagan wishes Rocky success

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan considers New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller an "outstanding governor" with whom he has enjoyed working over the years.

Rockefeller resigned recentl yand said he wanted to continue his tasks with two commissions. Many viewed Rockefeller's move as the first step toward a bid for the 1976 GOP presidential nomination. Reagan whom many also consider as a potential candidate, made no mention later of any presidential possibilities for Rockefeller.

"Governor Rockefeller has been an outstanding governor and I have enjoyed working with him over the years."

"I wish him every success with his new commission and I'm sure his background and nor of New York will be of experience gained as gover-great help to him in this undertaking."

Non-Communist Asia in throes of rapid inflation

By ROBERT C. CRABBE

TOKYO (UPI) His modest income diluted by inflation, a sharecropper on a Malaysian rubber farm cuts down to two meals a day.

Chinese housewives, traditional guardians of their families' savings, swarm Taipei's stock markets, seeking growth stocks or windfalls to keep the buying power of the family capital intact.

Tokyo women watch the price of toilet paper rise from six cents a roll to 16 cents in three weeks. Each morning, they crowd around the doors of supermarkets just before opening time. When the doors open, the women charge in like football players to strip the shelves of the few available rolls.

The year 1973 already has brought the non-Communist countries of Asia the worst inflation since the early years after World War II. It claws greedily at the people's hard-won savings. In countries with delicately balanced economies such as South Korea it threatens a postponement of economic growth.

The situation was bad in 1972. It was growing worse this year, even before the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting · Countries (OAPEC) started a petroleum embargo Oct. 17 as a strategic weapon in the Middle East war.

Oil Embargo

All over Asia, the oil embargo will deprive manufacturers of the basic raw material for a while panorama of goods—stove oil, gas for cars, synthetic textiles, and anything made of plastic.

As a result, the curves of consumer prices grew steeper in almost every country in December. The few experts willing to talk about it had nothing to offer but gloom.

In Tokyo, Japanese Minister of International Trade and Industry Yasuhiro Nakasone coined a new phrase, "negative economic growth." In laymen's language, this meant that in 1974 for the first time since the war Japan's big industries might produce less than they had the year before.

In almost every country this year the cost of living increase has run far ahead of the interest paid ordinary people on their savings in banks. One of the few exceptions is Indonesia, where savers can get an astonishing 18 per cent for their money.

In Singapore, the official cost of living index rose from 121.72 at the end of 1972 to 150.4 in August of this year—a result of strikes that brought down the government of Thanom Kittikachorn Oct. 14. Almost all the strikes have resulted in pay increases.

The threat of social unrest also hangs over Japan. The Liberal Democratic Party (LDP), which has been in power since the late 1940s, has been slumping steadily at the polls in recent years, especially in big cities.

Facing a crucial election for control of the upper house of parliament next summer, LDP has been fearful of standing up against union demands for high wage increases. Japan's big unions won wage increases averaging around 20 per cent in the spring of 1973.

Goods Shortages

The goods shortages have beaten down the walls even in Asian countries that were notably successful in restraining inflation before.

Nationalist China held the cost of living increase to an average annual rate of 1.7 per cent a year from 1961-72. There is no official forecast, but informed people in Taipei think the inflation rate will be 10-20 per cent this year.

Country by country:

Nationalist China — "In order to combat the first notable inflation in years, housewives flock to stock markets to speculate in stocks," reports UPI Taipei bureau manager Shullen Shaw. "Every stock exchange is jam-packed with women, and sometimes you hardly find any men there at all. Many women go there before 7 a.m. with lunch boxes and their life savings to occupy the few available seats and operate all day."

The government is subsidizing some food staples such as imported soybeans, and is lowering taxes on flour, wheat and construction materials. Saudi Arabia so far has treated Taiwan as a friendly country, and not restricted oil shipments. The government hopes not to increase gasoline prices before July 1, 1974. Vegetables are up around 30 per cent this year, and synthetic textiles have posted price increases of 30 to 50 per cent.

Philippines — the rate of inflation was 14.6 per cent in 1971, 10.2 per cent in 1972, and 20.8 per cent for the first eight months of 1973, according to the Philippines Central Bank.

Cost of living

The price of clothing had risen 20.6 per cent by September. Food prices were up 19.8 per cent, with rice, sugar, coffee and cooking oil leading the way, reports UPI's Fernando Del Mundo.

Indonesia—The cost of living is expected to go up about 15 per cent this year. Thrift is still popular with the banks paying 18 per cent interest. Spiraling rice prices have been one of the biggest contributors to the cost of living increase for the last two years.

Singapore — Singapore's cost of living index rose from a 1960 base figure of 100 to only 113.6 in 1971, an extremely stable performance. The government is reducing tariffs on a wide range of foodstuffs and raw materials in an effort to take off the pressure, says UPI reporter Nepal Ghose.

Food prices are up about 20 per cent this year, with most of the increase coming in the last six months. Rice, pork, bread, milk, beef and mutton have led the way.

Thailand—Thailand's cost of living index has risen from a base of 100 in 1962 to 141.61 in December. Almost all of the increase has come in the last two years, says UPI reporter Sumalee Phithayakorn.

Rice Prices

Since 1972, the price of rice has virtually doubled. With the stern Kittikachorn regime gone, a new government is trying to draw up a constitution, and has not yet come to grips with the inflation problem.

Although rice prices are at record highs, Thailand is expected to export about one million tons of rice in 1974, to partly cover its serious balance of payments deficit.

South Korea—Flour, eggs and sugar have registered 20 per cent price increases this year, says UPI reporter H.C. Shin. The government does not publish a cost of living index.

However, there were many major increases in wholesale prices in 1972, and a large share of these were passed on to the consumer.

As a result of the oil embargo, the government allowed a 30 per cent increase in the wholesale price of oil products Dec. 4. This and other recent price increases are responsible for a rise of 11.5 per cent this year in the Korean wholesale price index.

Cold Korea

Korea, an industrial country without oil supplies of its own, has been hard hit by the Arab oil boycott.

In addition, it is the coldest country among Asia's non-Communist nations.

Malaysia—the country's Central Bank says the cost of living on the Malay peninsula rose seven per cent this year through September.

Malaysia has not been hit as hard as most countries, says UPI reporter Ratan Singh. The economic planning unit of the prime minister's office says that "subject to many uncertainties" there is reason to hope the increase will not be so steep in 1974 and 1975.

Price increases this year include rice and other cereals up 17.1 per cent, meat 11.9 per cent, and fruits and vegetables 12.9 per cent.

Rose Parade floats short-lived, costly

PASADENA, Calif., (UPI) — With an average, run-of-the-mill float costing around $22,500, the annual tournament of roses parade is big business in Pasadena.

Once a year the majestic floats come gliding along Colorado Boulevard, resplendent with exotic colors, blooming flowers and pretty girls. They are in their glory for the two-hour parade, are on display for two more days, and then they are gone.

And the work for next year's parade begins.

But getting a float into the parade is not easy. According to W. Reid Allen, Jr., float entries chairman, approximately 200 applications are received every year for the 62-float parade.

Most of the floats, Allen said, have been in previous parades and receive priority for permits. This year, he noted, there were only six openings for new entries.

Life size big red

One of the fortunate newcomers is a float sponsored by the Kentucky Derby, the city of Louisville and the state of Kentucky and features a life-size replica of super-horse Secretariat.

"We were very lucky to get a float in," said Linda Dozoretz, representing the Kentucky float. "There were a number of things in our favor. It was a centennial for the Kentucky Derby and it was the 200th birthday of Kentucky."

Miss Dozoretz said they began planning the float last February, getting artists' renderings and bids for construction. By June, most of the work on the float had begun.

Out of chicken wire, styrofoam, fiberglass and wood, the skeleton of what will soon be a moving flower garden began to form.

The life-size model of Secretariat was created in Canada by sculptor Robert Wakeford, using the horse's exact measurements. Every muscle, every tendon, Miss Dozoretz said, was made exactly to Secretariat's form.

Six float makers

Wakeford first sculpted the horse in a substance similar to styrofoam, then covered it with fiberglass. The model was then cut apart, shipped to Pasadena and reassembled on the float. The more than 5 feet high horse weighs only 15 pounds.

While the real Secretariat was retired to a stud farm, the model will find a permanent home in Kentucky's Churchill Downs Museum.

With six float-making companies for some 62 floats, one might say business is indeed blooming. Herrin and Preston, for example, are working on 13 floats, including Secretariat's.

According to Wayne Herrin, his company employs 18 persons for construction of the floats, including engineers, designers, architects, artists, sculptors and painters. Another 720 persons are hired to put on the flowers 48 hours before the parade.

Anything goes on the floats — as long as that anything is flowers. Floats may be covered in blooms, petals, stems or leaves. Chrysanthemums are the most common flowers, favored for their durability. Mums are usually cut about a week before the parade, while roses are cut the day before and must be kept in vials of water. Herrin said about 90 per cent of all the flowers come from California.

After the parade, the floats are on display for two days, and then are destroyed except for the chassis. And then the work begins for next year's tournament.

Managua, a year later: Rebuilding on same location

By LEONARDO LACAYO

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Howard Hughes was in seclusion on the tightly guarded seventh floor of the Intercontinental Hotel, which he and his aides occupied exclusively. Strongman Anastasio Somoza was preparing to retire at his suburban hacienda.

But countless Nicaraguans were sitting outdoors in the bright moonlight.

Not only was it a hot night but, between 11 p.m. and 11:30 p.m., two earth tremors had shaken the city, causing some nervousness and apprehension despite the general pre-Christmas gaiety which pervaded Managua.

Then, at 12:35 a.m., a year ago today, the first of three major earthquakes began to pulverize this Central American capital. After the second one, just one hour after the first, most of the city was reduced to a macabre pile of twisted rubble.

At least 10,000, possibly 12,000 persons died in the quakes. An exact and final figure will never be known.

Another 20,000—including this correspondent—were injured as walls and ceilings fell, and roads and streets buckled, cracked and dropped into blackness.

More than 60,000 homes and buildings in a 600-block area covering 16 square miles of the heart of the city were destroyed or damaged beyond repair. Consequently, 300,000 persons were homeless. There was no electric power, telephone or water and most of the city's sewage system was ruptured.

Thus, for the second time in 41 years Managua was destroyed by earthquakes. On March 31, 1931, the city had also been leveled.

An estimated 1,000 persons died and 5,000 others injured in 1931, and there were immediate demands that the capital be moved. But after the initial clamor faded the city was rebuilt on the same site—only to be destroyed anew in 1972.

Now, Managua—like an adamant Phoenix—is going to rise once again across the same quake-prone territory.

Which poses this question: are Managuans so addicted to this spot, the nation's capital since 1851, that not even two catastrophes in less than half a century—and the advice of some geologists—can persuade them to move?

The answer is a qualifed yes.

As the 48-year-old Gen. Somoza explains it, one of the basic factors involved in the decision to rebuild the city here is the astronomical cost required for a transfer elsewhere.

Even more important, he said, is the fact that while Managua will stay where it is, the plan for rebuilding the capital—devised by earthquake savvy Mexican experts—envisions a major restructuring of the whole city to make it far less vulnerable.

For example, the area of the city traversed by four major quake "fault" lines will be forbidden to any construction, he said. Instead, broad boulevards—at least 120 feet wide— will dominate that supersensitive zone. It also will be embellished with parks, gardens, and other nonhousing developments.

Ex-President Somoza, commander of the Nicaraguan National Guard, is chairman of the National Emergency Committee, which has directed all post-quake operations including planning for the future.

Part of those plans call for the construction of 10 satellite cities (ciudadelas), each capable of housing 60,000 persons, around the periphery of the capital. Each will have its complex of public buildings as well as commercial zones.

Reconstruction of Managua is expected to get under way early in 1974, Somoza said. It will take between five and seven years, according to present estimates, and require at least $500 million.

How this is to be financed has not yet been spelled out. Scores of nations poured huge supplies or relief after the quake. The United Nations reported that 62 countries had donated total of $8.6 million within six months of the disaster.

The United States sent $27 million, including food supplies and emergency housing within only 90 days of the catastrophe. This included a "program loan" of $15 million covering hospital construction, rubble removal and water and sewer repair. Help from private U.S. volunteer agences added several million dollars more.

But a year after the tragedy, the job of demolishing unsafe buildings and clearing rubble is still unfinished.

Of the 600 blocks hardest hit by the quake, 400 have been cleared at a cost of $7 million of the $15 million loaned for this purpose from Washington. The remaining 200 blocks are expected to be swept clean by next May.

Not only will rebuilding in this 600-block zone be subject to especially rigid quake-resistant codes, but the area itself is being allocated for construction of important government buildings that will blend with private housing in which "both the rich and poor" will mix in a special planning pattern, according to Somoza.

Somoza was the only Nicaraguan known to see and speak to Howard Hughes during the mystery billionaire's stay of several months in this country.

After the quakes battered the city, Hughes fled from the isolated protection of the seventh floor of the Intercontinental Hotel, a pyramid-like eight-story structure which was badly damaged but which survived the catastrophe.

Somoza recalled, with some irritation, that Hughes never returned to Managua since the quake. He commented:

"Hughes always talks of money, but in the hour of our greatest need he forgot all about us."

Since last Dec. 23, Managua has, in fact, felt more than one thousand earth tremors including a particularly strong one last March 31. Coming on the 42nd anniversary of the 1931 quake, it provoked widespread panic among the populace.

But they remain and look forward to a new hopefully earthquake proof Managua.

Junior college has its own air force

ST. GEORGE, Utah (UPI) — Many a banana republic probably wishes it had an air force the size of the one owned by Dixie College.

The small unior college in southern Utah boasts six propeller driven airplanes—including a 20-passenger DC3. The "Rebel Air Force" —as it is known on campus—also has a jet fighter and a helicopter.

The planes, mostly U.S. Air Force surplus property, are used in flight training and aircraft maintenance classes at Dixie College.

Only four planes in the "Rebel Air Force" actually fly. They include two Cessna single engine 150's, a twin-engine Cessna 310 and the twin-engine DC3.

An F86 Sabre jet, a Bell 47 helicopter, an old fabric-wing military spotter plane and a twin engine C45 Beechcraft do not fly, but are used extensively in aircraft maintenance and repair classes.

Dixie, one of the smallest colleges in Utah with only 1,000 students, is the only college in the state to offer flying classes as part of its regular curriculum.

It is one of two schools in Utah to offer training for an aircraft mechanics license. The other is Utah State University, where many Dixie College students finish their education.

The Dixie aero technology program is run by Garn O. Huntington and V. Lowell Hansen, both avid aviators. Both teach the maintenance classes, which prepare students for a Federal Aviation Administration license, and Hansen teaches flying classes and also serves as pilot for college administrators, who use the Cessna 310 for business trips.

"It's one of the best places in the world to learn to fly," says Huntington. "We have good flying weather 360 days a year."

Huntington said the flight school got its start with the private "Desert Wings Flying Club" in St. George.

The club bought the two Cessna 150s with their own money, but found they were difficult and expensive to maintain. The group then donated the plates to the college and became a campusassociated organization.

The next plane to join the college air force was the twinengine Cessna.

"It was Air Force surplus," said Huntington. "They donated it to us on the condition we recondition and repair it so it would pass FAA standards."

The Air Force also gave Dixie the Korean War vintage Sabre jet, the helicopter, the old Stinson spotter plane and the Beechcraft.

"We have the students tear these planes down and rebuilt them," said Huntington. "All are in working condition, but are not certified to fly."

The latest addition to the flight line was the DC3, donated by the Georgia Air National Guard.

"They flew officers and occasionally the governor in it," Huntington said. "IT is absolutely immaculate. It was like getting a Cadillac with 150 miles on it."

The DC 3 will also be used in the maintenance classes and eventually, Huntington hopes, for flying lessons.

"It will really be something for someone just starting as a pilot to be qualified for a plane of that class," he said.

Huntington also has a "nice array" of jet engines and other aircraft systems, including almost a complete set of parts for a B52 bomber, thanks to the military surplus people.

"We built our engines for training literally out of junk heaps," he said.

About 20 students are now enrolled in the aircraft program, and Huntington claims his graduates now work in airports from coast to coast.

Pilot union chief flays UAL cutback

CHICAGO (UPI) — An official of the Air Line Pilots Association has accused United Air Lines of taking advantage of the national energy crisis to cut back on flights and personnel and increase profits.

Capt. William E. Arsenault, chairman of the United Pilots' Association Master Executive Council, said that United Air Lines "may well have formulated its plans to furlough the employes prior to President Nixon's speech on the fuel crisis.

United announced that starting Jan. 7, 1974, 100 flights would be canceled and 300 pilots and 650 cabin attendants would be furloughed "to meet the fuel shortage."

Arsenault said the association planned no retaliatory action immediately, but that it would "take a close look at the situation to determine whether all the furloughs were truly necessitated by the fuel shortage or whether other factors played a part."

Memorial medal

AUSTIN, Tex. — Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson has accepted the first silver medal commemorating the United States' 200th anniversary.

Mary T. Brooks, director of the U.S. mint, said the LBJ Library was selected to receive the first medal because Johnson was President when the American Revolution Bicentennial Commission was created in 1966.

Mrs. Brooks said the next five medals will be presented during October to the John F. Kennedy Library, the Dwight D. Eisenhower Library, the Harry S. Truman Library, the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, the Herbert Hoover Library and to President Nixon.

Richardson cites 'ugly view of power abuse'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former Attorney General Elliot Richardson said that the country has "caught an ugly glimpse of the abuse of power" since the Watergate scandal was uncovered.

"Behind the layers of secrecy successively peeled back by persistent investigation we caught an ugly glimpse of the abuse of power," Richardson said. "It has been a frightening glimpse."

Richardson spoke at a Hotel Pierre dinner sponsored by the Appeal of Conscience Foundation. Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York and builder William Levitt were presented with the foundation's annual "Man of Conscience Award."

Richardson, who resigned rather than comply with President Nixon's order to dismiss ex-special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox, stopped short of attacking the President.

He said Nixon was "ill-advised," but added that the President "certainly is a man of conscience."

In that case flag stamps are available

NEW YORK (UPI) — Big city vignette:

Elderly lady, at stamp window of post office: "Fifty 8-cent stamps, please — the ones with the American flag."

Clerk: "Don't have any flags right now, but here's 50 8-cent stamps. What's the difference?"

Elderly lady: "Most of my mail goes to relatives in Poland. I want them to see the flag that has done 'so much for me."

Clerk: 'Wait a minute. ("Hey!" — to clerk at next window — "got any flag stamps?") "Here you are lady 50 flag stamps. Thank you."

Missionary doctor in Thailand has an unorthodox background

By ROBERT KAYLOR

PUA, Thailand (UPI) — After several years as a missionary, Garland Bare decided he could not stand by helplessly as witch doctors rubbed buffalo dung in the wounds of mountain villagers and caused them to die of blood poisoning.

So he began to teach himself the rudiments of elementary medicine and eventually returned to college at the age of 33 to become a doctor.

That was 10 years ago. Today, Bare presides over a small hospital in this north Thailand town.

The concrete building usually has double its capacity of 14 patients on the rolls and could only be described as primitive by Western medical standards.

But it gets the job done and Bare is proud of it. "I would be appalled at the conditions if I walked in as a doctor straight from the United States," he says, "but we manage to do everything here except brain and open heart surgery."

Born in Tibet

Bare's family comes from Lincoln, Neb. But he was born in Tibet to missionary parents who were the only Westerners allowed in the interior region of the Himalayan country. The rest of his life has been just as unorthodox.

He was a college dropout and an atheist for a time before becoming a believer again and getting a degree in theology and linguistics. He is also a rare missionary who rejects the teachings of organized faiths, thus cutting himself off from their financial support.

"I have found that the established Christian denominations do not have much in their teachings for the Asians in underdeveloped countries to relate to," says Bare. "You have to stop telling people that love alone conquers all, because it doesn't."

Bare has developed a simple and direct version of Christian doctrine that he can put across in the dialects of the Meo and Yao hill tribes of the area.

He relies for support on what he describes as "a few independent free-thinking churches in the United States" and also gets financial aid from U.S. Air Force units based in Thailand, a source some missionaries would shun.

Full schedule

An intense person, Bare manages to find time to maintain a full schedule at his hospital, operate a hostel for hill tribe students who attend the district school here, walk the steep mountain trails on weekends to conduct church services, run an antimalaria campaign in remote villages, give driving lessons to young tribesmen so they can get jobs as truck drivers, and scrounge medical supplies from various sources to supplement the meager $500 a year budget for drugs he is allotted by the Thai government.

The hills around Pua are the domain of Communist-led hill tribe guerrillas, but in his 18 years in the district Bare has become a respected figure to the tribesmen and can go alone to areas where troops can't.

"My work with the tribesmen is aimed at educating them and then bringing them back to work with their own people," says Bare. "I would like to see them keep their tribal identities and customs. Perhaps I feel that way because my grandfather was an American Indian."

Although he feels the work he started here in the early 1950's is unfinished, Bare plans to leave Thailand for good early next year. His young daughter is a victim of cerebral palsy, and the only place she can get the necessary medical treatment and therapy is the United States.

Despite the occasional conflicts, Thai government officials say they will be sorry to see Bare go.

"We have started looking for a replacement for Dr. Bare at the clinic," says a health official from the provincial capital, "and we have not yet figured out what we will be able to do. He will be a very difficult man to replace."

3,000-YEAR-OLD MYSTERY SOLVED — A team of scientists has disclosed it has solved the puzzle of the origin of the Colossi of Memnon near Thebes in Egypt. Using some of the most modern scientific processes, the group determined that the statues were brought up the Nile from near Cairo, more than 420 miles away. Each statue weighed 720 metric tons and towered 47 feet above the pedestals they rested on. Here the group measures one of the two huge monuments to King Amenhotep III.

Priceless treasures

China sitting on huge archaeological finds

By GREGORY JENSEN

LONDON (UPI) — All around it are priceless treasures, the riches of ancient China. But one of the most thought-provoking exhibits in London's current Peking-sponsored show of Chinese antiquities is a photograph of a hill.

"This mound covers the tomb of the Chin Emperor Shih Huang Ti, the unifier of China," the picture's label says. This emperor, who died in 202 B.C., is the one who built the Great Wall of China.

"Incredible treasures are recorded as being buried with Shih Huang Ti" within this huge mound, surrounded by a mile-wide wall. Yet, the label says, "so far archeologists have not excavated it..."

This is a little like knowing the precise location of Troy, or Egypt's Valley of the Kings, and leaving them untouched.

Dig they must

China holds unnumbered Troys, still untouched. Seven thousand unbroken years of history have honeycombed China's soil with equivalents of many Valleys of the Kings, and most still await the archeologist's spade.

One lesson of the current Peking exhibit is the staggering number of discoveries made in the last 25 years. Another lesson is how many are still left to be made.

"The Chinese are in no hurry," said a British Broadcasting Corp. (BBC) reporter after visiting Shi Huang Ti's untouched burial mound. "They know how much still lies underground. They can afford tto wait."

They have waited a long time. A strange combination of circumstances has kept them waiting, and has kept China the richest archeological trove on earth.

The Chinese have always built of wood, and palaces and temples burned or crumbled. Civil disorder and dynastic wars scattered and destroyed the great Imperial collections. With few exceptions, almost nothing ancient remains above ground in China.

Tomb furnishings

But under the ground are numberless tombs, stuffed with unimaginable riches. The Chinese furnished their dead with everything necessary or desirable in life. Sometimes actual belongings were buried with the dead; sometimes mere funerary models were buried— exquisite works of art representing servants, musicians, horses, houses.

And once buried, the dead stayed buried. The ancient Chinese believed death was merely prolonged sleep.

The dead still owned their houses and lands, and might reclaim them at any moment. Excavation disturbed their slumber, and the very stability of the world depended on the ancestors sleeping on.

Thus serious archeology remained unknown. Only irreverant tomb robbers pilfered tombs to furnish Western museums. A few Westerners tentatively began scientific archeology in the 1920s, but the Japanese war and then China's civil war cut that short.

But with the Communist takeover of 1949 the waiting ended. Archeology simply exploded. Discoveries came faster than people could properly dig them up. Hundreds upon hundreds of sites are now known but not yet touched.

Imperial riches

Emperor Shih Huang Ti's mound tomb is one. Another is the double tomb of Empress Wu, who hacked her way to power in the 8th Century and then ruled supremely well, and her overshadowed emperor-husband.

Since 1950 alone, writes John Hay in "Ancient China," a book just published to coincide with the London exhibition, more than 400 Stone Age sites have been located in just one river valley. One of them measures more than a million square yards.

Every one of the 385 exhibits in the current show was discovered in the last 25 years. Many of the most spectacular were found less than five years ago.

"Every month brings news of new discoveries in widely separated parts of the country," reported David Bonavia, Peking correspondent of the London Times.

The latest spectacular find was announced in October—20 tombs dating as far back as 770 B.C. with what the Chinese news agency called "many rare historical treasures."

Keep the nose moist to break bad habit

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Can you explain what causes a person to pick his nose? We are all made alike. Some people do it and some do not. I was always taught not to, but to use a handkerchief or tissue. I never found my husband doing it until lately, and it not only distresses me, but I find it a disgusting habit. I have dropped a couple of hints, in fact came right out and said "he never used to do it." But he continues to do it, and I find it hard to respond to an embrace a short while afterward.

DEAR READER — It can be a nervous habit. Another problem that is frequently a factor in this habit is the dry nose. This happens to some people as they get older. The normal moisture of the lining of the nose dries out.

When the dry nose is the problem, a good idea is to place a small amount of petroleum jelly in the tip of each side of the nose each morning. You can use a coton swab to put the small amount of lubricant in. Press the nostril shut on each side to help spread the lubricant around. This will serve as a moisturizer and keep the skin from getting dry and irritating the person. It will also help to prevent the formation of tight adherent crusts. Tell him "try it, you'll like it."

DEAR DR. LAMB — I find when running and needing wind, if I try nose breathing only, the nostril opening is not nearly wide enough. Will this change with more exercise? In winter if one nostril is stuffed with a cold, the other would not be adequate if I were to breathe more than usual. Is there a safe way to correct this?

DEAR READER — Most people who must breathe heavily or move a lot of air breathe through their mouths. Just watch the runners during competition. There is nothing wrong with this.

A lot of people have a nose that is more for decoration than functional purposes. That is too bad since the small hair structures in the nose help to filter the air and the nasal passages warm the air before it reaches the lungs.

If the air passageways are too narrow for reasonable breathing, it is possible for them to be increased in size by surgical methods. The septum between the two sides of the nose may need to be straightened or excess tissue in the passages removed.

5 tips for those who plan to drink and drive home

CLAREMONT — Don't take that "one for the road" if you plan to drive home.

But if you should, the California Highway Patrol urges you to observe these five rules for the drunken drivers.

—Carry a large amount of money, preferably in travelers checks. You will need this to post bail.

—Carry a toothbrush and any other toilet articles needed for a short stay in jail.

—Make arrangements with your boss to take a few days off to go to court. This will provide you ample time to explain to the judge why it is is all right to drink and drive.

—Start building your case now on what to tell your neighbors and friends when they read of your exploits in the newspapers.

—Cooperate with the officer that administers the sobriety tests, handcuffs you and transports you to jail. You and other citizens are paying him to keep the highways safe for driving.

Officials are estimating that 10,000 drinking drivers will be arrested during the Christmas and New year's holiday period.

This number of arrests would set an all-time record for the 10-day period said Lloyd Turner, chief of the state Office of Traffic Safety.

Highway patrolmen arrested 5,000 intoxicated drivers last year and expect to top that number this holiday period.

And with the arrests by local police agencies, the number should easily exceed 10,000 he added.

"The holiday campaign winds up a year in which the highway patrol raised its drunk-driving arrests by 20 per cent over last year and this is having an effect," said Turner.

"Unfortunately, even this pressure isn't enough. On the average to change much during the holidays.

"Arrests solve some of the problems but we won't see dramatic improvement until drivers make it a personal responsibility to drive only when sober."

Local highway patrolmen expect an increase in number of drunk-driving arrests, based on the 40 arrests made last weekend .

"Based on this, our total number of drunk-driving arrests for the 10-day period starting Dec. 22 should reach about 100," said Capt. W. C. Jones, area commander.

Officers recorded 75 such arrests during the same period last year.

Two area credit bureau officials receive awards

POMONA — Two officials at the Pomona Credit Bureau have been awarded certificates of merit by the Associated Credit Bureau, Inc., (ACB) for service to the individual consumer, the community and the credit industry.

They are Carl Neumeyer, manager, and Dianne Perry, assistant manager. The ACB is an international trade association which serves 3,400 credit bureaus and collection service members in the United States, Canada and several foreign countries.

"The standards of achievement established for this award exemplify the service provided by the Pomona Credit Bureau and also reflects an impressive performance in meeting community civic obligations," said John L. Spafford of Houston, Tex., ACB president.

Executives who earn the certificate of merit award are eligible to compete for the state leadership award to be presented next spring.

Jaycees planning awards banquet

POMONA — In conjunction with National Jaycee Week, Jan. 20 through 27, Pomona Jaycees will hold their annual Distinguished Service Award and Boss of the Year Banquet on Jan. 23 at Orlando's Restaurant at 7:30 p.m.

The recipient of the Distinguished Service Award must be a young man who has been actively involved in the community over the past year. He must be between 21 and 36.

Key Men and other awards will also be presented during the banquet. Steve Holmes and Tom Dreyer are chairmen for the project.

Valley car club has 5 winners

POMONA — Five representatives from the Pomona Valley's Uniques Car Club were winners in the first annual Autorama held recently at the Anaheim Convention Center. The program was sponsored by the Pick-Ups Limited Club.

The local winners were: Bill Nichols, a Pomona guest, 1929 Ford pickup, first place, pre-1934 closed pickup category; Bruce and Margaret McCoy, 1933 sedan, second place, street sedan category; Darold and Mae Wellbaum, 1929 roadster pickup, second place, fendered roadster pickup; Bud and Mickey Jackmon, 1921 roadster pickup, second place, non fendered roadster pickup category; and Ron and Sharon Foreman, 1932 coupe, third place, street coupe category.

Jr. high principal in Congress race

COVINA — Frank Cooper, a junior high school principal, has announced he will seek the Democratic nomination in the 35th Congressional District primary election next June.

Cooper, 42, said he plans to base his campaign on restoration of responsibility by public officials and showing the average citizen that members of government can care about their concern.

"Americans demand their representatives be people of integrity and honesty who are sensitive to the needs of the people," Cooper said. "I believe we need people in politics who care about this country, its people and its quality of life.

"Americans are deserving of better representation than they have had."

Cooper is a resident of Covina, and is principal of a Baldwin Park junior high school.

He has been active in community affairs, and is currently a member of the Los Angeles County Democratic Central Committee.

Cooper is the third Democrat to formally announce he will run for the 35th district seat. No Republican candidates have yet announced.

The newly reapportioned 35th district includes all of the Pomona Valley (with exception of Diamond Bar) and the San Gabriel Valley cities of West Covina and Covina.

Cal Poly professor predicts January beef shortage with price increase

POMONA — Consumers can expect a slight beef shortage and an increase in beef prices beginning the first of next year, according to Jack T. Gesler, professor of animal science at Cal Poly.

Gesler claims this shortage situation is the result of the government's ceiling on beef prices during the summer months of this year.

"Because of uncertainty during the price ceiling period, feed lots were putting cattle on substitute feeds which are cheaper than grain. When the ceiling was lifted, the cattle were put back on grain, but these cattle won't go to market until February or March."

Feed lots, basically hotels for cattle, held off slaughtering cattle during the price freeze, Gesler said. Once the freeze was lifted, cattle were put on the market, creating somewhat of a surplus. Consumers according to Gesler, also curtailed their beef buying habits to some extent.

This has all led to a situation which will culminate in a small shortage of beef in January, he said. The market should stabilize shortly thereafter, he added.

Gesler, who is also a consultant to the U.S. Feed Grain Council, points out that it requires about 1½ years from birth to the market place for a typical beef cattle. The cost to the feed lot is nearly 50 cents per pound.

Gesler said the average price hike per steer will be beween $60 and $70, or an average of 10 cents per pound at the wholesale level.

Problems in the beef market have occurred primarily due to the price freeze on beef while feed prices were allowed to rise, said Gesler. Feed prices have gone up close to 100 per cent.

"Right now," he said, "the price of beef in proportion to the price of feed is very good buy."

Gesler said an additional problem in the beef market is the change in beef-buying habits of the average American family. He finds that at the time of the beef price freeze and shortage period, the typical consumer turned to other foods as substitutes. But, Gesler feels, the amount of meat consumed is directly proportional to the disposable income of the family. "It may take six months to a year, but the market will stabilize." Gesler points out. "Our prices are still much cheaper than the rest of the world."

Council to study petitions for Kellogg access

POMONA — Petitions by residents for additional access to the Kellogg Park I tract will be considered by the City Council in the adoption of the city budget for 1974-75.

During the budget sessions, the council will examine the possibility of providing additional access by extending Orange Grove Avenue west from Ganesha Boulevard to Gleneagles Avenue within the tract.

The Orange Grove extension presently is included in a five-year capital street improvement program for 1976-77 construction, according to Public Works Director Ronald Kranzer.

The council could give the project higher priority and schedule the improvement for the 1974-75 fiscal year.

School accepting registrations for the spring semester

POMONA — Pomona Adult School will begin accepting spring semester registrations Jan. 2.

The office, on the main floor at 800 S. Garey Ave., is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

New classes being offered this spring include organic gardening, African art, pattern adjustment, advanced signing and communication for parents of deaf children, wood shop and ornamental iron work.

More than 50 courses will be offered during the semester.

Social Security office announces some changes

POMONA — The Social Security office here will start the new year with new office hours and different colored benfit checks.

Under the new schedule, the office will open at 9 a.m. instead of 8:30. It will continue to close at 4:30 p.m.

The change will allow employes to spend the first hour on training matters related to the new supplemental security income program and to clear up any work left from the preceding day, said Mrs. Lorraine Brannen, district manager.

"In this way, we hope to complete action on new claims as quickly as possible and get the process started for issuing checks without delay."

New gold-colored checks will be issued next month as payment for supplemental security income benefits.

The new program will provide benefits for the needy, disabled, blind and persons 65 and older. A single person may receive $130 a month and an eligible couple, $195 a month.

Green-colored checks are used to pay for retirement, survivors and disability insurance benefits.

The district office is at 445 E. Holt Ave.

YMCA starting swimming

POMONA — The Pomona Valley YMCA will be offering a variety of swim programs beginning in early January, including swim lessons for adults and preschool-aged children and swim-safety instruction for boys and girls.

Swim lessons for adults on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. will begin Jan. 7. Another class, for women only, will be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 10 to 11 a.m. The cost will be $1 for YMCA members and $10 for nonmembers.

Preschool aged children's lessons will be divided into mother-baby courses and a tiny tot program. The mother-baby sessions, for youngsters from three months to 3 years old, will be held on Mondays and Wednesdays at 10 a.m. and at 3 p.m. The tiny tot classes, for 3 to 6-year-olds, will meet on the same days at 9, and 9:30 a.m. and at 2:30 p.m. An additional class will be available at 9 a.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays. The cost for these classes, which begin Jan. 7 and 8, is $15 for 10 lessons.

The water-safety class, for boys and girls 12 and older, will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The class will run for five weeks.

For more information on the YMCA's swimming programs, persons may call 623-6433.

The Message

That small, faint voice you may have heard above the racket of the cash registers during the Christmas shopping rush was that of an infant hoping to be noticed amid the hurrying crowds.

Most people, if they listened, recognized the voice as that of the Christ Child, the Savior. His birth, His mission on earth, is what Christmas is all about.

For many others — or different religious persuasion, or lesser persuasion, or no persuasion — the voice may have had a different source.

But it was and is present nonetheless, and the message it speaks is the same for all men.

It is a message that echoes across the ages each year at this season — a message of hope, of belief in the essential worth of mankind, a rebounding faith that despite all the sorrow men visit upon themseleves they are learning little by little how to live in peace with one another.

It is a message that has been relayed from one disillusioned, frustrated, yet hopeful, generation to another, and will go on being relayed until the allotted time for man on this planet runs out.

Man today has quite a bit to say about how long or short that time will be. For in this century he has discovered the power that can either reduce civilization to savagery, if not wipe it out altogether, or elevate it to heights undreamed of.

Yet it is not that power that needs controlling. It is man himself, just as it has always been.

That is why the Christmas message is as live and pertinent and hope-refreshing today as it was when it was first heard 2,000 years ago.

There CAN be peace on earth, if men will but have good will. There ARE tidings of great joy, if men will but unclog their ears of the noise and confusion they surround themselves with.

We will listen, for a time. For a brief moment, we will believe.

Then we will forget. We will carefully store away the precious, perishable joy of the holiday and again put on the tired old cynicism and selfishness of the everyday world.

We will forget Christmas — until another year, when its undying message comes ringing back again, as new and fresh and real as ever.

Kent: do the times justify the means?

The horror of Kent State was frozen for all time in the photograph of an anguished girl kneeling over the body of one of the victims.

For many Americans, that one picture symbolized the tragedy far better than any amount of words could, as no doubt it will continue to do for every generation to come.

It also symbolized a much larger tragedy that befell America during the bitter years of the Vietnam war.

Many Americans forget, if they ever knew, that the girl in the picture was not a student at Kent or a college student of any kind. She was a 15-year-old runaway from Florida who happened to be on the scene at Kent State because, at that particular moment during those days when America seemed to be coming apart, that was "where the action was."

Now, after three years, a federal grand jury in Cleveland is looking into the killing of four Kent State students and wounding of 11 others by Ohio National Guardsmen, and "at long last," say the parents of one of the slain students, "there is hope that justice might be done."

Justice? Certainly, if evidence is disclosed indicating that some of the guardsmen conspired to fire indiscriminately into a crowd of students, those involved should be brought to trial. The photographic evidence alone strongly suggests that they were hardly in imminent danger from the students.

But this "evidence" seems inadequate to the larger questions involved.

Whether or not then Ohio Gov. James Rhodes acted wrongly in sending the National Guard to the campus, he was responding to the appeal of the mayor of Kent, whose city had for two days been in a state of turmoil, with bands of students — and nonstudents — rampaging both on the campus and in the downtown area.

The whole country was in turmoil in May 1970. Student demonstrators had shut down some 300 campuses in response to President Nixon's invasion of Cambodia. Antiwar people were taking the law into their own hands, and justifiably or not, were setting the stage for the kind of mindless tragedy that happened to take place at Kent State.

It is understandable that the parents of the slain students want to have the full truth establsihed about the immediate circumstances surrounding the killing of their children.

But to focus on the actions of the guardsmen alone, would be to ignore the long train of events — the rise of the youth culture and nomads, the runaways, the campus takeovers, the defiance of authority, the flirtation with revolution — the whole climate of the times which culminated in Kent State.

The guardsmen were the contemporaries of the students. What goaded them into such rash action? What caused them to look upon a distant, faceless crowd of students as the "enemy"?

Who are the guilty — only those who actually fired the rifles, or also those who contributed to a situation in which the need to restore order combined with human weakness or stupidity or fear to produce tragedy?

Questions like these will have to be asked, and answered, if we hope to achieve "justice" in the larger sense about Kent State.

Light Enough for Everyone

JACK ANDERSON

It's not merry Christmas everywhere

STRINGTOWN, Pa. — Velma Robinson isn't impressed with the plaints of people who have turned down their thermostats and shut off their Christmas lights to save energy. "I wonder," she mused, "how they would feel if they had lived without water for 20 years."

There was more resignation than indignation in her voice. For Mrs. Robinson and her neighbors have learned to live in homes without water, except for the rain they can trap and the wells they have dug.

If they want water to brew coffee, it takes more than a simple turn of the tap. They must walk to their cisterns or wells. They have learned to save the dirty water form their wringer washing machines for scrubbing floors. And it's a cold trudge through the snow to reach the outhouses behind most homes.

Yet Mrs. Robinson feels fortunate. Her sturdy, wooden home has a large roof, which catches more rainwater than her neighbors get. The water from the sky washes down the drainpipes through a sand-and-charcoal filter into a cement cistern.

Status symbol

Her husband Lloyd, like most of the menfolk in Stringtown, is a coal miner. He also built her an indoor bathroom, which has given the Robinson home a special status. The water is pumped into their house from the cistern.

Stringtown rises out of a rugged, wooded hillside and quickly slumps back into it. The homes are built in a string along the main street, an arrangement which apparently gave the town its name. There are no shops, except for a small beauty parlor which Annabelle Pratt operates out of her home down a dirt road from the old schoolhouse. The youngsters who used to study their ABC's in the single schoolroom have been replaced by a local hunt club, known as the Sportsmen's Club, which now meets there.

The town overlooks the Monongahela River, whose waters are so near yet so far away. The Riverside Boatel, a wooden hostelry built 129 years ago for the river runners, burned to the ground a few weeks ago. The $45,000 loss wasn't covered by fire insurance, because there are no fire hydrants in Stringtown.

The householders, if they want fire protection, must pay exorbitant rates — if they can get any insurance at all.

Hardy townspeople

Stringtown has 40 families, hardy folk, who depend largely upon the Buckeye Coal Company for sustenance. Of the town population, 18 are retirees and six are widows.

The Buckeye mine reopened only recently after a fire had closed it for two years. The fire damage, aggravated now by the intensified mining operations because of the energy crisis, threatens the town's tenuous water supply. Because of the excavations, cisterns are cracking and wells are drying up.

At the appeal of the townspeople, I sent my associate Bob Owens to Stringtown to listen to their complaints. Despite a snowstorm, more than 40 residents gathered at the schoolhouse.

One of widows, Sarah Sands, her years etched deeply in her features, said she "had no water all last winter." But now she has a cistern, which stores rainwater. However, she, like her neighbors, must buy trucked-in city water when rainfall is insufficient to fill their cisterns.

Dry periods

The beauty operator, Annabelle Pratt, invested $1,500 in a well. "In time, we'll lose it," she said, "because of the mining." Already, the well has dry periods. Then Mrs. Pratt borrows water from Mrs. James Deems, who lives across the road, and uses five-gallon water cans to give shampoos.

The townsfolk used to gather at the schoolhouse for community dinners, which were cooked in a kitchen off the schoolroom. But now the well has gone dry.

A member of the state legislature, Donald Davis, has been battling in vain for government funds to pipe in water. He reported to the assembled citizens that he had run into a "stone wall."

"Everybody here has pride in his property," he said. "They pay their taxes, but they aren't getting any help."

'Too rocky'

For two decades, the local Carmichaels Water Authority has contended that the terrain is too rocky to provide water. But the word that our representative was coming to Stringtown stirred the water authority into sudden action. The day before Owens' visit, the company offered a plan to provide water service and fire protection.

The estimated cost would be $200,000 — little more than President Nixon soaks the taxpayers for four flights to San Clemente. But the water authority can't afford to put up the money. "It would break us," a spokesman told Owens.

Becoming as little children

Phony Santa Clauses play "Jingle Bells" on Main Street cash registers. Women plow through department store basements like so many hammerhead sharks, shoving, wrecking, buying, stealing. A clerk says "Merry Christmas" as he shortchanges them.

A bum who smells bad is shaking a can on the street corners, begging alms for bread and buying booze. A dad takes his son on a drive into the snowy countryside and tramples his neighbor's fence to chop down his neighbor's tree so father and son can take it home and hang tinsel on it and gather the family around it and celebrate the birth of Him Who taught "Thou shalt not steal."

And they spell His birthday with an "X." Xmas. "X" marks the spot where humanity lies — steals. And Xmas morning the radio blares carols interrupted by news of murder, depravity, corrupt politics and "2,200 teenagers in one county pregnant last school term."

And in the din somebody is calculating how he can exchange a misfit gift and how much that crummy toaster cost in the first place and on every hand men proclaim "peace on earth." And there is no peace. So men of goodwill rush to open first the packages that gurgle, for Xmas is a dandy excuse for a drunken orgy.

But then somewhere, elsewhere, in an apartment apart or in a house at the end of a freshly swept walk, small children who should be sleeping fidget and peek and wonder what time it is; determined to stay awake until Santa comes — but they never can quite.

And it's still dark when they awaken and bound from the bed to the scrawny, lovely lighted tree and delightedly rip the wrappings from presents which aren't much: knit gloves, hand-knit, Mom's hands. The gadget from Santa's workshop you just thought you saw in Dad's workshop the week before. And in the stocking by the mantel an orange and some candy. Nowhere in the skies is there a light as in the eyes of a boy when he's 4 and it's Christmas. Spelled like Christ . . . mas.

Unless you become as little children you can never see what they see. They see the Kingdom on Christmas morning. In the child's eyes is reflected the long-sought light which first entered the world through the window of a stable. For in this house on this day are the gifts you cannot have until you give them away. In this house on this day are faith and hope and love.

Which is more important?

Everyone has been asked to dispense with the outside lighting of trees, homes, commercial displays and such in order to conserve energy. Many of the small towns have gone along with this suggestion, willingly, others have gone along with it bust most unwillingly.

The point is, you can't save energy in one direction to destroy that saving in another. You don't want to disappoint the children, that's what it's all about. Has no one thought about the disappointment when the last paycheck is brought in by the family breadwinner? Can't be, you say, Don't be so sure. The energy shortage stems from lack of oil. Oil is the base for many products we now take for granted. Have you not noticed a marked shortage in certain areas — resin by-products, plastics, all these things that go together to make the things one uses daily.

Cut off the supply at the ground and it works its way all the way up. No base to operate from, no products to manufacture, who needs the workers? Cut the factory force, next it's the administration of aforementioned factory. And you're wondering am I crazy; no, not really, I just see bleak days ahead, and far too many disappointed children in the future.

I read with utter disbelief, the little bit we're using can't make that much difference. So add all the little bits together, it's one helluva mountain. Is it worth it to have to do without a few lights now, in order to keep that family paycheck coming in a little longer? After all how much hunger later will lights that are turned on now assuage. Which then is more important, lights for the eyes to delight in, or food for the hungry later? Will lights outside on a tree keep you warm inside a cold house? Think people: Think. — Phyllis Hochfeld, Glendora.

Gossip for today

A lot of us older folks would like to follow Benjamin Franklin's advice: "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise." But so far as that route to health, wealth and wisdom is concerned, we are finding it one that day by day becomes increasingly difficult to live up to. The "early to bed" part is easy enough. In fact, we go to bed with the chickens. But it is the early rising that is getting us down. The truth of the matter is we get up so often during the wee small hours that we have to go back to bed and sleep until nine or ten in order to be able to make it through the rest of the day.

INSIDE REPORT

Rep. Mills sees his power eroded

By ROWLAND EVANS
and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Although a completely recuperated Rep. Wilbur D. Mills of Arkansas resumes full-time chairmanship of the House Ways and Means Committee in January, his once majestic authority has dwindled close to mortal dimensions — with scant chance for recovery.

With Mills convalescing since mid-August following back surgery, the revolution now leveling authority in Congress has caught up with the Ways and Means Committee and its awesomely prestigious chairman. Rep. Al Ullman of Oregon, acting chairman in Mills's absence, instituted democratic procedures to give individual members a voice in policy decisions.

Thus, the 25-member committee, intensely loyal to Mills for so long, is now overwhelmingly opposed to restoring his authority.

Given their taste of freedom, committee members will not relinquish it — though many concede the efficiency of the most important committee in Congress has been badly eroded by the new leveling. Mills, last of the postwar congressional giants, has had his chairmanship cut down to size. The Mills era, with the legislative master from Kensett, Ark., controlling key domestic legislatiion for more than a decade, is over.

Dispersal of Power

Besides his legendary legislative craftsmanship and political astuteness, Mills's unique power derived from absolute control over the committee. In 1958, his second year as chairman, he abolished subcommittees to gain that control. During the past four months, Ullman has restored them in embryonic form as "task forces." This dispersal of power is so popular among members that they would fight Mills to retain it.

Through "task forces" and other reforms, Ullman has ingratiated himself with committee members. When the Senate turned the Social Security bill into a "Christmas tree" loaded down with costly goodies, Ullman formally consulted his committee on what to do. In contrast, Mills would have informally consulted Sen. Russell Long of Louisiana, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Ullman's course guaranteed delay in passing the bill. Moreover, his tendency to compromise on every point diluted the foreign trade bill. Joining the rest of Congress, the Ways and Means Committee has become a markedly less efficient instrument as a result of reform. Nevertheless, even committee members who recognize this naturally prefer Ullman's permissive reforms to Mills's austere authority.

That's why Mills would face heavy going in any showdown over reform with Ullman, a showdown possibly presaged by cooling relations between them. Some committee members say Mills was not happy with an article in Dun's Review, containing lavish praise of Ullman by committee members. For his part, Ullman grumbled to members when Mills was issuing statements to the press about the trade bill from his Little Rock hospital bed while Ullman was grappling with the bill in committee.

Can't count on support

Thus, Mills can no longer count on unquestioning committee support. For years, Ullman himself was a loyal Mills lieutenant. Rep. Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois, once a Mills stalwart, enjoys the new freedom. Republican members confide they will not tolerate the old intimate working realtionship between Mills and Rep. Herman Schneebeli of Pennsylvania, the committee's senior Republican.

Even if Mills had not missed four months because of illness, erosion of his power seemed inevitable. House reforms now require open committee meetings and fewer restrictions on floor amendments to Ways and Means bills, undercutting the chairman's authority.

Moreover, the committee is facing two additional challenges to its primacy. The recommendations of a select committee headed by Rep. Richard Bolling of Missouri, long a rival and critic of Mills, would strip away much (health, welfare, foreign trade) of the vast Ways and Means jurisdiction and limit it largely to tax legislation. Simultaneously, a newly liberal Senate Finance Committee, headed by a newly aggressive Chairman Long, is serving notice it demands equal status with Ways and Means.

Finally, Mills has not fully recovered from the decline in his prestige suffered last year when, obviously bored with minutia of legislation, he ran for President.

Career hotline cools burning job questions

INDUSTRY — Are you concerned about how the energy crisis might affect your job? Are you looking for a skill that will guarantee you job security?

These and many other questions related to the world of work may be answered through the new Career and Vocational Counseling Hotline effective Jan. 2.

Sponsored by Valley Vocational Center (VVC), the hotline telephone number, (213) 333-3558, will be manned by trained, professional counselors between the hours of 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. Evening appointments and other information can be arranged by phone or visit.

According to Mike Abramson, coordinator of the program, "the Career and Vocational Hotline is part of a comprehensive Career Counseling Center at VVC.

"We can provide labor market information, job placement information, test information on the G.E.D. and vocational tests as well as a library of career information."

Two placement offices are available on the VVC campus that add input to the Career Hotline.

Abramson explained the satellite office of the West Covina district Department of Humane Resources Development located at VVC is open to the public. This job bank site receives a computerized daily report of 8,500 new jobs listed with HRD in Southern California. In addition, VVC has its own placement office that provides part time employment for certain students through the college work study program.

The impetus for the career hotline came from VVC's concern over the fact that most persons don't really have enough information to make career decisions that affect the rest of their lives.

"Also, with the threat of an economic recession resulting from the energy crisis," noted Abramson, "we feel that the time has come for men and women to be able to find out just what jobs are available, what is the status of their present job categories, and how they can reach their educational and vocational goals by the ease and convenience of a telephone call."

Abramson brings to the Holtline over 25 years of professional vocational counseling experience.

Prior to his work at VVC, he spent years organizing and supervising vocational training and placement programs for such groups as the Los Angeles Women's Job Corps Center, the Jewish Vocational Service and the Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation (presently known as the Department of Rehabilitation).

"My main concern," he said, "is to make sure that we can reach anyone who needs advice or assistance on one of the most important problems that people and society face; how to obtain satisfactory, constructive, worthwhile employment."

Appointments for job counseling can be made by calling the Career Hotline 24 hours a day. "We hope to establish on-going relationships with persons who have diverse occupational capabilities and needs," said Abramson.

CAREER COUNSELOR

Mike Abramson is coordinator of Valley Vocational Center's career and vocational counseling hotline telephone service which becomes effective Jan. 2. Professional counselors will take calls at (213) 333-3558 Monday through Friday from those wishing to retrain or acquire new job skills to gain employment.

VA checks on way to MSAC vets

WALNUT — Things are looking up for many Mt. San Antonio College veteran students. After a delay of several months, their Veterans Administration checks are coming in, and an emergency fund has been established to ward off future financial crises.

The Veterans Emergency Fund received a shot in the pocket-book this week when the Disabled American Veterans of Pomona donated $500 to be used for temporary emergencies experienced by MSAC veterans.

Commander Larry Dunn, former MSAC student and a veteran of Vietnam, made the presentation to college President Eldon E. Pearce on behalf of DAV's Jack Ford, Jr. Chapter 9. The donation is part of the chapter's Veterans Aid and Assistance program and is earmarked for short-term loans to student veterans.

The donation came as a direct result of news stories about the veterans' problems this semester when they did not receive their VA subsistance checks. For many of these veterans, the checks are their only means of support while attending classes. The VA computer problems, which is blamed for the long delay, has been rectified, and the veterans are now beginning to receive overdue payments.

With the donation of the Pomona DAV and the tradition of the $1,500 loan supplied by the Associated Students and the $1,500 grant given by the MSAC Faculty Association, the new fund will continue to assist vets with momentary money needs, according to college officials.

Student restaurant going up in Rowland

ROWLAND HEIGHTS — Ground has been broken for construction of a student-operated restaurant at Rowland High School.

The restaurant is designed as a vocational education training facility. It is planned to accommodate 80 patrons and will require minimal construction because it is being built within existing concrete base and roof structures, said Ruth Richards, for services director.

This campus program will cater to students in menu planning, decor and atmosphere.

It is partially funded through a grant from the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Students enrolling in the district's two-year food service course will receive instruction in basic nutrition, menu planning, orientation to the food service industry, sanitation and safety, quantity food preparation, short order quantity food preparation, work simplification and restaurant service.

In addition, students will receive training as waitresses for patrons sitting in booths, at tables and at counters.

Consumers to feel effects

Economic outlook not too bright

By LEONARD CURRY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumers will be paying more for less in 1974. Workers in chemicals, housing and the auto industry will be laid off more frequently and in larger numbers. Production will decline.

Rare optimists say the economy will grow slightly in 1974. Most experts say there will be little or no economic expansion. But few predict a recession.

If the definition of a recession is accepted as either six months of no increase or an actual decline in the gross national product, however, then signs for a recession next year are active.

"The wild card is oil," said Dr. Richard S. Landry, economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Landry's assessment was repeated again and again by other economists and leaders of government, industry and labor in a series of interviews and public statements.

Higher prices

All were unanimous in predicting higher consumer prices, based on increasing labor costs, more expensive fuel and shortages of raw materials and oil.

"In some cases these shortages will be quite unlike any we have seen before in scope or duration," said Commerce Secretary Federick B. Dent. "So what we are talking about is a business' ability to remain functioning in the face of potential plant shutdowns and massive employe layoffs."

Economists from the universities of Pennsylvania and Michigan foresee growing unemployment because of shortages of raw materials, which will mean less production. These respected schools of economics also say the reduced flow of finished goods will drive up retail prices, reducing consumer demand and further discouraging production.

Double unemployment

The number of married men without jobs will probably double as unemployment rises from 4.5 per cent to at least 7 per cent. House Speaker Carl V. Albert says unemployment will be 8 per cent, while Chamber economist Landry says 6 per cent would be "slightly on the low side."

"If we really have cutbacks in industrial employment, the real brunt of this is going to fall on the married working man and the unemployment problem is going to be more serious than what we have experienced," said John Swearingen, chief executive officer of Standard Oil of Indiana.

While unemployment looms for industry, the Agriculture Department reports farmers straining to increase production are facing labor shortages. The department says farm income probably will match the record $89 billion of 1973 despite shortages of fuel, fertilizer and workers.

Continued high prices for food will contribute to a "rapidly" rising cost of living in 1974, according to AFL-CIO economist Nathaniel Goldfinger.

"Workers are not going to sit by" while this is happening, he said.

Pay to decline

Economist Pierre Rinfret, citing a lag between cost of living increases and union demands, said real take-home pay will decline for many workers next year, encouraging basic wage settlements about 30 per cent higher than in 1973.

Adding to industry's dilemma will be rising prices for diminishing supplies or raw materials.

U.S. Steel Vice President William Whyte said that zinc, for example, is getting such high prices overseas that it virtually has disappeared domestically. As a result, galvanized steel, which requires zinc in its manufacture, is scarce in the auto and housing industries.

Short supplies of building materials and high interest rates have sent construction down 30 per cent since August. Home sales have declined about 25 per cent, adding to an already serious housing shortage.

The Associated General Contractors, which represent about 6,000 major builders, said the government's tight-money policy and shortages of gasoline are forcing thousands of building mechanics to lose jobs every week.

Chemical industry

Wholesale unemployment also could occur in the chemical industry if fuel shortages continue for an extended period, according to a study for the 20 largest companies.

The study said a reduction in oil would cut supplies of petroleum byproducts used in the manufacture of fertilizer, plastics, synthetic fibers and rubber with a resulting nationwide loss of 1.6 million jobs.

The auto industry, with sales of 1974 model cars down 11 per cent in the first six weeks of the model season, began cutting back production lines in December. The gasoline shortage and bans on Sunday sales were also having rippling effects on service station operators and repair garages.

The AFL-CIO's Goldfinger said the economy is already decelerating with sales of autos, building materials and home appliances declining, total retail sales slow and the buying power of workers slipping.

"Superimposed over all this is the energy crisis," said Goldfinger, "and we don't know its depths."

Ban asbestos water pipe, group urges

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A re earch goup Monday asked the government to ban use of asbestos cement pipe in drinking water systems because it may cause cancer.

The Center for Science In the public interest said a study conducted by a major asbestos manufacturer, the Johns-Manville Corp., showed that water passing through such pipe washes asbestos fibers from the cement and carries them into the tap water.

Air-borne asbestos is a known cancer causer, although less has been documented about its effect in food or water. The center said, however, there is "ample reason to believe that ingestion of the major varieties of asbestos leads to increased risk" of cancer of the stomach and digestive tract.

A Johns-Manville spokesman said that despite many tests "no one has ever determined any problems" with asbestos cement pipe.

Barry Castleman, a researcher for the science center, and Dr. Albert J. Fritsch, codirector of the center, told the Environmental Protection Agency ((EPA) in a letter that there are more than 200,000 miles of asbestos cement pipe serving U.S. consummer , put down since the pipe was first introduced in 1938.

"We must cease manufacturing asbestos cemen pipe for use in portable water supply," the letter said. The group did not request that existing pipe be unearthed and replaced.

Castleman said in an interview, "There is no proof that the level (of asbestos) in water represent a hazard to health...."

But he said the type of cancer involved sometimes does not show up until after decades of exposure and "until we know for sure, there's no reason to continue to expose people to it...I think there is a very good case for not making any more of this pipe."

The pipe is used in municial water supplies largely in the West and Southwest where it is cheaper than cast iron pipe which would have to be brought from the east where most foundries are located.

The Johns-Manville study, a copy of which the Center submitted to the EPA, was made in 1969 and 1970 on municipal water supplies in Malvern, Pa., and Glendale, Ariz. Well water was involved in both cases and the Malvern well was in an area where asbestos minerals occurred naturally in the surrounding rocks.

The battered presidency

Nixon's glowing plans of year ago now lie in pieces

By ARNOLD B. SAWISLAK
UPI Senior Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Battered but still battling, the Nixon presidency lurches toward its sixth year sorely beset by too much Watergate and by shortages of what seems to be practically everything else.

The second year of Richard Nixon's second term begins so differently from the first that the hardest fact to accept about 1973 may be that it lasted only the usual 12 months.

As 1972 ended, the proud winner of a 62 per cent election mandate was confidently planning, at long last, to translate years of campaign rhetoric into action that would lead the nation back to "independence, self-reliance, pride."

Now, the plans lie virtually forgotten, many of the men who were to carry them forward are in disgrace or worse and the campaign that produced the greatest electoral vote landslide of three decades is widely held in contempt.

Worse may lie ahead. The Vice President, two cabinet secretaries and a long list of aides who worked at the President's shoulder in the first four years are gone. Some stand in jeopardy of prison.

Under attack

The President himself is under the gravest attack—some members of his own party have urged him to resign and the House Judiciary Committee is preparing an inquiry into the allegations of "high crimes and misdemeanors" contained in a small but menacing pile of formal impeachment resolutions.

More has gone awry than Nixon's personal fortunes. The administration began the year struggling to find workable wage and price restraints and to stabilize the dollar in world markets. No sooner had those running sores been bandaged than the nation began running short of a bewildering shopping list—beef, gasoline, paper, onions, plastics, soybeans and, as winter approached, the fuels that millions of Americans depend upon to move and to warm their homes and shops.

The year did see the final withdrawal of American troops from Indochina and the return of the prisoners of war. But the war itself did not end and another conflict began in the Mideast tinderbox that was arrested with the shakiest of cease fires.

Nor could the discreet yearend visitor to the White House make small talk by asking "Aside from that, how did you like 1973?"

Beginning year

The President began the year by trying to redeem his promises to "trim down" and "shuck off" federal programs that "just threw money at problems.' He impounded federal funds previously appropriated by Congress (and approved by himself) for a long list of activities, with emphasis on social welfare programs started in the Kennedy and Johnson administrations. One such program, the Office of Economic Opportunity's "War on Poverty," he undertook to abolish.

The Democratic-controlled Congress made some threatening noises, but it was the courts that blocked the White House. They ruled in a number of cases that holding back legally appropriated funds was itself illegal, and not only told Nixon that he was obliged to continue OEO, but that his appointed undertaker for the agency, Howard Phillips, was serving illegally in the office of director.

Nixon did not get most of his prized legislative proposals through Congress—the long awaited Phase II of New Federalism, called Special Revenue Sharing, went nowhere —but he did maintain a kind of negative mastery over Capitol Hill. Congress tried to override eight of his vetoes during 1973 and failed in every case but one —the "war powers" bill that would limit the President's power to send U.S. forces into action abroad without Congressional approval.

New initiatives

For 1974, White House and departmental spokesmen are talking about new initiatives to reform public welfare and enact a broad new health insurance program. But applying Nixon's own yardstick of "negotiating from strength" to his relations with Congress, his prospects for doing business with House and Senate leaders in any domestic field cannot be rated high.

The notion that the new Vice President, Gerald Ford, will be able to work miracles for the White House on Capitol Hill remains to be tested. But it should be remembered that Lyndon Johnson was a pretty fair country operative when he was in Congress and not too much help to John Kennedy when he became Vice President.

In foreign affairs, Nixon had to postpone his long-scheduled trip to Europe in a year that was supposed to be devoted to improving American prospects on that continent, but he did act as host of a successful state visit by Soviet Party Chairman Leonid Brezhnev, who he had to stand up to a few months later when the Arab-Israeli war appeared headed for a U.S.—Russian confrontation.

Kissinger promoted

Presidential adviser Henry Kissinger became Secretary of State and kept on traveling and fixing—with more visits to China and to Middle Eastern countries to lead the way toward a cease-fire and peace conference.

Foreign economic developments were less upbeat, except for the turnabout in the balance of trade, which produced black ink for the first time in some years. But world gold prices went out of sight and the U.S. dollar took a fearful battering earlier in the year and had to be devalued for the second time in 18 months.

The 1973 record for world affairs might be regarded as a plus except for a development, perhaps more domestic than foreign in origin, that threatens a dark and chilly winter for the nation—and, by the processes which form public opinion—for the Nixon administration.

It really should not be startling news that the United States is running out of energy. Foresighted business people as well as scholars have been saying for years that the country was abusing its fuel supplies and would have to cut back soon. In the summer of 1973, it happened.

Gas runs short

Gasoline ran short in many areas of the country, inconveniencing a lot of Americans. But as the days grew shorter, authorities began talking about coming shortages of oil and electricity, and that meant discomfort. This possibility became a reality when Arab nations, objecting to U.S. arms and diplomatic support of Israel in the latest Mideast conflict, cut off oil shipments to this country. While the Arabs provide less than 10 per cent of the oil used in this country, even that loss transformed plans for voluntary cutbacks into mandatory reductions of aviation fuel and heating oil and brought talk of gasoline rationing for the first time in 30 years.

As the year ended, airlines, automobile manufacturers and a number of other energy dependent industries were laying off workers or making cutback plans, and unemployment, at its lowest peacetime level in decades, was starting to climb again. Worse, so was inflation, as the marketplace demanded more money for the decreasing supply of fuels.

His main worry

This is what President Nixon should be worried about. His Watergate problems may turn out to be his smallest concerns if Americans in large numbers are (1) unable to heat their homes and shops, (2) thrown out of work because products or services depending upon energy cannot be sold, and (3) denied the use of their automobiles, the symbol of the post-World War II prosperity that did much to get the nation into the energy mess in the first place.

Soviets look forward to year of detente, growth

MOSCOW (UPI) — Richard Nixon had his Watergate in 1973; Leonid I. Brezhnev had his dissenters. But comparisons stop there.

For Communist Party General Secretary Brezhnev and the Soviet people, 1973 has been — dissidents aside — a year of triumphs rather than of political tragedy.

Brezhnev's policy of detente with the West survived the clash of interests arising from the Middle East war. American businessmen have been falling over one another in the rush to sign deals with the Russians.

Soviet military strength has reached new peaks. Relations with the Arabs and India have been strengthened, and with the Communist world—China excepted — they have been serene.

Brezhnev has consolidated his position as No. 1 in the Kremlin hierarchy, and he has succeeded in getting his country's sluggish economy moving again.

For the average Soviet citizen, 1974 holds the promise not of fuel crisis and recession but of more food on the table and of consumer goods that have long been denied.

"The Soviets can look back on 1973 and find a lot to crow about," a western diplomat said here recently.

Whether that will be true of 1974 is a question mark.

Detente faces a roadblock in the U.S. Congress where lawmakers, disturbed by Soviet repression of dissent and restrictions on Jewish emigration, are seeking to deny the Soviet Union most-favored nation (MFN) trade status and government credits.

MFN is not vital to Soviet-American trade, but credits needed to finance huge development projects the Soviets hope to carry out over the next decade are another matter.

"The loss of credits could slow down detente," a European diplomat said. "But if you accept the premise that the motivation for detente is primarily political rather than economic, it won't stop it."

Diplomats predict that if the U.S. Congress rejects credits, as seems likely, the Soviets will turn more to western Europe and Japan for help. And the multibillion-dollar deals that Armand Hammer and other American industrialists have negotiated for Siberian gas in 1973 will be in doubt.

In the midst of considerable diplomatic activity, the Soviets are planning a World Communist Conference next year. Diplomats believe the purpose is twofold—to reassert Soviet leadership of the Communist movement and to deal in some way with the Sino-Soviet dispute.

The Soviets have run into opposition from parties that do not want to be pushed into taking sides in the Soviet controversy with China. But the Russians appear determined to hold the conference in 1974, diplomats say.

On the home front, Soviet agriculture has recovered after the worst harvest of the century in 1972 and for the first time has grown at a faster rate than industry.

This has brought assurances of a better break for the consumer next year. Consumer production was cut back this year because the Soviets had to use scarce resources to buy grain abroad.

But full bellies do not necessarily mean contented citizens, and there are still a few Russians who protest restrictions on personal freedom in their country.

Increasingly the dissidents have been put in labor camps and mental hospitals, and more may find their way there in 1974. For while the Soviet Union marches toward greater accommodation with the West, it has redoubled its efforts to make sure that this does not give rise to expectations of greater liberalization at home.

10-year project, $380 million

PANAMA CITY (UPI) — The Panama Canal was built by the United States at a cost of $380 million from 1904 through 1914. It is approximately 50 miles long, deep water to deep water, and follows a northwesterly to southeasterly direction.

Not to climb, but descend

PHOENIX (UPI) — The recruiters meant well, but psychologically it was an inopportune moment to try to sign up Thomas Schepp and Jeff Berman for a mountain climbing club.

Members of the Arizona Mountaineering Club had just rescued Schepp, 19, and Berman, 21, from Camelback Mountain, where the two had been stranded for five hours recently.

The rescuers asked them if they wanted to learn how to climb.

"No, we're going to learn how to get down," replied Schepp.

Currency ills won't go away

..By CHARLES FLINNER..

WASHINGTON (UPI) — World monetary relations in 1973 weathered a dollar devaluation, rapid worldwide inflation, widespread shortages of food and fuel and political tensions.

After two decades of dominance, the dollar became a question mark in the late 1960s and early 1970s, leading to a major shakeup which included two dollar devaluations within 18 months.

Now, measured by such standards as balance of payments, trade, productivity, inflation, growth, employment and interest rates, the dollar has made a substantial comeback.

"Marked improvement in our trading accounts has been evident throughout the year," according to Paul A. Volcker, undersecretary of Treasury for international monetary affairs.

But new uncertainties loom in 1974.

"Agricultural trade accounted for the great bulk of the recovery in our trade position this year," Volcker said. "This will not recur. As time passes, we must count more heavily on extending recent gains in the manufactured goods sector."

Volcker, testifying before Congress, foresaw "a sharply rising import bill for energy products."

"This will cut into gains in our trade balance directly, as well as place new pressures on the internal price structure," he said. "I cannot estimate with accuracy the full impact of this development, but it does plainly underscore the continuing challenge of dealing with our inflation and maintaining a strong competitive position."

The relative strength of the dollar usually is measured in terms of the currencies of Western Europe and Japan.

When the dollar was devalued for the first time in 1971, a reform of the international monetary system was launched. "What we have to construct is an international monetary and trading system in which these three regions can live together in economic peace," according to C. Jeremy Morse of the International Monetary Fund (IMF), chief architect of reform.

"In doing so," Morse said, "we have to take account of the emergence of a group of developing countries, mainly oil-producing, whose surpluses and reserves will be a major factor in the future system. And in a shrinking world we must also be more watchful than ever not to damage but rather to promote the economic development of the other countries of the Third World, some of them relatively less developed, some very poor."

The environment in which currencies are working today is changing drastically and rapidly. While the outlook for the recovery of the dollar has been good, the resources crisis has brought new clouds.

David Rockefeller, chairman of the Chase Manhattan Bank, has said that the U.S. energy shortage could cause a zero economic growth.

"In fact, industrial production, I think, is likely to decline perhaps as much as 6 per cent or more and therefore I would guess that unemployment would reach something perhaps in excess of 6 per cent by the end of next year if nothing is done about the fuel shortage," Rockefeller said.

This ominous outlook for the United States, outlined in a nationwide television panel, may be offset by developments in other countries. Japan and Europe, for example, are far less self-sufficient in energy.

Because of the fuels shortage, Commerce Secretary Frederick B. Dent warns of "competititive disadvantage for American goods."

"While we may have an advantage over some nations in that we are closer to energy self sufficiency, the problem still exists," he said.

Dent said, "there will be shortages, not only this winter, but for quite some time into the foreseeable future. In some cases these shortages will be quite unlike any we have been before in scope or duration. So what we are talking about is business' ability to remain functioning in the face of potential plant shutdowns and massive employe layoffs.

To explore 1974 prospects requires most of all a determination of how well governments adjust to the new environment of higher prices for scarce resources.

Still another threat to economic tranquility in 1974 is inflation, which former IMF Managing Director Pierre-Paul Schweitzer calls a "cancer."

"It is a cancer because while it persists, the risk remains that it will grow and spread, posing a threat that is not just economic but social and political as well," he said.

Suspect found beside victim in the morgue

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Red-faced sheriff's deputies recently found a murder suspect they had been seeking since Nov. 26 lying in the county morgue next to the man he allegedly killed.

"I've been in this game for 16 years and I've never encountered anything like this before," Sheriff's Capt. Valjean Haleye said.

Investigators discovered the "missing" man 24 hours after Enroch Martinez, 47, died of stab wounds he received in a fight at a migrant labor camp in Delray Beach Nov. 26.

Investigators intensified their search for Martinez' attacker after the migrant worker died. Several persons interviewed by deputies named 25-year-old Ramon Nieves as the attacker, but told officers "he is dead."

Investigators thought the witnesses were confused and meant Martinez was dead. They learned that Nieves had been killed in a traffic accident last Sunday. His body was lying beside Martinez' in the county morgue.

Population control helps

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — By the turn of the century the world should reach a stable population of 7 billion, but without controls, the population by the year will be 35 billion, according to former Delaware Gov. Russell W. Peterson.

Peterson, an executive of the Rockefeller Foundation for the Third Century, says a zero population growth at the 7 billion level is required to support the current quaity of life on earth.

Small car demand hard to meet

U.S. auto industry heading for dip in sales and profits

By EDWARD S. LECHTZIN
UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — After three straight years of record sales and high profits, the U.S. auto industry is headed for a downturn in 1974 that could be accelerated by gasoline shortages and rationing.

More Americans want small cars and the industry is hard pressed to meet the demand.

Government action in rationing gasoline, taxing gas guzzlers or legislating fuel economy improvements could push more motorists into cars they wouldn't have even looked at a few years ago.

One thing is certain. The old debate between the desire for personal transportation and the greater need for public mass transportation has been renewed and some Americans are going to end up by surrendering some of their personal mobility.

Some predictions

A few things can be safely predicted about cars and car buyers in 1974.

Sales will drop from this year's record 11.8 million U.S. and foreign-built cars. Top auto executives say the drop will be down to about 11.1 million, but this could drop even lower if Americans decide the automobile is one discretionary item they can put off.

While sales drop, prices are on the way up, the biggest increases going on the high-demand small cars. The automakers were granted average increases ranging from $55 to $74 when they introduced the 1974 models, but came back for second-round increases in early November averaging between $114 and $188.

And the car buyer will continue to get cars equipped with safety and emission control devices he really doesn't want.

On the 1974 models it was the ignition interlock that makes you belt up before driving. For 1975 models, the big new item will be the catalytic converter, a chemical smog-control device that could add another $150 to the price of a new car while leaning up exhaust gases and, say some auto men, improve fuel economy.

The automakers still hope they can get the 1975 rules changed or delayed by the Congress so the muffler-like devices won't be needed. But it appears all cars in California and as many as 50 per cent elsewhere will be equipped with catalytic converters.

No change for him

Joe Gordon, a middle-aged millwright in a Detroit-area automotive supply company, wants no part of any of the new devices.

"I'll tell you straight. I've got a 1969 Dodge Dart that runs real good. It's got more than 70,000 miles and I'm going to keep it until it stops running," he said.

"I still get decent mileage, it starts most of the time and I don't have to worry about belts, buzzers or gadgets that kill all the power," he added. probably ase it."

Gasoline is the wild card for 1974. If the fuel crisis worsens and rationing is imposed for the first time since World War II, car sales could plummet well below the predicted 11.1 million.

The first two months of the 1974-model year showed the future course as sales slipped considerably from the record 1972 levels. Sales in November were off 13 per cent, with big cars taking the beating and automakers unable to meet demand for small cars.

200 laid off

The first result was the announced layoffs of 200,000 auto workers, more than one-fourth of the industry's labor force. Most of the idled workers were scheduled off less than one week right before Christmas as automakers sought to adjust their huge inventories to slow-moving sales.

Roy D. Chapin, Jr., chairman of American Motors which is bucking the trend because of its heavy reliance on small cars, said he did not know how long this "frenzied level" would continue.

"I think we're in a period of semi-hysteria now on the part of many people which is understandable," said Chapin. "I think, obviously, that the economy is not going to grind to a halt."

Chrysler Chairman Lynn Townsend, however, says sales shouldn't really be affected by the energy situation. He contends people will buy as many cars, but they just won't use them as often.

Part of the reason for the switch to the small imports in the late 1960's was the concern over steadily declining mileage of the big U.S. cars.

Caught flatfooted

Compact and subcompact cars now account for about 40 per cent of all sales and should climb to one of every two sales in the next two years. Detroit's automakers were caught flatfooted and are trying to recoup.

"The market never reacts with logic," lamented Bennett E. Bidwell, Ford vice president and Ford Division general manager, recently. "Small has suddenly become so much 'in' that logic doesn't prevail."

Ford, already enjoying high sales for its Pinto and Maverick, pushed its new, smaller Mustang II up for introduction this fall, advertising it as: "The right car at the right time."

Now Ford and General Motors are hurriedly switching over assembly plants to smallcar production, American Motors is pushing out Gremlins and Hornets as fast as possible while putting the final touches on a new and smaller urban car and Chrysler is toying with the idea of introducing its own sub-compact.

"The whole country, the whole world for that matter, has swung over to a worldwide shortage of basic materials," says Townsend. "This is affecting many of our vendors' ability to furnish parts to us and is affecting our ability to produce the schedule the market would call for.

"The penetration of the various companies and the volume of vehicles that are sold may very well be determined to a much greater extent by the companies' ability to produce cars than they are by the depth of the market to receive cars," Townsend explained.

Cost is not the main reason for the big switch to the small car since most are going out of dealers' showrooms optioned up to a price tag well over $3,000. Currency changes have forced up the prices of foreign-built compacts to as much as $3,000 for Volkswagen Beetle.

Mileage and operating costs may be the determining factors. Studies by the Environmental Protection Agency during certification of the 1974 models noted that fuel economy slipped three-tenths of a mile per gallon from 1973 models to 15.1 m.p.g.

A survey shows it costs 13.6 cents a mile to operate a standard car, 10.8 cents to run a compact and 9.4 cents for a sub-compact. That's increasing daily as gasoline prices go up along with service costs.

While future government legislation may push more Americans into small cars, the greatest incentive to put out small cars will be in the marketplace.

"We've got customers lined up sometimes waiting to buy the Gremlins and Hornets right off the lot," remarked one Detroit American Motors dealer. "They don't want to wait five or six weeks and maybe face another price hike. They'll take what we have."

Chile making slow economic comeback

By CHARLES E. PADILLA

SANTIAGO (UPI) — Austerity and belt-tightening, months of emergency security measures against possible antigovernment terrorist attacks and a slow, painful recovery from economic chaos.

That is the outlook for Chile in 1974 under the four-man military junta that toppled Marxist President Salvador Allende last Sept. 11, ending four decades of democratic rule.

As 1973 drew to a close, the junta indicated its immediate task was to disarm the population and wipe out any vestiges of guerrilla warfare.

"We are the protagonists of an internal war," said Gen. Oscar Bonilla, the Interior (police) Minister. "The armed forces are carrying out operations to finish off terrorism, uncover hidden weapons and capture dangerous elements."

Gen. Agusto Pinochet, junta leader and commander-in-chief of the army, said in mid-November the junta calculated it would take six months to give Chile the "degree of social peace' necessary to start economic recovery.

In the meantime, a declared state of siege includes a nightly curfew that prohibits Santiago's three million people from venturing out between 11 p.m. and 6 a.m.

Two months after the coup, sporadic shooting was still heard at night in various parts of the capital.

Coupled with the security measures were drastic moves to solve the economic crisis that gave Chile an inflation rate of 449.2 per cent in the first 10 months of 1973. That figure included a jump of 87.6 per cent in October, the junta's first full month in power, according to official statistics.

The new government authorized price increases of up to 500 per cent for food and other basic items. It said the move was necessary to promote agricultural and industrial production stifled by artifically low prices maintained by the Allende government for political reasons.

Low-income groups, source of Allende's strongest support, were hardest hit by the price increases. The junta acted to soften the blow with the emergency payment of two extra months' salary for workers during the final three months of 1973. The minimum monthly income was also raised, from 4,000 escudos ($14) to 12,000 escudos ($42).

"I am now working only to feed my family," said a waitress in a nearly-deserted downtown Santiago restaurant. "I have no hopes of buying any clothes or anything for the house. Only food for my family."

On the international money markets, Chile's image appeared to be on the upswing, despite the $800 million foreign debt increase during Allende's three years in office, to a total of $3.45 billion.

Reports published in New York said private American banks would loan the Chilean Central Bank more than $100 million to build up its foreign commerce. The Manufacturer's Hanover Bank of New York granted credits of $24 million to the Bank of Chile, and an International Monetary Fund mission was reported to have recommended an emergency loan of $80 million.

Return of U.S. companies that left Chile during the Allende years was reported to be under consideration.

Chino Tourney opens

By KEVIN CLOE
P-B Staff Writer

CHINO — The San Dimas Tournament of Champions is over, but what could be termed another Tournament of Champions will begin Wednesday morning at Chino High.

Although the tournament is not called the Tourney of Champions, there are enough proven champions in the Chino classic to make it one of the best attractions this week in the Southland.

In fact, it may even provide some better competition than the 32-team Covina Tournament which also starts this week.

The official title is the 33rd Annual Chino High Lettermen's Club Invitational Basketball Tournament, and it boasts five tournement champions of this year and one divisional CIF runnerup from last year.

CHINO TOURNAMENT
Wednesday's Pairings

Bonita vs. Upland, 9:30 a.m.
Pacifica vs. Temple City, 11 a.m.
Durante vs. Miraleste, 12:30 p.m.
Cerritos vs. Ganesha, 2 p.m.
Escondido vs. Claremont, 3:30 p.m.
Montclair vs. La Canada, 6 p.m.
Santa Ana vs. Chino, 7:30 p.m.
University vs. Ontario, 9 p.m.

"This year's tournament is probably the strongest it's been in a long time," stated Chino first-year head coach Bob Elder. "Ganesha should be the tournament favorite."

The Giants from Ganesha captured the Upland-Montclair Tournament titie this year and won the consolation championship in the rugged San Dimas Tournament of Champions. But they aren't the only ones who will enter the tourney with outstanding credentials.

Other tournament kings of this year include Miraleste, Cerritos, Claremont and host Chino.

Last year's CIF 2-A runnerup and the defending tourney champions, La Canada, will also be making a return appearance.

Last year with CIF 2-A Co-Players of the Year Bob Hatch and Rick Ertel, La Canada knocked off Ganesha in the tournament finals, 83-74, to win the championship.

But this year Hatch and Ertel are gone, while Ganesha is bringing back three returning starters.

Ganesha comes into the tournament against Cerritos (2 p.m.) with a 6-2 record, and should be led in scoring by center Cleve Porter (22.9), forward Broderick Hunter (17.1) and guard Earl Wilson (12.1)

Other Giant starters include forward Gary George and guard Mike Hall.

Chino will enter the tournament with an unblemished 5-0 record for the year, and Claremont will begin tourney play with a 6-1 slate.

The Cowboys, paced by forward Tim Smith with a 18-point average, won the Edgewood Tournament this year.

Although the tourney hosts will be without star Mike Coppess, who broke his ankle in the semifinal game of the Edgewood Tourney, they should be considered a heavy favorite to reach the finals of their own classic.

"We really didn't feel this was going to be our year," stated Cowboy coach Elder. "We felt we were still one year away."

Other starters for Chino, which opens against Santa Ana Wednesday night at 7:30 p.m. against Santa Ana, will probably be Rob Hairston at forward, Dirk Story (6-foot-7) at center, and Keith Mundee and Manny Delgado at the guard spots.

Claremont, this year's Azusa Tournament champions, has only lost to Ganesha this year. And despite that loss the Wolfpack went on to claim the fourth-place trophy in the Upland-Montclair Tournament.

The 'Pack is led by transfer center Bruce Abraham, who is averaging 16.6 points per game. Abraham is a former student at Pomona High, but moved to Washington before returning to the valley — transfering to Claremont.

Abraham will be complemented by the play of guards Todd Ervin (12.3) and Rip Sears (9.7) and forwards Reggie Goldsmith (9.1) and Joe Hillstock (8.9)

The Wolfpack will see its first action in this year's classic against Escondido at 3:30 p.m.

Altogether there are five San Antonio League teams, and two Hacienda League teams competing in the tourney.

Bonita and Upland will raise the curtain at 9:30 Wednesday morning, followed by the Pacifica-Temple City (11 a.m.) and Duarte-Miraleste (12:30 p.m.) games in the morning.

The Ganesha and Claremont games will be followed up by the Montclair-La Canada contest (6 p.m.), the Chino-Santa Ana game, and the University-Ontario battle at 9 p.m.

Miraleste won the Temple City Tournament this year, while Cerritos copped its own tourney title.

The Chino Tournament dates back to 1938 when it was cosponsored by the Chino 20-30 Club and Chino High. The Chino Lettermen's Club took over full sponsorship in 1964 when the 20-30 Club disbanded.

The Chino Classic rates as one of the oldest and finest basketball attractions in all of Southern California — and this year is no exception.

Merry Christmas

As Superfan puts it, the world of sports is the toy department in human affairs.

Christmas is the one day each year the toy department — except for the Lakers — takes a short rest. It may be a sign of things to come with the energy crisis.

Let's hope Santa Claus was good to our friends in the sports world.

Here are some good gifts for the sports celebrities:

Carroll Rosenbloom, Rams: Football season to last three more weeks.

City of San Diego: A true major league baseball team.

Washington politicians: A baseball team in D.C. without the help of federal tax money.

Willie Davis: A guide on speaking French in Montreal.

Cal Poly basketball coach Don Hogan: The title as the world's best-dressed cage mentor.

Pomona-Pitzer football coach Walt Ambord: More players for his thin squad.

La Verne College's Roland Ortmayer: Return to campus for home foot-ball and basketball games.

P-B city editor Jim Fulton: More time to play tennis and more Indiana victories.

UCLA's John Wooden: Must be something the man doesn't have but it's hard to tell looking at his awesome teams.

Pepper Rodgers: Happiness in Georgia.

Ohio State's Woody Hayes: A warm and pleasant vacation in Southern California.

Photographers: A warm and friendly greeting from Woody Hayes.

Dick Enberg: Oh my! A few more Angel victories.

Ontario Motor Speedway: Enough gallons of gas.

Cal Poly's Don Warhurst: A football coach within two weeks.

Poly's new football coach: Good luck.

Claremont-Mudd's Bill Arce: A new world atlas.

USC's Bobby Boyd: The opportunity to move his tem at least 200 miles from Westwood.

USC's John McKay: A crown of roses.

Bear Bryant and Ara Parseghian: A big night in the Sugar Bowl.

Howard Cosell: A big night describing the Sugar Bowl.

California Collegiate Athleic Asstociation: More members.

Cal Poly assistant Allen Van Winkle: Same success he enjoyed at SW Louisiana — on the basketball court, not the legal courts.

Pomona recreation leader Phil LaPierre: An assistant to help direct the ever-growing program in the city.

Merry Christmas from the P-B sports Department to our readers.

Bad news for UCLA foes

By DON BRADLEY
P-B Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES — There were more discouraging words Monday for upcoming foes of UCLA.

Coach John Wooden told writers at the weekly basketball luncheon that, in effect, the Bruins are just as good right now as he wants them to be.

"I said two or three weeks ago (following the Maryland game) that I thought our team was behind what I had expected them to be at that time," he said.

"Now I think we're up to where I thought we would be at this time. I made some changes," he continued "We're a one guard front and pay more attention to the point men."

"We were too concerned about getting the ball in to close and looking for individual shots. We also made a couple of changes in our offense that is opening it up better."

"David Meyers is now playing as though Bill Walton is not in there. I think before," he explained, "we were playing with the idea of letting Bill do it. We're not going to do that anymore," he concluded emphatically.

Wooden also revealed that he has changed his phsychology somewhat regarding his use of players.

"I have quit babying some players along," he told writers. "I've been using 11 or 12 players and worrying about each getting enough playing time. I'm now going with seven or eight and the ones that are playing are practicing together."

UCLA will be able to suit up only 12 players once conference play begins. Wooden has given 16 players varsity experienec to date.

"I'm not ready to say that my mind is made up on who the 12 will be," he remarked. "I don't want to discourage anyone at this date from feeling that they still have a chance to make the team. Obviously some players will be better off playing regularly with the junior varsity than playing infrequently with the varsity."

The "Wizard of Westwood" revealed that he has been voting for his Bruins as number one in the weekly UPI coaches' poll. When asked, he wouldn't put the other nine in the order he voted them, but did list them.

They were: USC, Long Beach St., Notre Dame, Indiana. Marquette North Carolina, North Carolina St., Maryland, and a newcomer.

"I put Vanderbilt in the top 10 this week," he said. They're 7-0 and I felt they deserved recognition."

Wooden revealed that he has enjoyed the progress made by Meyers and rated him as one of four players whose progress has pleased him the mst.

"I've had four players who have pleased me immensely," he said "four players who weren't widely recruited by major colleges. David is one who has progressed to the point where he plays extremely well. He starts slowly each year, but I think I like that because he is going to be good when you most want him to be good."

The other three players are Gail Goodrich and Keith Erickson, who have made the grade in professional basketball, and Jack Hirsch, a forward on the same club which gave Wooden his first NCAA championship.

Although he wasn't asked about it, the UCLA coach revealed what he considers the single most important ingredient or, rather the combination of two ingredients and what he emphasizes.

"When I recruit," he told writers, "the thing I look for more than anything else is quickness. I'm going for quickness with as much size as possible where I think a lot of coaches go for size with as much quickness as possible."

"The second thing I look for," he concluded, "is one who appears to be unselfish in his play."

Wooden and Lute Olson of Long Beach St. were the only coaches present at the luncheon.

Olson repeated a statement he had made earlier. "I think Clifton Pondexter is the best freshman ever enrolled at Long Beach St.," he said, "and I saw Eddie Ratleff play as a freshman."

"He (Pondexter) has got to be super," Olson continued. He jumps to the moon, is shooting 56 per cent from the floor; he's our leading scorer and rebounder and his defense is improving."

"He doesn't go to the offensive boards at all like he should," Olson admitted and he doesn't move well without the ball which is his biggest weakness. But he's very coachable. At this stage he's ahead of Ratleff. But whether he will work hard enough to become as great as Ratleff was as a senior remains to be seen."

Player of the week honors went to Gus Williams of USC in the University Division and Bobby Walters of UC Riverside in the college division.

Rams refund fans' checks

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Rams spent between $6,000 and $7,000 to do the clerical work for a football game that will never be played.

The cost involved sending out 50,000 tickets to their season ticket holders for a Dec. 30 game which the Rams would have hosted if they had defeated Dallas Sunday.

The National Football League will reimburse the club for most of the expense, a Ram spokesman said, and in any case the money spent was nothing compared to the blow to the team's morale and pride with the loss to the Cowboys.

Public sale of tickets for the canceled Dec. 30 game would have started Monday.

The 45,000 tickets purchased in response to the 50,000 mailing are redeemable at any branch of the Union Bank on or before Jan. 31. Total amount involved is approximately $500,000 since the tickets were priced at $12.00 each.

The bank charges no fee for the redemption service since it gets use of the money put up by the Rams for a matter of days or weeks and the interest on such an amount is considerable.

The breakdown of reimbursable costs including two mailings shows postage totaling about $4,000. Printing costs were about $1,600 and costs of envelopes and preparing letters ran about $1,000, making a grand total of $6,600.

Energy crisis bothers college grid schedules

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — University of Oregon athletic director Norv Ritchey said Monday the energy crisis could force a realignment of college athletics which would largely eliminate intersectional contests.

His counterpart at Oregon State, Jim Barratt, said he hopes it isn't so.

Both already face some problems caused by a shortage of jet fuel.

Wake Forest has asked Oregon State for a release from its scheduled football game at Corvallis next Sept. 28 because it cannot get a jet charter.

Ritchey said Oregon had been unable to secure commitments from airlines for its football charters next fall.

Barratt, reached by telephone at Corvallis, said he is seeking a replacement opponent for the Sept. 28 date at Corvallis and "we hope to release Wake Forest by Feb. 1." He said he will seek another opponent— possibly San Diego State, Fresno State or Pacific—at the NCAA meeting in San Francisco next month.

"We'd be stupid to let them (Wake Forest) off the hook unless we get a replacement," he said. "We are making a good faith effort to find a replacement to accommodate them."

Ritchey, in a telephone interview from Eugene, said, "I assume that every effort will be made to continue a national caliber program but if the energy crisis affects transportation then we are certainly going to see a readjustment and realignment."

He cited the recent Pacific-8 action in returning to northern division and southern division schedules in baseball, replacing a conference-wide round-robin, as the sort of thing that could become widespread.

He added, "We have been unable to secure commitments for football charters next fall. We are finding it increasingly difficult to find blocks of space and preferred travel times on airlines."

Ritchey said a switch to commercial airline travel "certainly forces us to take a look at travel schedules and the amount of class time missed."

He said a change would not come immediately but is "entirely dependent on what happens in the next few years" in regard to fuel supplies.

Barratt said he would be against any realignment of schedules now based on the current energy crisis. "I've worked too hard to build schedules through 1986 to want to do the whole thing again," he said.

Merritt says no to Wichita

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Tennessee State University football coach John Merritt Monday declined an offer to coach Wichita State University.

Had he accepted he would have been the first black coach of a major college team.

"I have decided to remain at Tennessee State basically because of my loyalty to my coaches, to the boys we have recruited recently who expected us to be here, and to the university which I feel at this time particularly needs me more than Wichita," the cigar-puffing Merritt told a news conference.

Another factor which entered into his decision, Merritt said, was the fact that three of his assistant coaches did not want to follow him to the Kansas school. He did not identify the three.

Rams pick Cowboys rest of way

DALLAS (UPI) — If anybody is getting up a pot on the Super Bowl, count Fred Dryer and Harold Jackson in on the side of the Dallas Cowboys.

The Cowboys, who have done whatever was necessary the past four weeks to survive in the race for pro football's championship, have made believers out of at least a couple of the Los Angeles Rams.

"Dallas seems more explosive than any team we've played," said Jackson, the flashy Ram receiver who was hounded and harrassed to the point of frustration against the Cowboys Sunday in Dallas' 27-16 victory that set up the NFC title match with Minnesota.

"I think they've got the team that can do it. You can't afford a single mistake against them. They are great." [redacted]

Dryer is the Ram defensive end who, by happenstance, took Cowboy running back Calvin Hill out of the Viking game. He was quick to announce his favorite.

"I pick them for the Super Bowl," said Dryer. "They're very explosive and you can never afford to make a mistake on them."

Los Angeles made two costly mistakes early against Dallas, which put the Rams 14 points in the hole. And from there it was up to the defense until a slightly woozy Roger Staubach joined up with rookie Drew Pearson on their 83-yard touchdown pass that wrapped up the victory.

The defensive effort put forth by the Cowboys was typical of recent weeks. The Rams were the No. 1 offensive team in the NFC during the regular season, but the twin running threat of Jim Bertelsen and Lawrence McCutcheon was held to a combined 85 yards and quarterback John Hadl could connect on only seven of 23 passes.

"The defensive team was tremendous," said Cowboy Coach Tom Landry. "They never played harder than they played against Los Angeles. I don't think we have ever been in a tougher fight in a game. It was a tremendous battle physically."

Los Angeles coach Chuck Knox could sympathize with McCutcheon, whose fumble set up Dallas' second touchdown early in the game.

"He was hit about as hard as anyone I have seen hit all year," said Knox.

But the euphoria in the Dallas camp was tempered by the loss of Hill, who gained 1,142 yards during the regular season and who had picked up 97 yards against Los Angeles before dislocating his elbow.

Hill himself said doctors always tended to "overreact" on injuries and that he planned to be ready. But Cowboy team physician Dr. Marvin Knight said Hill was, without question, out for the Viking contest.

"I was reaching for the ball (Hill had fumbled inside his own 20) and the guy (Dryer) just fell on my arm," said Hill. "I thought I had blown the whole game."

Following Hill's fumble the Rams stormed into the end zone in two plays to reduce Dallas' lead to one point.

Moments late Staubach hit Pearson and Hill, with his left arm trussed up in a makeshift sling, was one of the first to run to the end zone to congratulate the rookie hero.

"That pass made me feel better," Hill said.

'Anita season opens with 'Cap

ARCADIA, Calif. (UPI) — Featuring 51 stakes events and more than $8 million in purses, Santa Anita launches its 37th meeting Thursday with the $30,000-added Palos Verdes Handicap as the opening day feature.

The Palos Verdes is expected to attract such sprint stars as Ancient Title, Briartic, King of Cricket and Zulu Tom.

Laffit Pincay Jr., who directed his mounts to a record-breaking $4 million in earnings this year, heads the list of jockeys converging here for the 75-day season that runs through April 8.

The list includes Bill Shoemaker, Steve Valdez, Don Pierce, Alvaro Pineda, Fernando Toro, Jerry Lambert, Jacinto Vasquez, Eddie Belmonte, Angel Santiago and Braulio Baeza.

OLA hosts cage tourney at Damien

The Our Lady of Assumption Athletic Association will sponsor their 13th Annual Holiday Basketball Tourney, with action beginning Wednesday and running through Sunday.

18 local Catholic elementary schools will participate in the tourney, with all games slated to be played at Damien High in La Verne.

Eight games will be played on Wednesday and Thursday, with the semi-finals of the tourney to be held on Saturday and the finals played on Sunday. Games will begin at 12 noon and run to 7 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday, Saturday's action will be held between 1 p.m. and 4 p.m., while Sunday's games will begin at 3:15 p.m. and run to 7 p.m.

According to Herb Naish, Athletic Association President, admission to the tourney will be $1 for adults and 50 cents for children for each day of action. A cheerleader competition between the participating schools is also slated.

Recreation

The two major youth sports activities for the holiday season take place Thursday. The Pomona Park and Recreation Departments' Second Annual Cross Country Meet is set for the Pomona High School course at 1 p.m.

Earlier in the day, the Cal Poly Optimist Club will conduct a basketball skills contest for eight to 13 year old boys. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will have able assistance from the school's varsity basketball team.

The cross country meet is open to any boy or girl born in 1959 or later. There are seven divisions for each group based on the year you were born. The distances run range from one-half mile for the youngest up to two miles for the oldest.

Pre-registration is not needed for the would be harriers. Participants should show up at 1 p.m. and await the call of their age group.

The top five in each event will advance to the San Gabriel Valley Municipal Athletic Association meet on Jan. 5 in Glendora. Approximately 70 Pomona youths will advance to this meet.

If you are going to the cross country meet and are concerned about the time of your event, remember this. The youngest divisions are run first at 1 p.m. The oldest boys group, born in 1959, goes off at 2:50 p.m. It is better to be early than late.

Pre-registration for the skills contest has been conducted on the local recreation areas for the past week. However, because of the holiday period, final sign-ups will be taken at the Cal Poly gym at 8:30 a.m.

Because only 200 applicants can be accepted for this event, it would be far safer to register tomorrow at one of the local recreation areas. They are open from 12 noon to 4 p.m.

Fall sports winners

Pomona's Northside Teen captured the first Adult Passing League title with an impressive 7-0 mark. They edged out a fine Roadrunner squad, 6-1.

Two had met in the opening league game with the Post prevailing 8-7. From that time on they played even, but it wasn't enough for losing Coach Herb Businger and his team.

Bob Smith again handled the winners. The year 1973 was a very profitable one for Bob and the Teen Post. Early in the year they captured a basketball title with a 15-0 mark. Later it was the top slo pitch softball league.

The young Mr. Smith has done an excellent job with the Teen Post operations. Prior to Bob taking over, many teams were reluctant to play them. When they won, they were poor winners.

When they lost, they were even poorer losers. In general, the sportsmanship left much to be desired. Smith has changed all that. Now opponents look forward to playing the Teen Post even though they usually come out second best.

Fall volleball leagues have concluded. There was one big winner, but two others are equally happy with their titles.

Teams coached by Lynn Emis won the six-man title and the Division One coed crown. General Dynamics, under the leadership of Harvey Meltzer, captured the Division Two coed race.

The six-man titlist, the Spikers, went on even farther. They competed in the SCMAF play-offs, a first-time event for volleyball.

The opening level was the San Gabriel Valley Municipal Athletic Association tournament held here in Pomona. They finished second to Burbank which was a disappointment. The top two teams, however, advanced on.

The finals held two weeks ago in Lomita was a different story. The Spikers swept aside their opposition to become the first SCMAF Volleyball champion.

The team members included Emis, Gil Bernabe, Luis Montes, Mike Phillips, Bill Adamson, Doyen Klein, Steve Wilbur, and Don Radford. Congratulations to a great team.

On this most beautiful day of all days, I wish everyone the Merriest Christmas that will continue on to be a very Happy New Year.

Pole vault clinic at MSAC

WALNUT — A four-day pole vaulting clinic, conducted by Pacer America of Santa Fe Springs, will be in progress at Mt. San Antonio College Wednesday through Saturday.

Among the instructors for the clinic will be former Olympic champion Bob Seagren, MSAC track coach Don Ruh and Polish National track coach Roman Korban.

Cost of the four-day camp is $50 for athletes of high school age and older. Further information may be obtained by telephoning Don Ruh, 595-7090.

Hard to compete in L.A.

Loyola needs 'help'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — You should have the problems Dick Baker has.

Baker, 39, is athletic director at Loyola of Los Angeles and he must compete against University of Southern California and UCLA for the sports dollar and high school athletes.

Needless to say, Loyola comes out third best.

"Athletic programs are expensive," Baker stated, "and if you don't have the gate—I mean draw people to see you play—you're in trouble. I think that's the problem with most small schools. It's dollars."

True. And most schools aren't located in the same city with USC and UCLA, either.

"I remember we wrote a letter to Bill Walton when he was still in high school," Baker recalled. "When we got no response, we figured we didn't have a prayer.

"But it's not just the UCLAs and the SCs. Everybody in the world comes in here and recruits. We pretty much get the leftovers."

In his sixth year as Loyola's AD, Baker stepped down as the school's basketball coach this year after compiling a 55-73 record in five seasons. Loyola is a member of the West Coast Athletic Conference, a major basketball conference.

The Lions' athletic budget is $210,000. That includes scholarships for 10 sports, expenses and the salaries of all of the school's coaches.

"That's not very much," admitted Baker, "but that's a big chunk of money for this school.

"Sure we lose money. In the best of years, the most we can recover from TV and road guarantees and other things is $50,000 of the $210,000."

Baker is adamant about staying in the WCAC, though. Despite the fact that he doesn't think Loyola has much of a chance at winning the basketball title now that Jerry Tarkanian has moved from Cal State Long Beach to Nevada-Las Vegas.

"Every now and then people raise the question that maybe it would be better for us to compete against the Whittiers, Occidentals and Redlands," said Baker.

"But I'd like to see us stay where we are even though I think it's going to be extremely difficult to win the conference in basketball. I think before Tarkanian it obviously was possible.

"But Jerry ... he just damn well gets the job done."

Baker believes in the future of the small, private university in America in athletics. However, he says the problems that must be overcome are astronomical.

"The small schools are generally having problems apart from their sports programs," he noted. "Athletics are somewhere down at the end of the line when it comes to things.

"If schools are not breaking even or close to it, it becomes difficult. And then your budget goes down some and your product becomes somewhat less and consequently your gate becomes even less."

Baker is a 1956 graduate of Loyola and he's staying at the school at a personal sacrifice. He left as assistant city manager of Redondo Beach, Calif., at an $8,000 pay cut to return to his alma mater.

"I really like the school and I enjoy my life working with the kids," he explained. "Plus it's a little bit of a dream to get a new facility built on campus."

The Lions play in an antiquated 1,800-seat campus gym now.

Baker envisions a 5,000-seat multi-purpose facility within the next five years at a cost of $3 million.

"The school has gotten to the point where it says it needs it," the athletic director said. "We could afford to put it up now but it's a matter of priorities. It will be built by donations."

READY FOR CONTEST — Bruce Soto, Nate Rainbow and Greg Artry are practicing for basketball skills contest sponsored by the Cal Poly Optimist Club. Boys may register for contest Wednesday.

Poly Optimist Club offers cage contest

POMONA — Final registration for the Cal Poly Optimist Club's Tri-Star Basketball Contest will be held Wednesday. The contest is set for Thursday, in the Univeristy's gym at 9 a.m.

Boys between the ages of eight to 13 years of age are eligible. They may register at any of the six local junior high school recreation programs during the hours of 12 noon and 4 .m.

The programs, sponsored by the Pomona Park and Recreation Departments, are conducting practice for the event at 1 p.m. Wednesday. The areas open are Lorbeer, Palomares, Emerson, Fremont, Simons, and Marshall Junior Highs. Full staffs are on duty.

The events will cover passing, dribbling and shooting skills. The top three in each division will be featured at the Purdue-Cal Poly basketball game Saturday. All participants will be given free passes to the game.

Boys and girls interested in registering for the Recreation Department's basketball program may do so at the same locations. Teams are being formed that will play on Friday evenings and Saturdays after the first of the year.

For further information call the Park and Recreation office at 620-2321.

O.J. enters Superstars competition

ROTONDA, Fla. (UPI) — Football star O.J. Simpson and baseball's two Most Valuable Players, Pete Rose and Reggie Jackson, will compete against 21 other sports greats in a playoff competition here on Feb. 25th and 26th to determine the finalists for the 1974 "Superstars" competition.

The Superstar Classic, held for the first time this year and won by pole vaulter Bob Seagren, carries a total prize package of $122,000. Seagren has already qualified for a second shot at the title.

The Superstar competition pits the athletes against each other in seven of ten events, excluding his own professional specialty. This year the events are: baseball hitting, tennis, nine-hole golf, swimming, bowling, weight lifting, 100-yard dash, half-mile run, one-mile bicycle race, and a challenging obstacle course race.

The 1974 competition has been expanded to include four semi-final contests. The first two were held in August of this year and the other two are scheduled for Jan. 28th and 29th. Already qualified for the finals are Seagren, basketball greats John Havlicek and Jim McMillian, Olympic gold medal speed skater Ard Schenk, Montreal Canadien hockey star Yvan Cournoyer and European skiing ace Karl Schranz.

Joining Simpson, Rose, and Jackson in the January semis are Jean Claude Killy, who placed second in the 1973 Superstars, auto racer Peter Revson, who placed fourth, auto racer Bobby Allison, driver Craig Breedlove, boxer Bob Foster, Olympic wrestler Dan Gable, rodeo specialist Larry Mahan, Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles, soccer player Kyle Rote Jr., and Olympic decathlon champion Bill Toomey.

Holiday tournament

Damien entertains top soccer teams

By TOM FAHEY
P-B Correspondent

LA VERNE — Soccer, the fastest growing sport in America, will have another opportunity to win over some new fans during the holidays.

Damien High School will host its first Invitational High School Soccer Tournament that will feature 16 teams.

The games will be played at Damien Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

Some of the top teams that will be entered in the tourney are South Torrance, San Gabriel, and Salesian, all rated in the top ten in CIF.

The local teams that will be featured are Chino, Ganesha, Montlciar, Pomona and host Damien.

Coach Al Mistri of the Damien Spartans organized the tournament for a dual purpose, "I wanted the tourney so that the teams could play some good games and also in the hopes of generating some interest in the game".

Although South Torrance is the favorite, Mistri feels that the outcome might prove to be a little different.

"With the great rise of AYSO (American Youth Soccer Organization), a lot of teams are now stocked with some fine talent, and there may be a few surprises before this tournament is over," says Mistri.

Mistri noted the fact that earlier this year, Pomona defeated San Gabriel by a score of 1-0.

The tournament is double elimination with the games starting Thursday at 9 a.m.

The finals will take place Saturday night.

The Damien Tournament will be the last warmup before the San Antonio League gets underway in the beginning of January.

With five of the S.A.L. teams participating, there promises to be a preview of what can be expected to come.

Damien has started out fast this year. In the Alemany Tournament held last week, the Spartans came away with top honors by defeating Montebello in the finals, 1-0.

Opening trade in tennis loop

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The first trade in the World Team Tennis League (WTTL) was made Sunday when the Pittsburgh Triangles gave up cash and a player to be announced later to the Boston Lobs for Peggy Michael.

Miss Michael, the Lobs' 12th draft round choice, was an NCAA finalist when she was at Arizona State University. She will be a doubles partner of Yvonne Goolagong of Australia who signed with the Triangles two months ago.

SUNDAY RACING??? — The energy crisis notwithstanding, the jury appears to be divided on a verdict for racing's newest "toy."

At Santa Anita, officials are holding their collective breaths, hoping the energy crisis doesn't force them to return to the old Tuesday through Saturday format.

At Golden Gate, officials say Sunday racing isn't worth it. Too much goes out in premium pay, too little returns at the gate and through the mutuel windows.

At Los Alamitos they found out last weekend that Sunday racing isn't a cureall. The Sabbath count of 8,409 was far below the nearly 10,000 that witnessed Saturday's afternoon card.

At Bay Meadows, results continue to improve as a season's high of 15,076 saw Out of the East win the Children's Hospital 'Cap.

At Suffolk downs, the North American Riding Championship drew nearly 12,000, despite a driving rainstorm.

On and on it goes. But as the story lengthens, it becomes different strokes for different folks.

CALIFORNIA BOUND? —Jockey Sandy Hawley may be California bound in 1974.

The winningest single season jockey in history has revealed that he would like to try Hollywood Park next spring. He might even be on hand for a part of the Santa Anita meet. But before they finalize plans, Hawley and agent Colin Wick have one more goal to reach.

"We made up our game plan last Jan. 1," said Wick. "We wanted to break Bill Shoemaker's single season mark of 485 and we wanted to be the first to ride 500 winners in a year.

"We've got one record and now we're bearing down on the other."

Hawley, who picked up $10,000 in winning Suffolk's riding championship last weekend, should hit number 500 before the week is up.

"It's been an unbelievable year for me," said the affable Canadian after he collected his Suffolk honors. "This is a very exciting win here, particularly after breaking Shoemaker's record."

★ ★ ★

SWITCH OF HATS — Wally Wolf, the former Angel hurler who has been serving on the public relations staff at both Hollywood Park and Western Harness has been signed on as a full time member of the sulky association's team.

Wolf reportedly turned down another offer which would have meant leaving his Orange County home. Wally boards several horses on his Yorba Linda spread, including his own Cadiz, the former Hollywood Gold Cup and Californian winner from New Zealand.

★ ★ ★

11 IN A ROW — Southwesterners are humming about a speedster named Sturdy Indian who last week raced to his 11th straight victory in the Thoroughbred Futurity Trial at Sunland Park.

Sturdy Indian is by the former California speed king, Hempen, who also is the sire of Annihilate 'Em, winner of the $100,000 Travers at Saratoga and one of the leading three-year-olds of the year.

★ ★ ★

NEW ROOTERS — Sandy Hawley gives credit to members of "Hawley's Horses" for some of his riding success this year.

The lads selected the name for their pee-wee league hockey team, for which Sandy foots the bill. Seldom does Hawley miss a game and after each contest he pops for ice cream and other goodies. The Horses are battling for their league lead.

"I believe my rooting for the boys has done a lot for them and I know their rooting for me has been a big help," Hawley opined.

Sandy wanted to paly football when he entered hign school but ths coach sent him home on the second day of practice. "Too small," said the mentor.

"I switched to wrestling and placed second in the 95-pound division championship" Hawley added.

★ ★ ★

OUT AGAIN — Art Johnson, well known to quarter-horsemen in the Southwest and California, reportedly has been squeezed out of a second managerial post within the past year and one-half.

Art was general manger at Sunland Park when a change in management caused a termination of his assignment. He moved on to Santa Fe, where he did a yeoman job. But the majority stockholder in the eastern New Mexico track has changed and Johnson is out again.

ONE TO WATCH — A Charlie Whittingham-trained youngster is drawing most of the raves these mornings at Santa Anita. She is Polka Dot Veil, an unraced daughter of Round Table-Nas-Mahal and thus a full sister to Hollywood Derby winner Tell. Poka Dot Veil will be a three-year-old during the 1974 Arcadia session, which begins Dec. 27 and her half-sister, Turkish Trousers, was sophomore filly queen there three years ago.

Winternationals forms out

POMONA — Entry blanks for the National Hot Rod Association's 14th annual Winternationals of drag racing are being distributed to contestants this week in preparation for the February 1-2-3 classic at the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds here.

According to NHRA officials, more than 700 entries are anticipated for the rich event, which annually kicks off each new drag racing season of major races. Eight important Winternationals championships, including the newly added Pro Comp Eliminator title will be up for grabs, along with more than $200,000 in prize money.

"We're keeping a close watch on the energy crisis," explained NHRA president Wally Parks, "but we don't anticipate any major problems that would interfere with the running of the event.

"Practically all of our major sponsors have confirmed their participation for the 1974 season" Parks said, "and we have added a few new ones as well."

"As a matter of fact, our optimism is quite high," he added, explaining that NHRA recently spent $25,000 to repave the quarter-mile racing surface at Pomona in preparation for the '74 Winternationals.

Second oldest of NHRRA's eight major National events, the Winternationals was established in 1961 as a western counterpart to the annual NHRA Nationals, held at Indianapolis over the Labor Day weekend. The L.A. County Fairgrounds drag strip, one of the oldest in Southern California, began operations in the early 1950s under auspices of the Pomona police department as a means of curbing street racing and traffic violations in the area. It's success has been lauded by law enforcement officials across the nation and has served as a pattern for other communities.

The new racing surface, repaved several weeks ago, is one of the same asphalt formula used at the Ontario Motor Speedway which is known for its exceptional traction that afforded the sport's first five-second run.

"We feel certain that our new surface will provide better racing than ever for the Winternationals and we are looking for a string of new records,' Parks said.

The three days of racing, one fewer than in previous years, will get underway Friday, February 1, with the first of two qualifying days to set the individual fields for the February 3 finals.

In addition to trimming one day off the running schedule, NHRA officials also announced a reduction of the final Top Fuel and pro Stock fields to 16 cars each. Previously, the 32 lowest elapsed-time qualifiers in each of those professional categories advanced to the finals.

Other racing categories will consist of the 16 lowest e.t. qualifiers in Funny Car, Pro Comp and Comp, and class winners in the Modified, Super Stock and Stock Eliminator categories.

Tickets for the 1974 Winternationals are on sale now at all Ticketron outlets plus all Mutual Ticket Agencies and Wallich Music City Stores.

USAC airs its schedule for 1974

INDIANAPOLIS, Indiana (UPI) — The United States Auto Club, confident the energy crisis will not doom its racing program, has announced its national championship, dirt track and stock car events for 1974.

All of the championship events are scheduled for Sundays, including the milliondollar Indianapolis "500."

The championship division opens with the Ontario, Calif. "500" on March 10. The other 500-milers are at Indianapolis, now set for May 26, and Pocono, Pa., June 30.

The other championship events were:

March 17, Phoenix, Ariz., 150 miles; April 7, Trenton, N.J., 200; June 9, Milwaukee, 150; July 21, Cambridge Junction, Mich., 200; Aug. 11, Milwaukee, 200; Sept. 15, Cambridge Junction, 250; Sept. 22, Trenton, 300; Nov. 3, Phoenix, 150.

The dirt track schedule—all 100-miles races:

July 4, Syracuse, N.Y.; Aug. 17, Sedalia, Mo.; Aug. 18, Springfield, Ill.; Sept 7, Indianapolis; Sept. 8, DuQuoin, Ill.

The stock car schedule:

April 27, Pocono, Pa., 500; May 25, Sedalia, Mo., 100; June 15, Indianapolis, 100; June 16, Terre Haute, Ind., 100 laps; July 4, Pikes Peak, Colo., Hill Climb; July 14, Milwaukee, 200; July 21, Cambridge Junction, Mich., 200; Aug. 15, Milwaukee, 200; Aug. 17, Springfield, Ill., 100; Aug. 18, Milwaukee, 200; Aug. 24, Sedalia, Mo., 100; Aug. 25, Indianapolis, 100; Sept. 1, Duquoin, Ill., 100; Sept. 8, Milwaukee, 250.

Nogales presents 10th cage tourney

With the Chino Tournament getting underway this week, three other valley teams will be competing in two other high school tournaments around the southland.

Nogales and Rowland highs will co-host their 18th annual Christmas Tournament again this year with Rowland and Walnut being the two valley schools participating.

Meanwhile, Chaffey will head over to San Bernardino to take part in the San Bernardino Kiwanis Classic.

Co-host Rowland will open its tourney action Wednesday evening at 8:30 p.m. against Mountain View, a new entry in this year's classic.

NOGALES TOURNAMENT
At Rowland
Los Altos vs. Esperanza, 3:30 p.m.
Bassett vs. Royal Oak, 5 p.m.
Azusa vs. Sierra Vista, 7 p.m.
Mountain View vs. Rowland, 8:30 p.m.

At Nogales
Wilson vs. El Monte, 3:30 p.m.
Baldwin Park vs.Walnut, 5 p.m.
La Puente vs. Charter Oak, 7 p.m.
Gladstone vs. Nogales, 8:30 p.m.

SAN BERNARDINO-PACIFIC TOURNAMENT
At San Bernardino
Corona vs. Ramona, 3:30 p.m.
Fontana vs. Apple Valley, 5 p.m.
Cajon vs. Eisenhower, 6:30 p.m.
San Bernardino vs. Redlands, 8:30 p.m.

At Pacific
Aquinas vs. Chaffey, 3:30 p.m.
Long Beach vs. San Gorgonio, 5 p.m.
Victor Valley vs. Riverside, 6:30 p.m.
Pacific vs. Kennedy (Barstow), 8:30 p.m.

Mountain View is one of two new teams competing this year along with Esperanza. They replaced Bonita and Workman.

Walnut will meet its first foe of the tourney at 5 p.m. Wednesday night at Nogales High against Baldwin Park.

The Mustangs, led by forward Kirk Christ, have gone through the early part of the season with a very impressive 8-1 record — including one tournament title.

Christ has been averaging 25.4 points per game this year. He was the Pomona Valley's leading scorer last year as a junior. He was also an all-tournament team selection in the Nogales Tournament last year.

Rowland will be coming into the tournament with a 1-5 record — its only win coming in its season opener against Cantwell.

The Railers are paced by guard Robet Malave, who is averaging 21.2 points per game.

Walnut should be one of the favorites to win the tournament title this year after capturing the Laguna Beach Tourney title last weekend. La Puente is the defending tournament champions, while Azusa will be seeking a better finish after its third-place showing last year. The Aztecs defeated Walnut for that third-place trophy.

Chaffey will open the San Bernardino Tournament against Aquinas at Pacific High at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday.

The Tigers, who have posted a 6-2 record so far this year, are coming off an impressive victory over Upland. Chaffey tipped Upland in a foul-ridden contest, 76-71.

The Tigers' offensive scoring attack is led by guard Mrk McQaid, who averages 12 points per outing. Chaffey is a farel well balanced club with forward Mike Partington (10.6), forward Brian Jacobs (9.0), and guard Rick Antoni (8.1) adding to the Tigers' output.

A tiny screen, old film—just great!

ATLANTA (UPI) "My name's Marlow. General Sternwood is expecting me," the gruff voice said from behind the door, and we immediately whisked away into yesteryear.

My wife and I went to the movies the other night. We bought a bag of popcorn, sat in the back row and held hands. It was like old times in more ways than one.

For this wasn't one of the run-of-the-widescreen epics: this was the famous 1945 version of Raymond Chandler's private eye classic "The Big Sleep," shown much the same way it was more than 30 years ago.

Even the screen was small, I couldn't believe we actually watched movies in those days on a screen that little. And the seats were hard, straight-back affairs. Indeed, it was like old times.

About half the audience was from our era and they cheered and chuckled at Humphrey Bogart's exploits in the role of Philip Marlow and even applauded the bombastic overtures of Max Steiner, that master scene-setter.

Movies were king

This was a big slice of yesteryear and we loved it. I grew up in a time when movies were king, a time when television was mostly a dream. Watching Bogart and Lauren Bacall tool through their paces in a movie brought back the multitude of Saturday afternoons of my youth and their adventure epic, their serials.

While others my age were running up and down the aisles or out buying more popcorn, I was reading the credits. Perhaps an odd quirk, but I felt I knew Lyle Talbot, George MacReady, Frank Faylen, Charles Middleton and Fuzzy Knight. All solid supporting actors but not exactly household words.

I probably was the only one on my block who knew, or cared, that Harry Shannon played Dr. Zarakhov in the Flash Gordon serials or that Tom Tyler, who played Captain Marvel, also was the mummy in the "Mummy's Hand," replaced in the sequels by Lon Chaney Jr. My ambition was to play the Frankenstein monster.

Gerald Jones, the 29-year-old film maker who brought to Atlanta the two-month series of vintage movies of which "The Big Sleep" was part, described Nostalgla as "a shallow emotion," and said most people came because of "solid entertainment value."

Not camp

It wasn't a matter of "camp," he said, except perhaps in the case of "Little Caesar" when the audience laughed. I recalled several years ago, in a crowded theater, they laughed at Boris Karloff's sensitively played monster in the original "Frankenstein." It was, I thought, almost sacrilege.

To me, it was partly nostalgia, partly just re-seeing a good movie. "The Big Sleep" reminded us that there was gas rationing in World War II (a B sticker adorned Marlow's windshield.) I had forgotten there was heat rationing then, too. While promising to help his police friend bust the case, Marlow said it would get him some "red points." Gas was selling for 28 cents a gallon, ham and eggs for 35 cents.

Bogart was the best Marlow, I thought, and I saw them all. Violence was there, of course, but it was nothing to compare with the Coke-bottle-smashed in the face-of-the-pretty-girl trick employed for shock value in the newest Marlow, "The Long Goodbye," which we saw two nights before.

"The Big Sleep," with a script coauthored by none other than William Faulkner, had Bogart equal to every task, whether gunning down a killer or charming a young bookstore clerk (Dorothy Malone). When Martha Vickers, as Bacall's childish younger sister, asks if the person they are discussing "is cuter than you?" The homely Bogart snaps, "Nobody is," never blinking an eye.

Great dialogue

When tied up and waiting for the killers to return, Bogart tells Bacall, "They'll kick my teeth down my throat and then beat me to death for mumbling." They just don't write dialogue like that any more.

Three times during the showing, there was a break while the projectionist changed the reel. In my day, we would have hooted, whistled, stamped our feet and clapped like mad. But this time, the audience was quiet, probably preconditioned by the multitude of pauses for television commercials.

As Bogart leaves the darkened bookshop after sharing a bottle of rye with Dorothy Malone, he says, "So long, pal." That pretty well tells the story. We left the theater with a feeling of "So long, pal." So long to a past we all remembered fondly. My two teen-age daughters call them the olden days. I call them them them golden days.

LAPD will regain record

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The police department's jogging team dragged out the superlatives to boast they intend to make the world's longest relay run.

Team camptain Charles Foote said his 13-man crew will leave from the steps of the nation's capitol sometime next spring and reach Los Angeles precisely 18 days, six hours and 11 minutes later.

The way Foote figures it, each man will jog 10 miles on a rotation basis, successfully crossing hill and dale and a couple of mountain ranges along the way. By the time they reach Los Angeles City Hall each man will have run 291 miles.

The police department runners, among them 53-year-old officer Frank Mullens, aren't exactly beginners when it comes to exhausting, long distance runs.

They set the previous world's distance run with a 2,012-mile event from Tijuana, Mexico, to the Canadian border. But this past September a northern California athletic group, the Strides, ran 3,411 miles in 19 ½ days. And now the police want their stolen title back.

Seeking wedge to get okay for casino?

MINDEN, Nev. (UPI) — A South Dakota investor who couldn't get a permit to build a gambling casino at Lake Tahoe says he now wants to build hog pens on the site.

But District Attorney Howard McKibben said that the investor, Ted Jennings, Miller, S.D., will be advised he can't do that either. The land is zoned for tourist facilities.

A 500-room hotel-casino Jennings wanted to build on the land was turned down on environmental grounds, officials said.

Jennings' local business manager denied the hog pen idea was designed to get reconsideration of the casino plan, but added Jennings had not given up on a casino.

IT'S THE SPIRIT THAT COUNTS — Monique Waldron, an eight-grade student at St. Paul's School in San Pablo, wrote to the Richmond Independent for help in resolving a personal energy crisis. She asked if it would be all right to light the family's outdoor tree since there are no lights on the indoor tree. The paper printed its reply on the front page advising her to "pick the brightest star in the heavens and make it your own Christmas light . . . to brighten your Christmas."

Rubella tests mandatory after Jan. 1

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Prospective brides in California will be required next month to take blood tests to detect German measles before they can get a marriage license.

The statewide rubella tests were postponed last July after it was found that 41 counties did not have adequate facilities to handle the tests.

State Health and Welfare Secretary Earl Brian said that after Jan. 1 all brides-to-be must show county clerks evidence of a laboratory test for rubella antibodies in order to obtain marriage licenses.

He said women who do not have rubella antibodies are considered susceptible to the disease and run greater risk of giving birth to a defective child if infection should occur during the first three months of pregnancy.

Brian said there may be delays of tests in some areas and he urged women planning to be married to arrange for the tests at least two weeks before their weddings.

No prison riot, but celebration

BOISE, Idaho (UPI) — What looked like a near riot recently at Idaho's new state prison proved to be a real headache for three inmates Thursday.

What prison officals initially reported as an "upheaval" and a potentially riotous situation turned out to be an early celebration of the holiday season by three inmates in the new prison south of Gowen.

The three got drunk on some homemade liquor called "Squawkee" and became boisterous.

But, before they could do anything besides acquire potential hangovers, security personnel broke up their party.

'74 problems are fuel, inflation, says industrialist

NEW YORK (UPI) — Inflation and the energy crisis are the two biggest problems facing the economy in 1974, according to Charles J. Pilliod, president of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

Pilliod, responding to a year-end UPI economic poll, suggested that the energy problem could be eased by speeding up construction of the Alaskan pipeline and nuclear power plants and, as an interim measure, by reducing restrictions on high-sulphur coal.

The Goodyear president's complete answers to the survey follow:

Q. There has been much talk about the possibility of a 1974 recession. Do you have any such worry? How do you see the economy next year?

A. No, I do not foresee a recession in 1974 despite the fact that the energy crisis will certainly slow down the economy. But it will be a period of much slower growth or possibly leveling off. The strongest force in our economy should be the continued spending by business for plant and equipment and inventory rebuilding.

Q. Some business executives, economists and newspapers have characterized Mr. Nixon as a lame duck president three years before his term expires. If that proves true, what effect would it have on the economy?

A. If Congress doesn't support the President on legislation designed to strengthen our economy and to slow down inflation, this could, naturally, have a negative effect. However, I do not visualize Congress risking an economic slowdown for possible political gain because this could certainly boomerang. Mr. Nixon has had a minority Congress throughout his term as president, and there is no question that he is now working very hard to restore the confidence of the American people and both parties in Congress in his administration.

Q. Do you feel present price and wage controls help or hinder the economy? What if anything should be done about them?

A. The lesson of the past year has been that wage and price controls create distortions in the economy, result in supply shortages and cause other disruptions that would not occur if free market forces were allowed to operate. The price control law will continue in effect until April 1, 1974, and it is my opinion that it should be allowed to expire. However, between now and April 1, the government should selectively decontrol by individual industry so as to reduce the trauma of an abrupt transition on April 1 and a sudden shock of a return to a free economy.

Q. In your opinion, what are the two biggest problems facing the U.S. economy today, and what can be done about them?

A. The two biggest problems are inflation and the energy crisis. With respect to the energy problem, we should speed up construction of the Alaska pipeline, accelerate the construction of nuclear power plants, and, as interim measures, reduce restrictions on the use of high-sulphur coal, and implement conservation and allocation programs directed toward the most economic use of available materials.

As for inflation the expiration of the price control law on April 1, 1974, will result in a free marketplace. And, although there might be a sudden and temporary surge, the competitive factors will tend to put downward pressure on prices in general, providing the law of supply and demand becomes effective without resulting in severe shortages of products or raw materials.

Q. Some have said that the U.S. is becoming a second-rate economic power because of dollar-softness and the emergence of Japan and Germany as world traders. What can the U.S. do to regain international trade dominance?

A. The U.S. does not want international trade dominance because no country should have that dominance. What we really need is a long-term, favorable balance of trade and the reevaluation of the dollar along with renewed exports. Both Germany and Japan are experiencing a higher rate of inflation than the United States, and this should result in the U.S. regaining considerable lost ground in the field of international trade.

Q. Dollar devaluation and the immense international dollar overhang have led to heavy foreign investment in the U.S. economy. Do you see this as a boon or a threat?

A. We welcome foreign investments in the United States, just as U.S. investments are welcome in major free-world countries abroad. In view of heavy imports over the past few years, the increased investment by foreign firms in the U.S. is a natural move designed to replace products previously produced abroad and sold here. The new jobs created with other accompanying benefits, such as increased tax revenue and reduced requirements on foreign exchange for imports, is certainly preferred. I definitely see this as a boon rather than a threat.

For the first time, Japan's young see economy wane

By ROBERT CRABBEE

TOKYO (UPI) — Merchants in Tokyo's famous Ginza shopping district turned on all their neon signs and all their store lights the night of Oct. 11 while 44 radiant floats passed by in the Ginza Festival parade.

Today the lights of luxury-loving Ginza are out—the first casualties in a frantic program to save electricity because of the Arab oil embargo.

Japan's prospects for 1974 are just as gloomy as Ginza's streets at night. The New Year may be the most difficult and turbulent since the bleak days just after World War II.

The oil embargo is only part of the trouble facing the Japanese, whose history from 1945 to 1973 was encapsuled in two words—"economic miracle."

Rising from the ashes of their bombed-out cities, the Japanese built up the world's third-largest industrial economy, after the United States and the Soviet Union. Japanese reveled in Asia's highest standard of living.

That "economic miracle" was built on a foundation of cheap raw materials. Japan was short of natural resources, but other people had them in plenty.

"The world will be our supermarket," boasted Japan's industrial tycoons. Japan sucked in torrents of Australian iron ore, American coal, Arabian oil, turned them into ships, automobiles, panty hose, television sets and industrial machines, and sold them all over the world.

Japanese called it the "bicycle economy." Japanese companies ran on shoestring capital, and had to keep moving ahead to keep from falling over.

Now the raw materials "supermarkets" have high prices and a lot of empty shelves. Crude oil, scrap iron, aluminum and coal may never be plentiful or cheap again. The foundations of Japan's economic miracle are disappearing like the morning dew.

The the Japanese people, the readjustment will be painful.

Heading into the new year, Japan's younger generation for the first time in their lives saw the country's economy going down instead of up. From Minister of International Trade and Industry Yasuhiro Nakasone the public learned a depressing new catch phrase— "negative economic growth."

That meant slumping production and shortages of goods in the stores.

Inflation ravaged the country, melting the people's savings. The cost of living in Tokyo by the end of the year had risen at least 15 per cent.

The yen, one of the world's most sought-after currencies in early 1973, retreated in value under waves of selling on the Tokyo foreign-exchange market. Speculators scented Japan's newly revealed economic weakness, and rushed to get back into Yankee dollars.

A country that took pride in its people's traits of discipline and cooperation seethed with ugly stories of hoarding and panic buying of everything from stove oil to toilet paper.

Businessmen could hardly rent space in warehouses. These were crammed with consumer goods and raw materials snapped up by Japan's canny wholesalers in anticipation of fat profits as shortages overtake the country.

"Our weaknesses were always there,' said one of the dozens of the Japanese business community. "They just weren't apparent."

Predictions by certain American economic thin tanks that Japan would be the powerhouse of the Pacific in the 1980s, and surpass the American standard of living later on, looked hollow.

"Anybody could sit down and project those curves upward when we were doing well," says Ryosukej Kashiwagi, Japan's former Vice-Minister of Finance, and now a private banker. "But there wasn't any sign it (the reversal) was going to happen."

The man on whom the blow fell hardest was Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaa. He rode into office in 1972 on a wave of popularity. Polls showed 60 per cent of the Japanese people supported his policies of friendship with China, and dispersing Japan's congested cities.

Now he has become a Japanese Herbert Hoover. Like the 1928-1932 American President, Tanaka stepped into the driver's cab just in time to see prosperity come crashing down around him. Recent polls have shown his support at less than 25 per cent. His rivals in Japan's ruling liberal Democratic Party (LDP) are trying to bring him down, and he gets little sympathy from the public.

The LDP itself is in deep trouble, and that is a serious thing for the United States. The party has ruled Japan without a break since the country got back its independence in 1952. It is the only one of Japan's five political parties that favors close cooperation with America in Foreign affairs. The other four want to take Japan into Swedish-style neutralism.

Plagued by inflation, housing shortages and pollution, Japan's long suffering urban voters are rapidly dumping LDP, and voting in droves for Communist and Socialist Party candidates in local elections. Japan enters the new year with her six largest cities under the rule of opposition mayors elected with leftist support.

In 1974, LDP may for the first time lose control of one of the two houses in the Japanese Parliament.

LDP's majority in the House of Councillors, the upper house of the Japanese Diet (Parliament), has shrunk to eight seats. In an election next June, opposition parties have a good chance of winning a combination majority for the first time in history.

Even with LDP still in control of the other house, the possibilities for political chaos then would be enormous.

It wasn't intended that way, but the brilliantly lighted Ginza festival last October may have been the last hurrah for an era of prosperity and stability now drawing to a close for Japan.

Setters can't get too much exercise

By Dr. Frank Miller

DEAR DR. MILLER: We just bought Red and Ned, two nine-month-old Irish setters. We got them cheap because they were no longer "cute" puppies. We figured it was wise to get two of them so they could keep each other company while we are gone during the day. We are going to have to leave them in the house and we didn't want one to be too lonesome. My question concerns the amount of exercise these dogs should get. They are peppy and we want to give them enough exercise so they don't get fat but we don't want to wear them out. How do you know what's the right amount? — A.G.

Dear A. G.: Be assured on one point: You are unlikely to over-exercise healthy Irish setters. If you are taking them out for walks on a leash, and it would be dangerous to take them out in most areas without a lease, you could plan to jog with them for several hours daily. This would provide them a minimum amount of exercise. For the same reason, given any energy outlet, this breed will burn calories, not store them as fat.

Leaving them while you are gone would be a hazardous-to-the-house way to determine if they are getting enough exercise.

If not, they won't simply be content to lounge around and chat with each other about their inactivity; they will find something to do. This could be scouting the windows for something to bark at. But a more likely outlet for boredom, however, would be chewing. Chew-bone types of pacifiers might help. But if legitimate chewables didn't keep them busy enough, miscellaneous portions of the house and contents could be next. Obviously two could create this mayhem job twice as fast as one. If they don't ever resort to such activity, they are (a) well-exercised, and (b) well-trained. If both of these traits do not yet apply, better start working on them. (Temporarily, Red and Ned might need more Spartan quarters.)

DEAR DR. MILLER: I had a cat which, after a long struggle, died, it was discovered, of a disease called feline infectious peritonitis. Should she have died if the doctor had been able to tell earlier what it was? Wouldn't that have made a difference? — N.N.

Dear N.N.: Not in the outcome, I'm afraid. Mortality rate in feline infectious peritonitis is approximately 100 per cent.

Unusual sports call for Gowdy

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Even for sportscaster Curt Gowdy, who has covered virtually every kind of sport, his assignment following the Rose Bowl will be unusual: A play-by-play of a symphony.

It's part of a concert by the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra the night of Jan. 1. Other scheduled numbers include "Dance of St. Vitus," "The Grossest Fugue," and "Concerto for Piano vs. Orchestra."

Gowdy will be flown by helicopter from the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, according to a spokesman for the philharmonic, "to appear as himself doing a sportscast of the first movement of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony with Prof. Peter Schickele at the Los Angeles Music Center."

DEVOTED TO EARNING — Vartakes Migrdichian, right, immigrated to the United States from Armenia and made a killing in the stock market. Now retired from the American Cyanamid Co., the scientist went on to finance the educations of 248 Armenian students in the U. S. He says he is no longer a millionaire—"I've given most of it away." Here he discusses his specialty, organic synthesis, with Cyanamid technician Sandra Jackson at the company's research laboratory in Stamford, Conn.

Insurance executive sees possible recession in '74

NEW YORK (UPI) — The chairman of a major insurance company says there is a possibility of a "significant slowdown, if not a recession" in the 1974 economy.

R. Manning Brown, Jr., chairman of New York Life Insurance Co., the country's fourth largest, also thought that price and wage controls are doing more harm than good and that the U.S. system of financing political campaigns should be reformed.

Brown's exact answers to a year-end United Press International economic poll of major corporations and financial institutions follow:

Q. There has been much talk about the possibility of a 1974 recession. Do you have any such worry? How do you see the economy next year?

A. We are very near the top of one of the nation's largest business booms that seems most unlikely to sustain itself in 1974.

A significant slowdown, if not a recession, is a matter of genuine concern. And the energy crisis will clearly compound the problems in an overheated economy. The outlook for 1974 is for a lessening of real output, prevailing higher prices, and bigger government deficits.

Specifically, real gross national product in 1974 will probably not grow at anywhere near the 6 per cent rate anticipated this year. Even the most optimistic forecasters look for real growth to go down to roughly half of this year's rate. Unfortunately, inflation and unemployment are likely to continue to be significant problems in 1974.

Other problems of a softer economy next year also seem apparent. Chances are we will see a slowdown in the purchase of autos and other big ticket items. New housing activity may be down significantly from the 1973 pace, reflecting, among other things, the difficulties in the single family mortgage market that developed at midyear. Capital spending plans seem quite strong, but there is some doubt that they can be carried out in view of the economic trouble spots and energy problems that lie ahead. Corporate profits this year should be about 30 percent above last year, but they will probably decline in 1974 as a result of the generally slower pace of economic activity.

The energy crisis, with its reverberating effects on the economy, will severely challenge the nation throughout 1974. The clear need now is for the administration, for Congress, for business, and for the American people to pull together in meeting this crisis.

Q. Some business executives, economists and newspapers have characterized Mr. Nixon as a lame duck president three years before his term expires. If that proves true, what effect will it have on the economy?

A. Political instability inevitably contributes to economic uncertainty. We have seen ample evidence of this in the gyrations of both the stock market and the international monetary market.

These events are influenced by many factors, including the energy crisis and the general outlook for a softer economy. But they are undoubtedly much more reflective of the crisis of confidence in the aftermath of the Watergate scandal and all of its sordid ramifications than they are of the fact that Mr. Nixon's term expires in three years.

It is an inescapable reality that the health of our economy depends to a great extent on the faith and confidence that people have in our institutions and in their leadership. Unless the President can somehow successfully dispel the doubts about his administration and restore confidence in his ability to lead, the economy will, unfortunately, continue to feel the added burden of this national uncertainty.

Q. Do you feel present price and wage controls help or hinder the economy? What, if anything, should be done about them?

A. Unfortunately, the government's direct controls on prices and wages haven't worked too well. And at the present time, they're probably doing more harm than good.

The plain fact is that even under the best of circumstances such controls could not long suppress price increases in an overheated economy.

Current bottlenecks and shortages are the best evidence we have that price and wage controls will not work satisfactorily in our economy over an extended period of time. And the longer we persist with them, the more likely they are to further disrupt the marketplace.

The controls program should be ended now since every additional day that we stay with them will strengthen arguments that "now is not the time." It's true, of course, that with any ending

Eco-groups rip House energy bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A coalition of Environmental groups says the House-passed version of the National Energy Emergency Bill is "a public disgrace.'

It said Monday there is little in the bill which will ease the current situation—"most provisions deal with the long term ... and will have disastrous effects."

Such groups as the Sierra Club, Friends of the Earth, the American Public Health Association and the National Wildlife Association as well as various state groups joined in a National Clean Air Coalition in charging that the only emergency the House resolved was one "to see that the special interests received their Christmas present on time."

"Running under the banner of the 'Energy Crisis', special interests such as the energy companies have used the House emergency legislation for their own selfish purposes," coalition coordinator Richard Lahn said.

The coalition spotlighted five House amendments for attack.

One, it said, would "effectively suspend for six years the regulation of emissions from power plants."

A second would take power away from the states to regulate air pollution.

A third restricts what kind of transportation controls the government can order to cleanup the air.

The fourth would freeze car exhaust standards, and a fifth would give power projects exemption from the law requiring environmental impact statements on new projects.

State of firsts

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Indiana's economy has been acclaimed as a world leader in the production of limestone and a frontrunner nationally in manufacturing of trailers, prefabricated homes and band instruments.

But the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce also reports Hoosierland is a leader in the making of funeral caskets.

American citizens contribute $19.6 billion to charity annually

It's a fact. But not likely to be a headline. Violence and scandal are the staples of news; individual charity and kindness go unremarked. This is not to make any Pollyannish assumption that violence does not exist in harrowing abundance. In perspective we must see that violence is in all of us. So is God. The time is now to try His way, in concert, on a scale never before attempted. Get together with your family, friends, neighbors, or co-workers to discuss the problems of violence and how you can work together to help solve them. # Utility chief fears 'energy recession'

NEW YORK (UPI) — The chairman and chief executive officer of the country's second largest utility is worried about the possibility of a 1974 "energy recession."

Leslie H. Warner of General Telephone and Electronics, which had $4.33 billion operating revenues and 183,000 employes last year, still believes a recession can be avoided but thinks the chance of an energy recession is greater since the Arab oil embargo.

Warner's answers to a year end United Press International poll of major corporations and financial institutions follow:

Q. There has been much talk about the possibility of a 1974 recession. Do you have any such concern? How do you view the outlook for the economy for next year?

A. Any consideration of the outlook for the economy in 1974 has to be conditioned upon future developments in connection with the energy shortage. Prior to the oil embargo we were anticipating a slowdown in the economy in 1974, but not a recession. While we still believe that a recession can be avoided, the risks of an "energy recession" are now much greater.

Q. Some business executives, economists, and newspapers have characterized Mr. Nixon as a lame duck president three years before his term expires. If that proves true, what effect would it have on the economy?

A. I do not think that it will prove true, but if it does, it obviously would have serious effects upon the economy. These would include the inability to cope with the energy shortage, the inability to control inflation, and less effectiveness in both domestic and international situations which could accelerate and broaden their impact.

Q. Do you feel present price and wage controls help or hinder the economy? What, if anything, should be done about them?

A. Prior to the energy crisis, I favored prompt decontrol. Now I feel that a more cautious approach should be followed until we can assess the inflationary effects of the energy shortage.

Q. In your opinion, what are the two biggest problems facing the U.S. economy today, and what can be done about them?

A. The energy shortage and inflation are our two principal concerns in today's economy.

While stringent energy conservation measures such as rationing may be necessary as a short-term remedy, adequate supplies of energy in the long run are absolutely essential to maintain economic growth. We fully support present measures to conserve energy.

As indicated in my response to question No. 3, all reasonable and practicable steps must be taken to reduce the rate of inflation, but the extent to which price and wage controls should be maintained will depend upon the economic effects of the energy shortage.

Q. Some have said that the U.S. is becoming a second-rate economic power because of dollar softness and the emergence of Japan and Germany as world traders. What can the U.S. do to regain international trade dominance?

Q. Some have said that the U.S. is becoming a second-rate economic power because of dollar softness and the emergence of Japan and Germany as world traders. What can the U.S. do to regain international trade dominance?

A. The dollar has actually been strengthening since the second devaluation, and in the eyes of many experts this reflects the fact that the dollar is probably the best currency bargain in the world today. The fact is that our trading picture has brightened considerably in recent months, enabling us to better compete with the other major trading nations, especially Japan and Germany.

International trade, of course, is a two-way street. A nation pays for its imports through the foreign exchange earnings of its exports of goods and services and the return on its capital invested abroad. For a healthy world economy—one less likely to be upset by political disruptions—there should be a vigorous flow of goods, services, and capital among the world's trading nations, and not trade dominance by any one nation.

On balance, it seems to me that the dollar devaluation is a decided plus for the U.S. in international markets. And the dollar overhang, while not to be minimized, does not look to be as serious a problem as it did several years ago when the dollar was weakening instead of strengthening, as is currently the case.

Q. Has the Watergate investigation of corporate campaign contributions given you any thoughts on how campaigns might better be financed? Do you have any specific recommendations for change or do you feel the present system is workable?

A. It is clearer than it has ever been that there must be a better way to finance political campaigns. The present system is simply not good enough.

It's not clear at this time, however, what features a new election financing law should include. But there are a number of possibilities—all of which should be seriously considered by Congress. These include a stringent limit on individual contributions, restricting contributions to check or money order and not in cash, using some form of public financing, limiting use of television and other media, extending the present voluntary $1 check-off on income tax returns for financing presidential campaigns, and limiting the campaign period itself.

In any final analysis, however, the effectiveness of even the best of election financing laws must inevitably depend not only on how effectively that law is administered, but equally important on the personal integrity of the candidates, the people who run their campaigns, and the people who contribute to them.

of controls, there is likely to be some sort of post-controls bulge in prices, especially in those items now in short supply. But for the longer pull, getting rid of controls should be in the best interest of all concerned.

Q. In your opinion, what are the two biggest problems facing the U.S. economy today and what can be done about them?

A. There are, it seems to me, three major problems facing the American economy—inflation, economic controls, and the energy crisis. And all three are obviously related.

Inflation is fed by large federal deficits and massive infusions of money and credit by the Federal Reserve System. This is what's been happening in recent years. A successful fight against inflation depends to a large extent on sound national economic policies that effectively balance our capabilities with our overall spending plans. Controls are obviously not the answer because they deal with symptoms—rising prices and wages—rather than the causes— excessive credit creation and deficit spending by the Federal government.

Therefore, a check on federal spending and a curb on excessive money and credit growth by the Federal Reserve are essential if we are to achieve lower rates of inflation.

And the energy crisis, which affects and pervades all segments of the economy, highlights the critical need for an immediate national effort to deal with current shortages and a long-range program to increase oil reserves and to develop alternate sources of energy.

Q. Dollar devaluation and the immense international dollar overhang have led to heavy foreign investment in the U.S. economy. Do you see this as a boon or a threat?

A. In the short run, the inflow of capital resulting from foreign investment in the U.S. is beneficial because of the positive effect it has upon the balance of payments. From the long-term viewpoint, the return of earnings made in the U.S. to the countries making the investments will lessen that positive effect. Although the size and diversity of the U.S. economy can support moderate levels of direct foreign investment, we would be opposed to significant foreign investments in key industries related to national security.

U.S. tourist spending ebbs

COLOGNE, West Germany (UPI) — American tourists counted their dollars twice this summer and spent 20 per cent less in West Germany, according to an estimate by the Central Tourist Office.

Rising costs and the second devaluation of the U.S. currency in only 12 months were the main reasons for the decline.

2 free gifts on Christmas

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Here is a rather peculiar Christmas hand. South was very kind to poor West. Who else could take two clubs tricks with that nine card suit to the queen. At the same time it was false generosity. West got two tricks, but East lost three he would have made oherwise.

We won't spend much time on the bidding. Anything can happen with freak hands and if this were a duplicate game there might well be as many bidding series as players.

South played the king of clubs from dummy rather unhappily. It looked as if there would be no way to avoid the loss of three tricks in the red suits. Then East played a red card and after long thought South saw that he was going to make his contract after all.

He overtook dummy's king of clubs with his ace. Then he drew trumps with three leads and cashed his king of diamonds.

West discarded a club whereupon South led a heart to dummy's ace and threw West in with a club.

That was West's first Christmas trick. West had to lead another club. South let West hold that trick also while discarding a heart loser from dummy and a diamond loser from his own hand. West led another club. South discarded dummy's last heart; ruffed in his hand and claimed his contract.

Topless bathing for men only at Santa Barbara

SANTA BARBARA (UPI) — A simplified interpretation of a new ordinance banning nudity on county beaches is men can go topless, but women can't.

The ordinance was passed by the Board of Supervisors Monday by a 3-2 vote as an overflow crowd of some 250 persons, most of them opposing the measure, jammed into the meeting room.

The two supervisors who voted againt the ordinance said they believe it will be overturned by the courts because one section prohibits women from appearing topless.

Opponents of the measure contend it could be construed as discriminatory because it permits males to wear topless swimming suits.

Half million in German army

BONN (UPI) — West Germany's armed forces total nearly half a million men.

Defense ministry figures say there are 319,000 soldiers, 111,000 airmen and 37,000 sailors on duty.

Top businessmen view economy with concern

By DEAN C. MILLER
UPI Business Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ten of 13 chief executives of major American corporations and financial institutions polled by UPI feel serious concern about the 1974 economy. The other three in this year-end survey were more optimistic but foresaw an economic slowdown.

The leaders in steel, banking, autos, insurance, utilities, railroads, rubber, electronics, computers and brokerage investments represent a total of $65 billion in sales, another $41 billion in operating revenues and assets and 2.18 million employees.

In response to six other questions, the bosses at IBM, General Motors, General Electric, Bank of America, RCA, 3M, Goodyear, New York Life Insurance, Bethlehem Steel, Union Pacific Railroad, General Telephone & Electronics, Gulf & Western and Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis generally agreed that:

—Inflation and the energy crisis are the greatest dangers to the 1974 economy.

—Wage and price controls should be removed.

— Dollar devaluation has helped the United States reestablish its world trading position.

—Recent and heavy foreign investment in the United States is a positive, not a negative, force for the economy.

—Reforms are needed in the financing of political campaigns.

Asked how the economy would be affected if Mr. Nixon became a "lame duck" president because of Watergate, seven declined comment. The others said that the economy would suffer if the administration could not generate congressional and public support over the next three years.

None of the executives polled flatly predicted a recession in the classical definition of the word: two or more consecutive quarters of declining Gross National Product growth. A few came close. And most saw significant declines in the real growth of GNP.

"We're at a stage of deceleration which could result in a recession or a 'soft landing,'" said James W. Davant, chairman and chief executive of Paine, Webber, a big Wall Street firm.

Leslie H. Warner, chairman and chief executive of GTE, the country's second largest utility, thought there was a "risk of an energy recession."

"I do not foresee an outright recession, but I do foresee 'stagflation,'" said Charles G. Bluhdorn, chairman of Gulf & Western. Stagflation, a word crossbreeding of stagnation and inflation, produces below average economic growth amid inflation and significant unemployment, similar to the conditions in 1970 and early 1971.

"A significant slowdown, if not a recession, is a matter of genuine concern," said R. Manning Brown, Jr., chairman of New York Life Insurance.

In the middle range of pessimism were GE and Bank of America.

"It (a recession) is possible but improbable in our judgment," said A.W. Clausen, president of the big San Francisco bank. "But we see the economy growing only from 1 to 2 per cent."

"We expect a sharp slowdown in the real GNP growth rate, from about 6 per cent this year to about 2.2 per cent next," said Reginald H. Jones, chairman and chief executive at GE.

Frank T. Cary, chairman and president of IBM, Robert W. Sarnoff, chairman and chief executive of RCA, Stewart S. Cort, chairman of Bethlehem Steel, and Charles J. Pilliod, president of Goodyear, all were in agreement that the economy will slow.

Among the most optimistic was Harry Heltzer, chairman and chief executive of 3M. "The economy is basically strong, so 1974 should be good," he said. "But it all depends on how the country responds to the energy crisis.

Frank E. Barnett, chairman and chief exeuctive of the Union Pacific Corp., echoed this thinking. "The economy as a whole is good but could experience a severe dislocation because of the ener-

All the company leaders agreed alternative sources of fuel should be developed as quickly as possible to eliminate our dependence on oil. Cort of Bethlehem and Sarnoff of RCA suggested a crash energy program be instituted similar to the one the United States used in putting a man on the moon.

Many of the executives thought rationing of fuel eventually would come and all agreed that new and tighter governmental and individual disciplines will be necessary to avoid an energy debacle.

On the question of how political campaigns might better be financed, the exeuctives generally agreed a new system must be devised. They also had some solid suggestions.

Cort of Bethlehem thought that contributions and campaign spending should be limited. "The spending has gotten out of hand at all levels," he said.

Brown of NYLIC said the present system is "not good enough" and suggested individual contributions should be limited and restricted to checks and money orders. No cash. Heltzer of 3M wanted to widen the base of contributions.

"The present system is not working and should be overhauled," said Barnett of Union Pacific. "We might make campaigns shorter and encourage broad based support through tax or other incentives."

There was general agreement that campaign time should be cut drastically, spending sharply reduced and the public encouraged to participate in the financing.

Smog element causes wide crop damage

RIVERSIDE (UPI) — Smog scientists aren't sure why, but a little-known pollutant nicknamed PPN caused widespread crop destruction last month during a two-day siege of smog here.

Scientists at the state Air Pollution Research Center at UC Riverside identified the culprit as peroxypropionyl nitrate, an element of smog discovered just 10 years ago.

PPN levels reached 10 parts per billion during the smog attack Nov. 9-11 in Riverside and San Bernardino counties.

Researchers could offer no explanation why widespread crops of leafy vegetables reacted to PPN, but suggested the smog attack might have struck during the plants' rapid growth period, making them especially vulnerable.

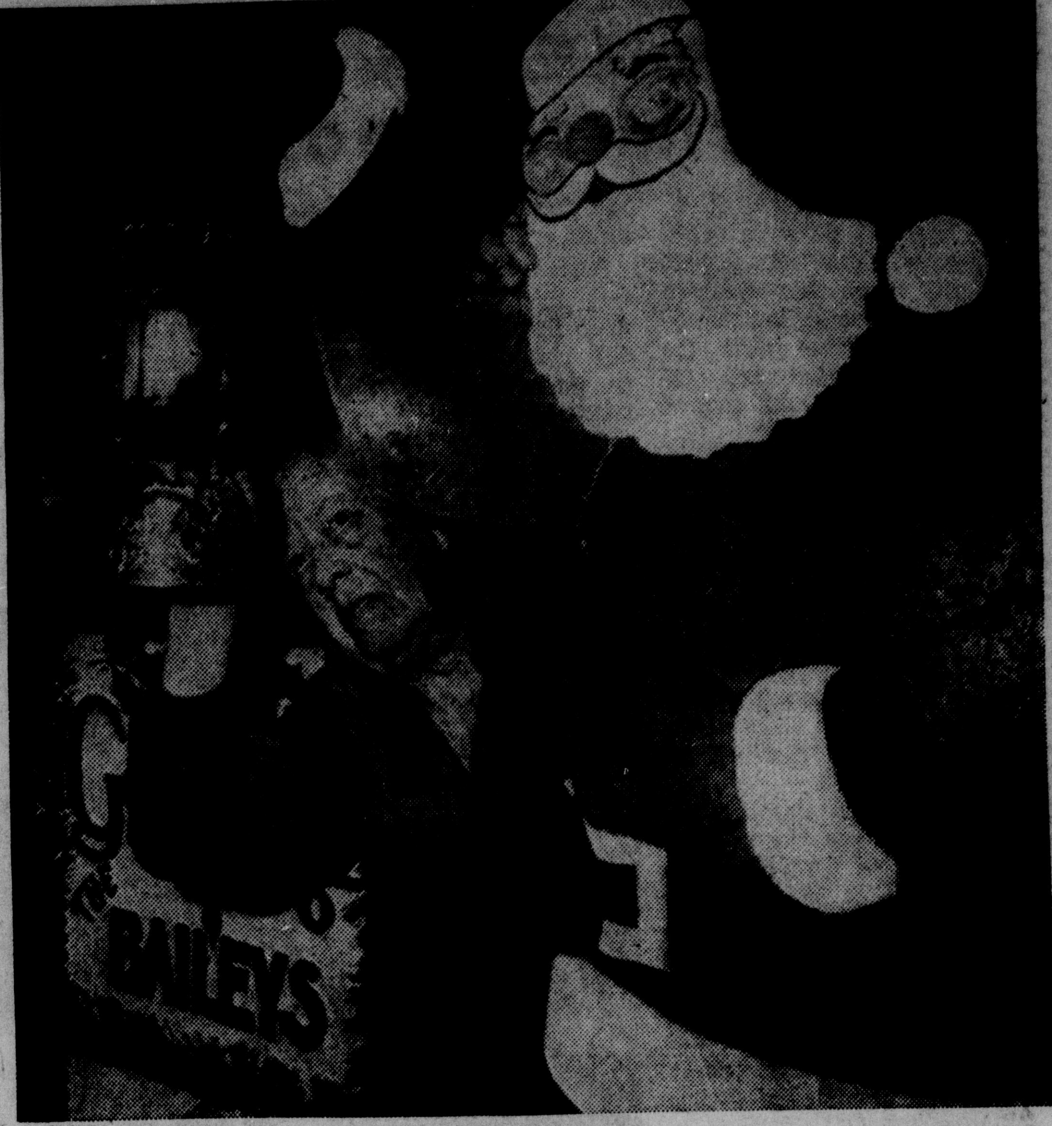
Police advised 'take bus to deter crime'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The city's patrolmen are being advised to take the bus once in a while.

The move is not to rest their weary feet but to fight crime on the municipal railway buses.

Supervising Capt. Jeremiah P. Taylor said recently that officers' presence might help cut down the number of assaults by youths on elderly passengers.

Policemen were asked to take the bus "where practical and feasible."



ISN'T THE SAME — William F. Bailey of Salem, Ore., went along with the President's request to cut down on outdoor displays—he put a kerosene lantern in Santa's hand. He says without lights, the Christmas season is not quite the same.

Earthquake capital of the U.S.

Rancher rides range astride San Andreas fault

HOLLISTER, Calif. (UPI — Scientists do more earthquake-watching on Howard Harris' ranch than anywhere else in the world. But the 64-year-old rancher rides the constant-trembling San Andreas fault line with nary a worry.

His ranch is located eight miles south of Hollister, a city of 7,500 persons called the "Earthquake Capital of the United States."

The area has been unusually quake-free so far this year, despite a prediction in the spring by government scientists that there would be a heavy temblor centered on the Harris ranch.

The 3,500-acre Harris ranch runs along both sides of the San Andreas fault for about five miles. It has so many earthquakes that he turned over part of his property for the scientists to play on. They come from the University of California, Stanford and the U.S. Geological Survey to test out schemes for predicting quakes.

It is easy to see the fault line cutting through the terrain on the ranch, and how the earth is moving about two inches a year on one side. At one place the fault cuts a deep crack, 50 feet wide. Harris has built a road into it for the curious geologists.

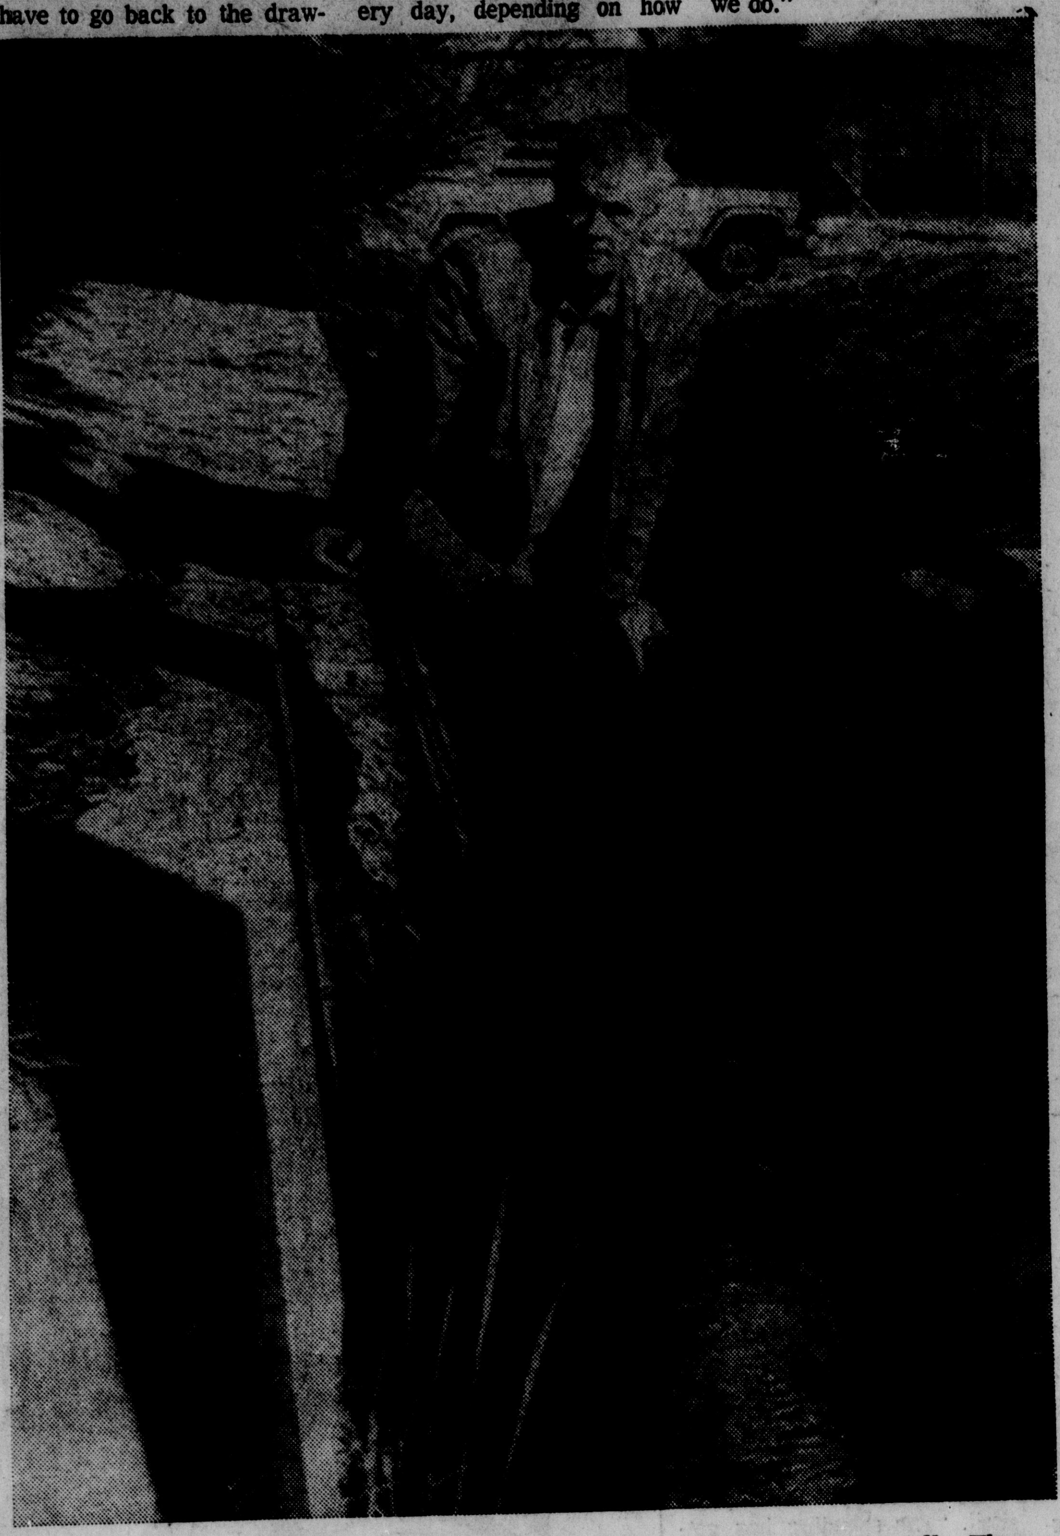
"At the upper end of the ranch you can see where our creek has moved four miles north in the last 20,000 years," he says. "Sometime, thousands of years away, Los Angeles will be moving north past San Francisco."

The visiting scientists have installed elaborate devices for measuring every movement of the earth, the sound of the rocks creaking, and the magnetic fields which they say are related to earth movements.

Early this year the government scientists proudly made their first official prediction of a quake. It was to happen on Harris' ranch within a couple of months. When nature did not cooperate, the scientists admitted they would have to go back to the drawing boards on predicting.

"I can predict one for next Tuesday," says Harris. "And I couldn't go far wrong. If you look at the statistics, once a year we have a really sharp quake. Every three or four months we have one maybe 4 or 5 on the Richter scale . . . We have one here every day, depending on how severe it has to be to be called a quake.'

The rancher says he can tell when an earthquake is imminent by watching his cattle or the birds. "They sense these things," he says. "We hear a low rumble before a quake. The cattle and birds pick this up long before we do."



CULVERT SLIPPAGE — Howard Harris stands in culvert near his ranch in Hollister and points to break in the culvert wall. There has been a horizontal slippage of nearly 6 inches due to tremors.

EARTHQUAKE OBSERVATORY — Instrumentation on his ranch is inspected by Howard Harris. The sophisticated devices report even the most minute seismic shock or slippage along San Andreas fault.

By MAXINE YEE

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — With a cry for relaxation and creativity, some men have shoved aside their footballs and basketballs and replaced them with needle and thread.

Businessmen all over the country are trying their hand at what they once called a "sissy" hobby—needlepoint.

It is needlework done with wool thread and cnavas, or scrim.

Barbara H. Donnelly, who is one of the foremost authorities on crewel and needlepoint, has written a book on the two hobbies, entitled "The Crewel Neelepoint World," published by Morgan and Morgan, Inc., of New York.

Miss Donnelly said during an interview here that men all over the country are trying their hand at it to relax and to create.

"Men have more leisure time, and they want to see something they've created," she said.

"Everything is done for them. Everything is mechanized, and they want something that is personal to them that they've created."

Miss Donnelly said needlepoint can relieve everyday tensions and act as an "ego reinforcement."

Anyone can learn to needlepoint, she said.

"If you can count to four, you can do any kind of needlepoint stitch."

Most of the stitches are done over a count of four threads on a piece of linen or canvas, she explained. There are two types of stitches—the straight and the slanted—and from these two, hundreds of variations can be made.

In crewel, there are 2,000 variations; in needlepoint, there are 200.

"The art of crewel or needlepoint," Miss Donnelly said, "is merely the mixing of these variations for a design. Once you've learned the basics, you can do it as you like. You can use your imagination."

But a person doesn't have to learn the hundreds of variations to do either crewel or needlepoint. She said a person can learn as few as one variation and be able to complete a design, and that variation can be he basic "in and out" tent stitch.

Cost is minimal, she said, as compared to other hobbies. The only real investment a person puts into needlework is time.

For a woman, Miss Donnelly said "it's fun just to pass time. It's not like housework that you want to get through as soon as possible. It's a hobby—not work."

Arab tells how oil squeeze can be halted

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The Arab oil squeeze will continue until the United States pressures Israel to pull out of the Sinai Desert and the Golan Heights, the head of a pro-Arab organization said Monday.

Dr. T. M. Mehdi, secretary general of the Action Committee on American-Arab relations, also called for an intensified public relations campaign to get the Arab side of the issue over to the American public. "So far the urgent stories have been about what to do about the energy crisis, rather than explain why the Arabs are causing it," he told a news conference. He proposed that each oil-producing Arab nation contribute $1 million to a fund to finance the campaign.

Steel firms unsure of '74 picture

By RUDY CERNKOVIC
UPI Business Writer

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Steel production boomed to a record 110 million tons in 1973 and an industry spokesman believes that 1974 should produce not too much less—unless the fuel shortage becomes critical.

"While production will dip somewhat, mills should continue to operate at full capacity next year," the spokesman said." In 1973, we produced and shipped at capacity levels. Many mills had high inventories which they sold, adding to total shipments. But next year there will be no inventories."

On Nov. 30, three major steelmakers said fuel shortages may force production and employe cutbacks in early 1974.

While there were no immediate energy problems, U.S. Steel, Jones & Laughlin Steel and Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corps. said oil shortages could strike at the heart of the steel industry unless sufficient fuel allocations are maintained.

"We need oil for fuel injunctions in our blast and coke furnaces," a J & L spokesman said. "If it got real bad, the whole industry could be hit at the level of steel production."

A U. S. Steel spokesman said the No. 1 steel producer did not face "any curtailments as of this monent except a minor one at our ammonia plant at Clairton (Pa.), and that's because of a curtailment in the natural gas we need to drive certain equipment."

The No. 6 plant was shut down in early November, the spokesman said, but few workers were affected and were shifted to other operations.

"As of now, no one can really predict what's going to happen," the spokesman said.

The Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel spokesman said all energy and most raw materials are in tight supply.

"What we are getting is like pulling teeth."

In 1972, the industry shipped 92 million tons of steel, two million under the previous record set in 1969.

Specialty steel, previously hit by foreign imports, enjoyed a boom year. Allegheny Ludlum, the world's largest specialty steel producer, said stainless steel would reach 1.1 million mill product tons of production in 1973. This is a substantial increase from 855,000 tons in 1972 and 718,000 tons in 1971.

Noting the relative decline of foreign imports and the strong U.S. demand for specialty steels, Roger S. Ahlbrandt, chairman of Allegheny Ludlum Industries, Inc., said:

"These factors combine to make 1973 an exceptional year for stainless—with prospects that 1974 will be another outstanding year."

But the prosperous picture for 1974 could be blurred by the energy crisis and pollution control.

A spokesman for Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel, the nation's ninth largest producer, said pollution control affects production to the extent of obtaining the right type of coal.

"But we face another problem," the spokesman said. 'We had a good 1973 but next year we face continued shortages in critical supplies, especially zinc. Copper, aluminum and lubricating oils also are in short supply. Scrap prices are now $100 a ton, about twice as much as last year."

The industry spokesman said the energy crunch will affect transportation.

"Limited supply of fuel may hamper truck movement," he said. "There already is a shortage of box cars and railroads which are financially pressed may not be able to furnish more. Will the trains have more runs? Will their be enough fuel for diesel-operated trucks? Right now we don't know."

Pollution control has been a nagging problem. In November the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) slapped U.S. Steel with 63 additional pollution violations at its coke works at Clairton.

Earlier, Allegheny County and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania accused the corporation of violating a consent decree pertaining to pollution abatement at Clairton. The decree was worked out last year in Allegheny County Common Pleas Court.

U. S. Steel contended the EPA has "no proper role" in the issue because it was "being pursued vigorously" by the county and state. It said it was willing to listen to any new proposals made by the county or state.

The industry spokesman claimed steel companies generally operate with 90 per cent clean efficiency level.

Bethlehem Steel Corp., No. 2 producer, said the cost of meeting air-pollution control standards forced the eventual cutback at its plant in Johnstown, Pa.

Last June, Bethlehem announced it would eliminate 4,700 Johnstown jobs over the next four years. This would reduce the work force from the present 11,800 to 7,100 by 1977. The payroll will dip more than 30 per cent, from $130 million annually to about $90 million.

A spokesman for Bethlehem said the energy crisis has clouded the economic outlook for 1974.

"But, barring any unforeseen dislocations caused by energy shortages, it does not now appear to us that there will be a recession next year, although the economy may slow down," he said.

"Capital spending should continue at a good rate; business inventories are now at a low level and there should be some rebuilding of stock; and the dollar devaluations have made export trade generally more attractive. The economy may be cooling down, but the demand for steel is still very strong, and at this time, we expect it to continue to be strong in 1974."

He said the energy crisis is very serious —"especially as it could affect the steel industry."

Steel is a basic material used by all parts of our economy," he said.

"A shortage of steel would only make the energy problem worse." He said steel is a vital ingredient in development of oil wells, gas wells, coal mines and in the construction of electric generating plants and petroleum refineries.

He noted the steel industry now employs 550,000 persons.

A 15 per cent reduction from the industry's estimated 1973 fuel oil consumption would cost America about 6.8 million tons of steel and more than 30,000 steelmaking jobs, he said.

If the industry were limited to its 1972 oil consumption, it would result in a loss of 12 million tons of steel and 60,000 steelmaking jobs," he said.

Turning to pollution control's effect on the steel industry, the spokesman said environmental protection was having a severe impact on all aspects of operations by increasing both operating costs and capital spending while holding earnings down.

"For Bethlehem alone we foresee nearly a half-billion dollars in capital spending to meet existing pollution control laws," he said.

U.S. Steel's income for the first nine months of 1973 was $221.3 million, or $4.09 per share on sales of $5.1 billion. This compared with the 1972 nine-month income of $102.3 million or $1.89 per share on sales of $3 billion.

The Cost of Living Council granted U.S. Steel a sheet price increase of 2.4 per cent in October, too late to be counted in the nine-month report. The firm has asked for a 6.5 per cent price boost on a wide range of steel products effective Jan. 1. These would include rods, wire, bars, semifinished plate, structural, tubular and railroad products. The products make up about 50 per cent of industry shipments.

Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., the fifth largest producer, said it expects to earn about $48 million this year, its best since its record year in 1966.

The firm shipped out more steel this year although the ranks of workers were cut from 41,000 in 1969 to the present 33,000.

There was a major change in J&L's management. Chairman William R. Roesch, leader in the firm's turnabout from a $21 million dollar loss in 1970 to the current substantial profits, leaves the firm Jan. 1 to be president and chief executive officer of Kaiser Industries in California.

Roesch was succeeded by Roscoe G. Hanyie, president of LTV Corp., Dallas, which controls 81 per cent of J&L stock.

The current three-year contract between the 10 major basic steel producers and the United Steelworkers (USW) expires July 31, 1974.

In the past, the specter of a strike hovered when union and industry prepared for negotiations. But there is a different climate for 1974. Buoying hopes a new contract will be reached amicably is the historic Experimental Negotiating Agreement (ENA) —popularly known as the "no-strike" pact —signed last March by union and industry.

Contract talks open in Washington in late January.

The cost-of-living clause restored in the present contract after a lapse of 12 years will be a major union demand in the new talks.

Since June, 1972, basic steel workers have received a total of 30 cents an hour increase because of the cost-of-living feature.

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS), the average hourly earnings of basic steelworkers is $5.75.

Solon says U.S. should vie with private oil companies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Contending that the energy crisis is a product of "our economic and political machinery," Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, D-Ill., said that a government corporation should be set up to compete with private oil firms.

"The energy crisis is not a crisis of nature's supply," said Stevenson. "The energy crisis is a crisis of our economic and political machinery —of big oil and big government."

His proposed legislation, he said, would "repair some of that faulty machinery."

Stevenson made the remarks as he opened a Senate hearing on his bill to establish a government corporation with authority to explore for oil and gas reserves and manage them in competition with private oil firms.

Sen. Dewey F. Barlett, R-Okla., a witness before the panel, predicted the corporation would be characterized by" bureaucratic incompetence.

"A federal oil and gas corporation would be a deterrent to the aggressive development of this nation's oil and gas resources," Bartlett said. "The taxpayer is being asked to finance a very expensive play toy of the Congress.

Frank N. Ikard, president of American Petroleum Institute, testified: "This new government-owned corporation, even if it enjoyed the most phenomenal success, could not hope to contribute even a trickle of oil to the nation's supply until late in this decade, at the very earliest."

The Bahamas in midst of crime wave

NASSAU, Bahamas (UPI) — A major crime wave has developed in the Bahamas in the wake of widespread unemployment among the young.

Rpaes, hold-ups, break-ins and car thefts have increased more than 100 per cent in the last year, and visitors as well as residents have been the victims.

Almost all offenses have involved the use of firearms despite strict gun laws that forbid even police to be armed.

Robberies are now so prevalent that police have instituted night-time roadblocks to check the contents of vehicles. One such surprise search of two cars revealed its youthful occupants armed with one shotgun, two revolvers, four cutlasses, one crowbar and a jack.

Although the government has tried to suppress information about crimes involving visitors, hotel guests walking along the beach, many in daytime, are known to have been attacked, robbed and beaten by armed youths. Earlier this year two Canadians, in separate incidents, were attacked and beaten while playing golf.

The mushrooming crime rate has produced an unprecedented demand for iron grilles, burglar alarms and guard dogs. One grill maker reports he is months behind on orders. The local animal society has more requests for dogs than it can fill.

Four years ago the Bahamas had virtually no unemployment. But an overly nationalistic immigration policy on the part of the newly-elected Progressive Liberal Party has brought investment to a standstill and driven out thousands of foreign residents.

The result has been large-scale unemployment, now believed close to 15 per cent. Most seriously affected are unskilled school leavers who, under normal circumstances, would have been absorbed into lower level clerical jobs.

Complicating the problem is the fact that the country's major industry — tourism — which might have been expected to utilize some of this manpower, is also ailing. Hotel staff has been put on rotation as a compromise to being laid off.

Commensurate with rising unemployment is the increase in the drug trade. Police say the Bahamas is now experienceing an 80 per cent annual increase in marijuana offenses.

Although recognizing the crime problem, the government appears to lack direction in solving it.

Modern Ben Hur finds a way to beat gas crisis

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Frustrated after he could find no gas stations open, a man donned a Roman helmet and long flowing cape to drive a Ben-Hur style of chariot pulled by two horses down a crowded freeway Monday.

"I decided to burn hay instead of gas," said the chariot owner, Nick Gazaxidas, owner of a downtown Greek restaurant.

"It really screwed up traffic," a California Highway Patrol spokesman said of the chariot, which Gazaxidas reported had been used in the movie "Ben Hur."

Gazaxidas was escorted off U.S. 50 at the nearest exit after authorities observed "the hazard he was causing" during morning rush hour traffic. He was not cited.

"Three days ago I couldn't find any gas stations open and I thought I better do something. Then I started thinking of my ancestors," Gazaxidas said later. "I decided to burn hay instead of gas."

Declaring the chariot will be his transportation from now on, Gazaxidas said the highway patrol "found it too slow with only two horses, so maybe I'll use four."

He said he purchased the chariot three years ago at a MGM movie lot auction.

Raylene Gaul married in Irwindale rites

Haynes Photo

MRS. JOHN SAUSEDO

Miss Raylene Marie Gaul and John Anthony Sausedo were married in Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church in Irwindale.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Shelby Gaul of Pomona was given in marriage by her parents at the double-ring Mass. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Ted Sausedo of Azusa.

The bride's gown of organza was accented with panels of venise lace on the high collar, bodice and cuffs of the long sleeves. The flounce of the skirt swept to a watteau train.

A Juliet-styled cap held the bride's three-tier, elbow-length veil. She carried white carnations with yellow baby's breath.

Mrs. Sharon Giddens, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Terri Lindebaum, Miss Suzy Roach, Miss Anna Licata, cousin of the bride, Miss Madelyne Sausedo, sister of the groom, Miss Yulanda Ramasos, cousin of the groom, and Mrs. Connie Gaul.

Gina Carlos was flower girl and Peter Sereono was ring bearer.

Serving as best man was Dave Morales. Ushers were Craig and Shelby Gaul, brothers of the bride, Jeff Marcus, Paul McCulley, Bob Pachéco and Art Vasquez.

A reception at the Covina Women's Club honored the couple who honeymooned at Las Vegas.

They will reside in Azusa.

DECORATING WINNERS — Miss Joyce Lyon, R.N., Surgery supervisor, left, and Mrs. John Irwin, laboratory technologist, were winners in the annual Christmas ornament-making competition at Garfield-Cottage Hospital. Seventy-two hospital employes participated in the contest to make decorations for the hospital tree. Patients Mrs. James Reagan, Mrs. William Cunningham Jr. and Bill Lucas were the judges. Miss Lyon won the prize for the most beautiful ornament with her mobile made from melted pharmacy bottles, and Mrs. Irwin for the most original decoration of a Santa Claus in a test tube. Ornaments had to be made from materials used in the hospital.

Her fiance is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Klamm of Pomona. He is a 1973 graduate of Garey High School and is employed at Boy's Market.

Bright birds

A baby's first toy idea: a good one might be the bright colored bird or fish mobiles that attach firmly to the crib so baby can follow the pleasant movements with his eyes. Soon he can hold things. When that happens it is time for the first rattles, the first squeaking rubber toy and the gym sets that fasten across a crib. Soft dollies and animals are fun to feel. Bright disks or strings of large beads to bang or chew are also good. In his bath, floating toys will keep baby happy.

S.S. France chef quits, goes home to do cooking

LE HAVRE, France (UPI) — One of the great chefs of France is hanging up his white cap and retiring from what gourmets call the greatest restaurant afloat.

Henri Le Huede, chef on the S.S. France, will sail from Le Havre on his last voyage Jan. 4, a round-the-world cruise. When the ship returns in April, passengers will have sampled the last Le Huede "moveable feast."

"The retirement age for men at sea is 55," said the chef, now 54, in an interview. "Anyway I have been at sea for 37 years, home only four months a year, and I started work at 12. It is time to think of my two daughters, wife and two grandchildren."

As a testament to Le Huede's renown, the ornate menus for the dining rooms on the France say in large letters, "Henri Le Huede, chef des Cuisines". The New York Times once called the first class dining room of the S.S. France "the best French restaurant in the world."

French food critics temper this compliment to "the best restaurant afloat" on grounds a chef can make truly great dishes only if he is cooking for no more than 60 people. Le Huede's feat is that he creates complicated French dishes for 3,000 people a day, three times a day, or around 9,000 meals.

Hugh supplies

For his latest 12-day trip to and from New York (restocking fruits and vegetables in New York), he laid in supplies for 1,600 passengers in tourist class, 600 in first class and 1,100 crew. His shopping list: 225 pounds of caviar, 700 pounds of foie gras (goose liver), 3,125 pounds of lobster, 9,680 pounds of sausages, 18,160 pounds of poultry, 58,000 eggs, 30,000 bottles of wine, etc.

Le Huede supervises the shopping, peering into fish eyes and pinching meat, because the secret of good cooking "is good ingredients. The finest Normandy butter and cream, very fresh fish, the best meat. Nothing canned, nothing frozen."

"I must be sure I have everything I need," said Le Huede, a small, round-shouldered man of modest manner. "A restaurant on land can send out for more bread but I cannot. You can't say to a passenger 'there isn't any more'. And it's difficult because you don't know how much or what they will order."

Giant Kitchen

While most chefs work in relatively small kitchens where they can keep a close eye on the simmering sauces, Le Huede practices his art in what he says is the biggest kitchen in the world, 10,763 square feet.

During meals he stands in a special spot in the middle of the kitchen to issue orders like a symphony conductor through a haze of steam to his 71 stirring, chopping cooks and two dozen hurrying waiters. Including his butchers and bakers, he commands a staff of 180.

On his last voyage, Le Huede as usual will get up at 6:30 a.m. for breakfast in his small stateroom. In his adjoining tiny office he will draw up the menus two days in advance. Since his diners are a captive audience "we never give them the same menu twice on the voyage. I must make different daily menus for tourist class, first class and the crew. I use my own recipes or the recipes of the great cousine of France.

"I look in the refrigerators to see what merchandise we have. Then I give the chefs the recipes for lunch. I taste, I supervise."

Long Day

In the afternoon he writes recipes for special requests from passengers, "nothing is ever refused." At 6 p.m. he is back in the kitchen, retiring from the field of battle around 11 p.m., seven days a week.

Le Huede has cooked for countless celebrities. Maurice Chevalier always asked for the "selle d'agneau marinette" (saddle of lamb with parsley, hearts of artichokes, black mushrooms in cream sauce). Ernest Hemingway requested quail stuffed with grapes and wild rice. Americans like duck with orange or cherries, while the French prefer less sweet dishes such as stuffed fish, said the chef.

Le Huede said he took up cooking at age 12 because "my father was a poor fisherman in Britanny and I wanted a job that would feed me. Also, I love to travel."

After his apprenticeship in a Nantes restaurant, Le Huede worked in the Paris restaurant, Prunier, for a year. Then he went to sea on the Mexique, the Degrasse, the Ile de France, the Liberte and finally in 1962 the France.

When his farewell voyage ends in April, the chef will take from his cabin his framed press notices and sketches of him made by passengers. The French Line plans to give him a medallion.

He does not plan to open a restaurant on land.

"At my home in Britanny I may write a cookbook," he said. "I do the cooking at home. My favorite dish is a veal chop with slices of ham and cheese, covered with spinach and two different sauces. I do the dishes, too. It's easy to cook for only three people."

Candles may have started fire fatal to 6

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — A 23-year-old woman who was lighting her apartment with candles because the electric company turned off the power perished along with her five young children Tuesday in a fire that swept through their two-story frame apartment house.

Authorities said the fire broke out in the apartment of Elizabeth Forest. A neighbor told sheriff's deputies the family had been lighting the apartment with candles since Monday when their power was turned off for non-payment of the electric bill.

Dead were Mrs. Forest and her five children, Michael, 3, Loreen, 4, Lilly Mae, 6, Cassie, 7, and Isaac, 8.

Two other families living in the building in the Holden Heights suburb escaped the flames.

One of the residents, Eddie Washington, told investigators he was awakened about 2 a.m. by the smell of smoke.

He awakened his wife and child, got them out of the building, then attempted to rescue the Forest family but was driven back by smoke and flames. Washington also awakened another family living in the building and led them to safety.

Fire offcals say their initial investigation showed the blaze started on the dresser of an upstairs bedroom used by the Forest family. The state fire marshal has been called in to investigate the blaze.

Police pledge crackdown on young smokers

LOGAN, Utah (UPI) — A crackdown on cigarette smoking teen-agers was vowed recently by police.

Triggered by parents' complaints, officers will check eating establishments, shops and stores to detect any smoking by persons under 19 years of age.

Utah law prohibits sale of tobacco to persons 18 or under, and prohibits a proprietor from permitting persons 18 or under to frequent his business while using tobacco.

Police said the campaign was launched after parents

U.S., European alliance: are we friends or foes?

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Whatever happened to the "Year of Europe"?

Nothing.

In fact, if the Atlantic Alliance between Europe and the United States ever crumbles, 1973 may go down as the year when the irreversible rot set in.

As 1972 and the Vietnam War crept to a close, Henry Kissinger, then President Nixon's national security adviser, said that 1973 would be the "Year of Europe"—the 12 months when the United States would turn from Asia and Russia to repair relationships with its best and oldest friends, the nations of Western Europe.

Implicit in Kissinger's comment was the belief that nothing ailed the Alliance that a little hand-holding wouldn't cure.

In April, Kissinger made a major speech calling for a "new Atlantic Charter." This, he said, would redefine the Alliance's values and purposes, to take into account the changes since World War II and to give it vigor and vitality in the last quarter of the 20th Century.

As the idea evolved, it became accepted by both Washington and the Europeans that the signing of this "charter" would make a fine climax to a European tour by Nixon in November.

So what happened?

Watergate, for one thing. Nixon had other fish to fry in Washington and never got to Europe. With Congress no longer following the White House's lead, a bill vital to U.S.-European trade talks got sidetracked, and Congressional pressures for trimming America's defense commitments to Europe built up.

Then there was the great soybean incident—an episode little noticed in the United States but traumatic in its effect on Europe. The Nixon administration, distracted by Watergate and unaware of the probable reaction in Europe, took fright at a sudden soybean shortage and embargoed all soy exports to Europe.

U.S. soybeans provide 80 per cent of all European cattle feed. To the Europeans, the embargo was nothing less than a treacherous breach of contract. After European protests, the embargo was eased, then dropped. But the damage was done.

Then there was the Middle East war. The European members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) refused (except for Portugal) to give landing rights to U.S. planes carrying arms to Israel. The United States, furious, neglected to tell its allies about its worldwide troop alert until after it was in effect.

To the Americans, this European attitude undercut the NATO alliance. The Europeans failed to see what Israel had to do with NATO and feared that America and Russia would sort out the Middle East situation to their own satisfaction—a fear of superpower diplomacy that surfaced often in this suspicious year.

And then there was oil.

Europe gets 72 per cent of its oil from the Arabs. The United States gets 11 per cent. Given this arithmetic, it was perhaps inevitable that the Allies would see the Middle East differently.

The European Common Market nations issued a pro-Arab statement. The United States rumbled about possible retaliation for a boycott. Washington suggested U.S.-European cooperation on oil sharing. Europe, fearing any link with America's pro-Israeli policy, refused.

The full power of oil to erode the Alliance probably has not been felt yet, but it is being discussed and worried about at every level of the 15 NATO governments.

At year's end, it became apparent that Kissinger's plan—to reshape and give new life to the Alliance—was so difficult itself that the other issues which have soured relations may lead to its failure.

Europeans already were thinking of a replacement for the trans-Atlantic Alliance. France revived the idea of an independent nuclear force, on grounds that America's detente with Moscow made Washington an unreliable protector. The Common Market continued to look inward, reflecting Kissinger's description of it as a "regional" power, and NATO studied what to do when U.S. troops go home.

During the year, the western nations also began work on a reform of the world monetary system, a delicate exercise affecting the future of their economies. This bogged down in the monetary upheavals following the dollar's devaluation in February, took on new promise in midyear, then fell into doubt again at the end of the year as the dollar recovered and oil shortages began damaging European economies.

Most of all, the Europeans complained of neglect. Kissinger himself canceled three scheduled visits to Europe during the year in favor of trips to Peking, Moscow and the Middle East. He spent a few hours in Paris in June—talking about Vietnam — and then stopped off in Brussels in December enroute to Cairo.

European governments complained Kissinger's style of personal diplomacy, coupled with the confusion in Washington over Watergate, kept U.S. embassies abroad so in the dark about official policy that, in the words of one ambassador, "it's impossible to find out what the Americans are thinking."

In this atmosphere, the "new Atlantic Charter" is grinding slowly through the bureaucratic mills. Actually it has become two documents—one on politics and economics being written within the Common Market and the other on security being drawn up within NATO. In their half-finished state, both are bland and, by American government estimation, disappointing.

The "Charter's" future is uncertain. No one knows if or when Nixon will come to Europe.

California unemployed could rise

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California's unemployment rate could rise to 6.5 per cent next year due to the energy crisis, according to Gov. Ronald Reagan's finance chief.

State Finance Director Verne Orr Monday told the Assembly Ways and Means Committee about 5.1 per cent of the state's work force is currently unemployed.

But Assemblyman Willie L. Brown Jr., D-San Francisco, committee chairman, said estimates of the unemployment rate developed by a legislative "manpower" committee showed it would soar to 7.3 per cent next year.

Orr also said state revenues for the current fiscal year will be about $137.4 million lower than originally expected because of the energy shortage.

He said banks and corporation taxes will drop by $50 million due to reduced business activity, which he attributed to the stock market decline and the energy crunch. He said sales, income and gift taxes also produced less revenue than originally projected.

"No one can accurately predict the impact of the oil situation," he said. "The future is cloudy."

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll have to use your head today to get you out of the tight spots. Aggressiveness or bravado won't work at this time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Take another look at your long-range plans. There's something amiss. You'd better catch it in time. Avoid impulsive decisions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Have your answers ready if you've reneged on an old obligation. Today could be the day of reckoning.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) An important relationship has been seesawing back and forth. Today, most of the negative aspects will again be emphasized.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Whatever type of work you do today, be sure you do it under the safest conditions possible. Don't take chances.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Something you expected materially may not develop at this time, but don't lose heart. The delay is temporary.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Outside pressures will arouse feelings of insecurity and self-doubt if you let them. Don't make mountains from molehills.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) An important judgment you make today will be based more upon anger than logic. It will not be a beneficial decision in the long run.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Continue to watch your expenditures very closely. You would not be wise to buy now things you need for the future. Wait a bit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't mix business with plasure. You will come out on the short end in both instances.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You'll be more ingenious in thinking of ways to get out of what you should be doing rather than meeting responsibilities head-on.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Avoid associating today with erratic individuals. Someone in your crowd has a chip on his shoulder. You might accidentally knock it off.

Dec. 26

Lay your plans carefully this year, then stick to your guns. Unexpected advantages will boost you just when you need them. Shun political involvements.

Judge decides against state on 50 m.p.h.

OLYMPIA, Wash. (UPI) — A superior court judge has held that the State Highway Commission exceeded its authority in reducing speed limits to 50 miles per hour.

Judge Robert Doran has ruled that no reference to highway safety or road conditions was made by the commission when it took its action last month in the wake of the energy crisis.

He said the legislature had granted the commission power to impose speed limits only for reasons of safety.

The judge cautioned, however, that his oral decision does not have the immediate effect of restoring speeds to their previous limits on 4,516 miles of freeways and state highways.

First he said that his order must be made in writing and then be subject to appeal to the state Supreme Court.

Venezuela to use oil lever in bargaining

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

Venezuela's President-elect Carlos Andres Perez is pro-United States, but in a seller's market that won't stop him from using Venezuela's oil wealth as a lever to force changes in U.S. Latin American policy.

In this he joins his closest opponent, Lorenzo Fernandez of the governing Social Christian party.

Both Perez, of the Democratic Action party, and Fernandez ran on moderately nationalistic platforms and both favored taking over the foreign oil companies operating in Venezuela before 1983, when present oil concessions begin running out. Both stressed the take-over should be through negotiations.

Perez has declared President Nixon's policy toward Latin America "not a happy one" and he has said frankly he will use oil to break U.S. trade restrictions.

The United States is Venezuela's largest oil customer, taking around 1.5 million barrels of the country's daily production of 3.4 million barrels.

Both major candidates promised the flow of oil to the United States would continue at present levels.

Rising oil prices already have given Venezuela a windfall of $400 million in increased earnings this year, and where differences between the candidates developed it was over how the oil revenues should be spent.

Fernandez, sticking to the policy laid down by outgoing President Rafael Caldera, has talked of using some of the extra money to develop the Orinoco tar belt in eastern Venezuela and on educational and health projects.

Others, including Perez, feel agriculture is the neediest sector of the economy.

Perez accused the government of failing to improve distribution of wealth, of increasing unemployment by emphasizing automation and of not utilizing national resources.

He promised tax and social reforms and greater support for labor-intensive industries.

The oil industry, while producing some two-thirds of the country's annual $3 billion income, furnishes employment to relatively few people.

Perez accused the United States and other developed nations of failing in their responsibilities toward undeveloped countries and said they should use their oil wealth to demand more technology for local industry and a voice in international policy-making, including money issues.

The outgoing government has made moves toward a more friendly relationship with Cuba. Perez, on the other hand, says that any change in the attitude toward Cuba should come through the Organization of American States.

Greatest loser in the Venezuelan elections appeared to be former dictator Marcos Perez Jimenez, who had hoped to emulate the victory of Juan D. Peron in Argentina. His party trailed far behind the leaders.

Overall, the greatest winner appeared to be the democratic system in Latin America. Through 15 years Venezuela has lived by the rule of free elections.

Lady boilermakers

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Purdue University is encouraging the distaff side to seek degrees in engineering.

Although coeds still account for only a fraction of the engineering students, there are now 69 freshman women enrolled in the 11 schools and divisions making up Purdue's Schools of Engineering. Last year there were 29 women freshmen in the schools.

"We are going to intensify our efforts this year in the hopes of attracting 150 girls in 1974," Prof. Donna Frohreich, in charge of special programs in the Department of Freshman Engineering, said.

Over-all this year, there are 160 women pursuing engineering degrees, up from the 40 enrolled in 1968.

ECOLOGY TREE — Jan Smith, 21, of Spokane, Wash., strings the last aluminum cans on a wire that will become part of Expo '74's environmental Christmas tree. More than 40,000 cans have been used on the 120-foot cedar pole which stands on the World's Fair site.

Fair officials say the cans will be recycled. Fair opens May 4.

High court to decide who has authority to prosecute soldier

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court agreed today to examine the conflict between military and civilian authority over service personnel charged with illegally using marijuana while off base and off duty.

The Court will schedule oral arguments later this term on the Defense Department's appeal of a 10th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals decision that only civilian courts have jurisdiction in a Ft. Sill, Okla., marijuana case.

The circuit court last July issued an injunction blocking an Army court-martial trial of Capt. Bruce R. Councilman on charges of possessing and selling mariuana while off duty and off the base.

Councilman was accused of giving and selling marijuana to an Army enlisted man while both were out of uniform in the captain's apartment and ostensibly off duty. The enlisted man actually was on an undercover assignment.

Councilman was arrested by civilian authorities who turned him over to Ft. Sill officials for a court-martial. He won a U.S. District Court decision that the military did not have jurisdiction and the circuit court affirmed it.

The circuit court held that Councilman's case failed to meet 11 of 12 tests the Supreme Court set up in its 1971 decision and expressed doubt about the 12th test. This test is whether the "victim" of an alleged crime by a serviceman is also a serviceman.

The lower court held the case did not meet tests set up in a 1971 Supreme Court decision for deciding that an alleged crime is "service-connected" and subject to jurisdiction of a military court.

HAPPY ENDING — These three youngsters are happily reunited with their pet dog, Fred, after they gave him an overdose of tranquilizers for a flight from Illinois to California, where the family is moving to Fullerton. United Airlines employes at O'Hare International Airport in Chicago found the dog in a coma, gave him mouth-to-mouth resusication and rushed him to a doctor. The youngsers, with happy grins, are from left, Jack, Brett and Cheryl Parton.

What's your reason for not buying a home NOW?

TROUBLED OVER HIGH INTEREST RATES

It is true interest rates have risen, but they do seem to have stabilized in the past several months. And while the rates may seem high, they are not climbing as rapidly as are labor and material costs. An increase or a decrease of ½ percent in interest rates only amounts to 30c per month per $1000 on a 25 year loan. Is it really wise to deny yourself the security, pleasure and pride of home ownership on the vague hope of interest rates going down. thus saving you only $3 or $4 a month? The value of your home will increase at a much faster rate than can be gained by any lowering of interest rates. NOW is a good time to buy!

WONDER WHERE TO BEGIN LOOKING?

Worry no more . . . most folks have found that the best place to shop for that new or lived-in home is in the Classified Real Estate columns of the Progress-Bulletin. It's here (and only here) that each day you'll find the very latest offerings of homes 'for sale' . . . advertised by the area's leading real estate firms and builders. Check the want ads today—and every day—to find the home that satisfies all your needs.

FRIENDS,
Here are just a few of the many written comments we receive from our happy customers:

Courteous, cooperative, considerate attention on every detail from all your personnel.
H. & B. RUSH, Mira Loma

Cooperation and concern of your personnel made the transition to mobile home living a pleasant experience.
L. HUTCHINSON, Pom.

Thanks for the fine way you have treated us in our new mobile home and we love every minute of it.
R. & M. PLAND, Pom.

Your Service Personnel have been exceptional, both in workmanship and pleasant attitude. Thanks so much.
A. & D. KRUGER, La Puente

Yes folks, our entire staff of efficient, cooperative personnel are at your service to provide you with courteous customer relations for the rest of your life!
Sincerely

Radial Tire Sale

Sears Highway Passenger Tire Guarantee

If you do not receive the number of miles specified because of your tire becoming unserviceable due to (1) defects, (2) normal road hazards, or (3) tread wear-out.

We will: At our option, exchange it for a new tire or give you a refund charging in either case only the proportion of the then current selling price plus Federal Excise tax that represents mileage used. If the tire is unserviceable due to any of the above causes before 10% of the guaranteed mileage is received, the replacement or refund will be made with no charge for mileage received.

Nail punctures will be repaired at no charge.

Guarantee applies to tires on vehicles used for private family purposes.

Heavy Duty Shock Absorber

Regular $7.99

5.33 each

Guaranteed For As Long As You Own Your Car

Fits most American-made cars, pickups, plus many foreign cars.

Heavy Duty Shock Absorber Guarantee

If Heavy-Duty Shock Absorber fails due to faulty materials and workmanship or wears-out while original purchaser owns the car, it will be replaced upon return free of charge, or the purchase price will be refunded. If the defective shock absorber was installed by Sears, we will install new shock absorber with no charge for labor.

High Voltage

Straight-through-the-partition cell connectors deliver more initial starting power than an otherwise identical battery with up-and-over cell connectors.

Biggest haul in U.S. history

$20 million marijuana seizure; 11 arrested

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Federal, state and local law officers arrested 11 persons Monday and seized between 25 and 30 tons of marijuana, believed to be the largest seizure in U.S. history. Authorities estimated its street value at over $20 million.

In a joint statement, the Florida Department of Law Enforcement (FDLE) and federal authorities said they "believe Monday's arrests have broken the back of the major supplier for the southeastern United States."

FDLA spokesman Jack Dawkins added authorities had established a connection between the Florida Christmas Eve marijuana haul and the recent seizure of some six tons of marijuana in Bay Minette, Ala., where one man was arrested.

The 11 were arrested in five Florida counties in the raid that spread from late Sunday to Monday morning. Five vehicles were seized along with the huge stash of marijuana.

According to authorities, the marijuana came from Colombia and was smuggled into Florida by a small boat that anchored in a remote canal along the Gulf Coast near Port St. Joe. The marijuana was unloaded and transported to a barn, from which it was to be shipped to various destinations by trucks and campers.

FDLE Commissioner William Troelstrup said the marijuana seized totaled between 25 and 30 tons and had a value "on the street" of over $20 million.

Authorities said they struck after tracking the marinuana from the boat to the barn to the assorted vehicles which then headed for neighboring counties.

The first taken into custody was Lavel Raffield. He was held in the Gulf County jail in lieu of $150,000 bond.

Others who were arrested were identified as Theo George Fotianos, 24, William Edwin Northup, 25, Jorge Enrique Soto, 24, and Charles Lane Martin, 23, all of Gainesville, Fla.

Also, David Ronald Bateman, 31, and Kenneth Earl Taylor, 36, both of Quitman, Ga., and Raymond Eugene Hawkins, 29, and Karen Margaret Hawkins, 19, both of Madison, Fla., Thomas Michael Patton, 25, and Ernest Eugene Williams, 25, of Gainesville,

All were charged with possession of marijuana.

Troelstrup said agents from the U.S. Customs Service, the Federal Drug Enforcement Administration, the Internal Revenue Service, Florida Marine Patrol, Alachua County Narcotics Task Force and the Florida Highway Patrol cooperated in the five-week investigation which led to the crackdown.

3 charged in Rembrandt art theft; ransom found

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Three men were charged Monday in connection with the theft of two Rembrandt paintings, one returned by the thieves and the other recovered after payment of $100,000 ransom by Taft Museum.

Carl Horsley, 21, Raymond McDonough, 21, and Henry Dawn, 22, all of Loveland, Ohio, were held on charges of receiving stolen property. Authorities said the trio will probably be arraigned Wednesday in Cincinnati Criminal Court.

A fourth man also had been held under "investigative detention" Monday after the second stolen Rembrandt was returned and nearly all the $100,000 ransom was recovered. Police would not say what became of the fourth suspect.

Because $4,000 of the ransom money was still missing, police were tightlipped about some details of the weekend chain of events which ended five days of bizarre negotiations and a late-night rendezvous to recover the masterpieces.

Nine persons, seven men and two women, had been held at first, but five were released after day-long questioning Sunday.

The "Portrait of an Elderly Woman," was returned by the thieves last Thursday night, and then demanded $200,000 ransom for the second painting, "Man Leaning on a Sill."

After lengthy negotiations through a local realtor designated as a go-between, the thieves agreed to a $100,000 offer from museum officials. The money, in small bills in two white sacks, was taken late Saturday night to the thieves' requested "drop off" spot, a propane gas tank alongside a road about 25 miles northeast of downtown Cincinnati.

An unidentified caller telephoned police about three hours later to tell them the painting could be found under a rural house several miles from the money "drop" point.

Police said the arrests were made about two hours later and $50,000 of the $100,000 ransom money recovered. Later Sunday another $46,000 was recovered.

Police refused to elaborate on how the arrests were made and where the money was recovered.

Although there was a "minor" scratch on the first Rembrandt painting returned, authorities said the second painting "appears to be in good shape."

The works were appraised for insurance purposes more than 10 years ago at $330,000, but some art critics put their value in the millions of dollars.

Simon sees 8-11 cents gallon hike

NEW YORK (UPI) — William Simon, head of the federal energy office, was quoted by the American Broadcasting Co. (ABC) Monday as forecasting an eventual increase of 8 to 11 cents per gallon in the price of gasoline and heating oil as a result of the announced Persian boost of crude oil prices and expected similar action by Venezuela.

In contrast, the director of the American Petroleum Institute said Monday that doubling of crude oil prices by the Persian Gulf states will have only a marginal effect on the American economy.

Frank Ikard said he doubted that the hike to more than $11 a barrel would have a "significant impact" on the domestic oil situation.

Prices in the U.S. are largely based on local oil production, which provides more than 85 per cent of domestic needs, he said.

"You can look for an increase of 8 to 11 cents per gallon in price as a result of this when we get the full effect of the flowthrough," Simons said in an interview with ABC correspondent Roger Peterson. "Remember, we import only about 30 to 35 per cent of our needs, so the impact will not actually be as great as in Japan or obviously in the less developed countries."

Family loses everything

Firemen douse blaze in home then play Santa for victims

HACIENDA HEIGHTS — County firemen tried to make a tragic Christmas a little brighter for a Hacienda Heights family Christmas Eve by giving gifts to children of a family that several hours before lost their home and belongings in a fire.

A fire Monday morning started in a rear bedroom of the residence of Raymond David Stilley, 45, of 15824 Novak St., and spread to other areas of the house while some members of the family were still sleeping.

A niece, Katherine Leach, 12, sustained second degree burns to her right hand fleeing from the fire and Mrs. Vivian Stilley, 45, was suffering from shock. Both victims were given emergency treatment by the county paramedic team from the City of Industry station.

Firemen said the fire gutted the house and destroyed most of the contents including the family's Christmas gifts. The family is staying with friends in the neighborhood.

Two nieces and three grandchildren were staying with the couple. Several members of the family were watching television in the living room when smoke was seen in the hallway about 9:40 a.m.

The cause of the fire is under investigation.

Firemen from engine company 43 under the leadership of Capt. Joe Sotro returned to the scene of the fire later in the day to give Christmas gifts to the children, whose ages ranged from 3 to 16 years. Citizens leave the gifts at the station house each year before Christmas for the annual Toys for Tots Drive sponsored by the U.S. Marine Corps.

'Archie Bunker' fed up with Nixon; wants impeachment

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Actor Carroll O'Connor, whose Archie Bunker television role projects his political image to the right of the John Birch Society, Monday called for the impeachment of President Nixon.

O'Connor, writing in the December edition of the Texas AFL-CIO Labor News, said Nixon's Watergate, economic and energy problems indicate that "he's got to go."

The wavy-haired star of "All In The Family" wrote his column in the Archie Bunker talk-style, but not political philosophy.

"We wouldn't take a stand against Nixon last year," O'Connor wrote. "Maybe we weren't for him either, but we shouldn't have copped-out on that election. We shouldn't have let Nixon and his crowd fool us. Look who tried to steal the country? Creeps, they call 'em now."

O'Connor said the Nixon administration's economic policies have reduced the average worker's paycheck "even with its puny 5.5 per cent raise" to $5.83 less than it was worth a year ago.

Winds rip Ontario; to subside

Winds gusting up to 70 miles an hour ripped through central and south sections of Ontario Monday, shattered windows and knocked down power lines and trees.

The winds are expected to subside today and be replaced by mild and sunny weather throughout the Pomona Valley.

A tree limb crashed on top of two parked cars at Fourth Street and Euclid Avenue as numerous trees fell throughout the area.

A trailer blew over in the 1400 block of South Euclid Avenue and all windows of the Post Office Annex at Fourth Street and Grove Avenue were blown out during the strong gusts.

Officials said there were isolated problems of trees falling on service lines but, for the most part, West End customers were inconvenienced by power outages for only a short period during the storm.

Other West End communities reported only minor damage from the strong winds.

A traffic advisory was in effect most of Monday, said California Highway officials, because of high winds and blowing dust in the West End areas east of Ontario Motor Speedway.

Campers and trailers were advised not to use the San Bernardino Freeway where high winds were stalling some cars and reducing visibility to almost zero at times.

Tow trucks were used to remove about a dozen stalled cars from the freeway, and water trucks were used to wet down the dust along the freeway edges.

Fire in kitchen

ONTARIO — Fire caused $450 estimated damage in the kitchen of the home of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Cuccia behind Vince's Spaghetti, 1206 W. Holt Blvd. about 10:51 a.m. Monday.

Mrs. Cuccia reported that a fan candle she had lit to send a pleasant aroma throughout her home caused the short-lived blaze in the cupboard area.

Christmas story for the young, lonely—and 'Spook'

By TOM TIEDE

NEW YORK (NEA) — It hadn't snowed that week before Christmas. Everett, Washington, had rainy winters, with only some occasional white ash falling from the pulp and paper company chimneys.

Had there been some ice, I would have been sledding; as it was I was out peddling newspaper subscriptions, my friend Danny along, the both of us being eight or nine years old.

Danny was a nincompoop of sorts. Irish parentage, red hair, large freckles, he was the only kid I knew who smoked cigarettes and showed me occasional pictures of women in brassieres.

We made a team. I didn't smoke, but I thought the pictures were delightful. In the fourth grade Danny and I ran together, best pals; a little wild, we were, and especially him, since he had a cousin with a car and sometimes they would drive all the way to Seattle.

It was raining that afternoon. We carried subscription forms door to door. The town paper had a special gimmick: Lads could win a midget racer for selling two subs or a motorized midget racer for seven. Knock-knock. "You wanta buy the paper?"

We were getting little else but wet by the time we reached the woods where the spook lived. Actually, it wasn't a woods but a lot of front-yard tangle, and the spook was an old man who lived in the house beyond.

We called him spook because everybody else called him spook. Nobody had ever seen him, for all we knew, but everyone had heard the stories: He had a deranged daughter behind those doors, who ate scraps from the floor; he had a wife who'd been in prison; he himself, though nobody could prove it, walked around the house with no clothes on and threw knives at visitors fool enough to call.

Danny made the dare. He suggested we yell for the spook from back off the porch, because if we got closer we might get grabbed. God only knew what happened to the kids grabbed on that porch. Danny said he had a friend who had a friend who read meters who one time got cut by a knife on the porch.

I said who was that? Danny said just a guy. Danny was uncomfortable, when pressed for details, and snapped: "Are we gonna do it or not?"

We did. Danny yelled for the spook and retreated to the mailbox. When the old man came out he was wearing a

Arabs mull progress of 'oil war' against West

KUWAIT (UPI) — Arab oil ministers, many who joined in a weekend decision to double oil prices, met in Kuwait Monday to review the progress of their "oil war" against the West and discuss possible future action.

It was the fourth meeting of the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries (OAPEC) since Oct. 17, the date they first wielded the "oil weapon" against the United States in support of the Arab countries fighting Israel.

The top item on the agenda for Monday's meeting was a report from Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi Arabian Oil Minister, and Algerian Industry Minister Belaid Abdesselam, about a tour they made of Western capitals.

The two ministers, acting as representatives of all the OAPEC states, went to Western Europe, the United States and Japan to explain the use of the oil weapon.

The Arab oil producers have stopped deliveries to the United States and the Netherlands and have cut production by around 30 per cent in an attempt to pressure the West into forcing concessions from Israel in the Middle East conflict.

The OAPEC states have said they will continue their boycott and production cuts until Israel commits itself to complete withdrawal from occupied Arab territories.

Many of the ministers attending Monday's meeting flew in from Tehran, where they had attended a two-day meeting for Persian Gulf members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

The six Persian Gulf states— including non-Arab Iran—decided to more than double crude oil prices on Jan. 1, 1974. The posted price of the "marker" crude, Arabian Light, will jump from $5.11 to $11.65.

Kuwait's Oil Minister, Abdel Rahman Salem Atiki, said on his return from Tehran Sunday he considered the price increase "moderate and fair."

Atiki said the new prices would apply through the first quarter of 1974, indicating they would be reviewed in March or April.

A ministerial conference of all members of OPEC will be held in Geneva or Vienna Jan. 7 to examine the decisions taken at the Tehran conference.

The members of OAPEC are Kuwait, Libya, Saudi Arabia, Abu Dhabi, Algeria, Bahrain, Dubai and Qatar.

A complete annular eclipse of the sun was seen in Bogota, Colombia Monday. These three views show, left to right, the moon entering the sun's bright disc, the height of the eclipse and the moon leaving the sun's disc. The event was seen as a partial annular eclipse over most of New England.

GM delays introduction of Rotary engine Vega

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors will not bring out its rotary-engined Chevrolet Vega at the start of the 1975-model year as originally planned, a company spokesman said Monday.

Problems with fuel economy, pollution control and general belt tightening by the world's largest automaker are believed the main reasons for the delay.

Instead of introducing the Wankel rotary Vega at the start of the 1975 model year next September, the spokesman said introduction will "probably" come some time during the model year. It will be offered as an option as soon as it is ready for mass production, he said.

GM later this week will announce a second round of cutbacks in production and in spending on some projects as a result of the slowdown in big car sales, industry sources said. The spokesman refused to confirm reports of further cutbacks.

Chairman Richard C. Gerstenberg is expected to make further announcements Thursday on future production plans in light of the downturn in big car sales caused, in part, by the fear of gasoline rationing.

During the week before Christmas, GM idled 137,000 workers and cut 79,000 big cars out of its December production schedules. The new cutbacks are expected to include several ongoing projects as well as actual production.

GM had hoped to be the first U.S. automaker on the market with an alternative to the present reciprocating piston engine. About 120,000 Japanese-built Mazdas with the Wankel rotary engine were sold in this country during 1973.

Fuel economy seems to be the biggest factor in GM's decision to continue working on the engine before introducing it to the public.

While it would not make specific mileage figures public, recent tests by the Environmental Protection Agency showed Mazdos getting among the poorest fuel economy in the 3,000-pound class cars—about 10.3 miles per gallon.

In the same EPA tests, the 2,750-pound Vega hatchback, with a four-cylinder aluminum engine, is at the top of its class with 24.6 m.p.g. The same car with an automatic transmission in place of the three-speed manual transmission got 19.6 mpg.

"All of our engine programs are undergoing revaluation because of the energy situation," the GM spokesman said.

GM already has paid $25 million to Curtiss-Wright Corp, Audi-NSU and Wankel GmbH of West Germany on its five-year license agreement. It plans another $10 million payment this Friday and will still owe $15 million before it can build and sell the rotary engine worldwide without any further royalties.

Nixon signs D of C home rule measure

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon Monday signed compromise legislation giving partial home rule to the District of Columbia. He called it a measure "of historic significance" for residents of the nation's capital.

Under the bill, signed by Nixon at the White House, the District of Columbia could have its first locally elected city government in 100 years, with a mayor and 13-member city council to be chosen next November for terms beginning Jan. 2, 1975.

Voters will have a chance to decide May 7 in a charter referendum if they want the elected city government provided by the bill.

Critics in Congress had opposed the legislation because it will continue significant federal controls on major aspects of government in the city, including the budget.

Nixon, in a statement issued as he signed the bill, said he had long been a supporter of self-government for the District of Columbia and that the home rule measure was an important step in his administration's attempt to give local governments more authority and resources to serve their communities.

"As the nation approaches the 200th anniversary of its founding, it is particularly appropriate to assure those persons who live in our capital city rights and privileges which have long been enjoyed by most of their countrymen," Nixon said.

Ex-POWs look back at Yuletimein enemy hands

By WARREN L. NELSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Christmas hymn thundered out with some strange variations on "Hark the Herald Angels Sing."

One husky voice sang:

"My name is Tom McNish. I live in the Zoo."

Another carolled his name, rank and serial number.

It was Christmas in North Vietnam last year and for many American prisoners of war more than the first away from home.

Many of the 563 who came back in February and March reminisced Monday on past Christmases spent in cold and dreary prison camps nicknamed "The Zoo," "Dogpatch" and the like.

This will be their first Christmas at home, far different from those spent in Hanoi singing hymns while the North Vietnamese took propaganda pictures.

As the men boisterously sang out last Christmas, others holding song books sang different words —exchanging information to be fed into the prison grapevine.

It was the one time prisoners were brought together from scattered camps.

Air Force Col. James F. Young spent last Christmas at Dogpatch, a bleak maximum security prison in the mountains.

This year—"the first one at home in eight years" —Young was surrounded by his wife, mother and three daughters.

"We'll go to midnight services Christmas Eve and then spend Christmas day eating and talking and reminiscing," he said.

It won't be a happy Christmas for all returnees —or the relatives of some.

Of those who came back, two committed suicide. About 10 per cent of the 420 married POWS have gotten divorces or are in the process of securing them.

About 6 or 7 per cent are unfit to return to military duty because of ailments and injuries. At least two will probably be wheelchair cases the rest of their lives. And about 5 per cent suffered serious mental problems, according to defense and health officials.

Navy Cmdr. Hugh A. Stafford remembers Christmas during his 5-½ years as a prisoner in North Vietnam.

"Those Christmas services were really a good thing because they let us communicate with other camps," Stafford told UPI. "I'd get up close to a strange face and he'd sing in tune with the hymn, 'My name is Tom McNish. I live in the Zoo.'

"The North Vietnamese preacher sounded just like the interrogators. He spouted the same party line about this 'illegal, immoral and unjust war'."

On Christmas and Tet, the Vietnamese New Year, POWS got one special meal —turkey, potato soup with onions, egg roll and salad.

"The turkey was the stringiest thing I'd ever eaten," Stafford said. "But it was seasoned food unlike the usual bland meals we got."

As soon as they got their plates and were paraded in front of the propaganda cameras, the prisoners were herded back to their cells to eat.

V.A. makes only small dent in easing student aid snafu

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Southern California regional office of the Veterans Administration worked through the weekend on orders from President Nixon to straighten out a huge foulup that has prevented thousands of student veterans from getting benefits for months.

But the workers made only a small dent, checking files and writing checks by hand, and said they would miss today's federal employe holiday and probably work through Christmas as well.

The snafu, when it was revealed, drew heavy criticism from local congressmen and protests by the veterans to the President.

Nixon ordered VA Administrator Donald Johnson to have the Los Angeles staff work through the weekend, and to submit to the White House today a report telling how the foulup happened and detailing what steps are being taken to make sure it never happens again.

An estimated 5,000 veterans attending school in Southern California say they have not received benefit checks—which range from $220 to $300 a month—since September.

Spokesmen for campus veterans groups say the delay has caused a number of veterans to drop out of school to support themselves or their families, and others are living on food stamps or loans from relatives, or just "walking around hungry."

VA officials said the problem is apparently the result of a plan put into effect in September to send veterans a two-month advance in that month, when their school expenses are highest.

Rather than send the checks to the students' homes, a computer was supposed to send them to campus veterans benefits offices to be distributed, the VA said.

The computer sent the checks to the wrong campuses, and persons, sent some of them out of the state and did not send others at all, the VA said.

California congressmen said they could not understand why the foulup affected only one region, they demanded an explanation of why only the Southern California regional office, of more than 50 in the nation, had such a problem.

"To say it's all the computer's problem is a bunch of crap—human error was involved," said Curtis Mack, assistant to Gordon Elliott, VA administrator for Southern California.

But at least one error, Elliott said, was in Chicago. He said the Chicago VA office was supposed to send Los Angeles a list of hardship cases, but sent the list to San Francisco instead.

Workers estimated they hand processed about 300 checks Sunday, making little dent in the estimated 2,000 hardship cases that are to be cleared up first.

"This place is in a panic," said veterans counselor Alex Mirosav.

The President's order to spare no effort to pay the veterans demolished holiday plans by the VA office staff. Mack cancelled his birthday party Sunday and Mirosav said "my wife's about ready to throw a brick through the window" because he cancelled plans to visit relatives in San Diego.

Other workers had already left on their expected four-day holidays when the presidential command was relayed Saturday and they were being called back as fast as they could be located. A staff of 50 was rounded up for work Sunday, and more were to be on hand today, Mack said.

COULD BE SOMETHING THEY DIDN'T EAT

Lowell Simmons and Elton Daggs turn on generator that is turning yesterday's garbage into today's Christmas lights. The tree, sitting atop a 250-foot deep landfill, is being lit from electricity powered by gas from all the garbage decaying beneath the hill. It is thought the fill could provide enough gas for about 25,000 homes.

'Christmas story' . . .

bathrobe and Danny started to laugh. I remember the old man waving.

I said: "We're selling subscriptions to the paper." Danny made more giggling sounds. The spook waved us through his door.

I was surprised at the house. It was normal, orderly, clean; a little better furnished than my own, actually. The man had been reading a paper in a chair, a pole lamp turned on over a lace doily, so I knew he didn't need a paper subscription.

The man asked how we were. I said fine, uneasily. Danny, the dummy, was still making sounds, trying not to laugh, snorting through his nose he tripped on the rug and howled.

The old man had his teeth out. No, he said, he didn't need a subscription, and he said "subskiption" so funny I almost laughed myself. Then he picked a large bowl of candy off his coffee table and offered it.

It was Halloween candy, he said, and excused the fact that by now it was all stuck together. "I always have a big bowl of it on Halloween, but nobody ever comes around. It just sits and melts for the rest of the year."

We started to leave but the man suggested we sit down. I did. Danny's didnt. And after that, for no particular reason that I remember, the old fellow began talking about Christmas.

He said he came from Minnesota, where it snowed every December, and when he was young he would take his family for a ride on a sleigh. "Bells and everything." He talked of cutting down his own tree, and choosing presents from the most colorful pages of the catalog, and going into Duluth to see the decorations.

He said he remembered playing Santa once, years before, in the school his children attended. He seemed to remember everything about it. He said he went from class to class with a bundle of small gifts, one for each student and teacher. He said it had been a proud day for him, as well as a happy one. His children, he said, talked about it for years, as did his wife.

He said nothing else about his family. There were photos on a credenza of two girls and a thin woman, but there was nobody else evident in the house and the old man indicated he had lived alone for years. Not until now have I wondered what happened to them.

As Danny and I left the old man offered more candy and told us to come around more. Then, I recall, he wondered hopefully if our school ever needed a Santa Claus.

I said no, because there was a fat kid in our class who played the part each year. The man nodded. He watched us leave the porch and closed the door.

In the street Danny slowed up. He was still smirking. He picked up a rock and threw it at the old man's roof. I called him a name for it; then we got out of there as fast as we could.

We sold no more subscriptions that night. I never saw the old man again. After that I stopped playing with that nincompoop Danny.

Girl, 3, overcome by smoke but saved

ONTARIO — A 3-year-old Ontario girl was enjoying her Christmas this morning after a brush with death Saturday night.

Little Michelle Caldera, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Caldera of 1152 Caroline Court, was overcome by smoke Saturday night about 10:30 p.m. when a nightgown draped over a lamp in her bedroom caught fire near her bed as she lay sleeping, firemen said.

As Michelle lay semi-conscious her two baby sitters, 12 and 13, smelled smoke and ran next door to the home of Mrs. Barbara Hebert of 1143 E. Caroline Court and asked for help.

Mrs. Hebert called the Ontario Fire Department and then ran next door to get Michelle out of her bedroom. When firemen arrived Michelle was lying on the front lawn barely breathing with Mrs. Hebert trying to comfort her. Firemen administered oxygen to the little girl and went inside the home to douse the fire in the bedroom.

Fire inspectors said the little girl had apparently draped a nightgown over a bare lightbulb when she went to bed, unknown to the baby sitters. A short time later the nightgown burst into flame and fell, igniting the floor covering. Fire inspectors said the two young baby sitters did exactly what was right. They got out of the house immediately and summoned help.

Mrs. Hebert was able to get the little girl out of the bedroom before the fire spread. Firemen said damage to the bedroom was estimated at $100 with damage to its contents listed at $25.

Christmas Eve theater holdup

MONTCLAIR — A Christmas Eve gunman corraled the manager and four employes into the office of the Montclair Theatre, 4377 Holt Blvd. about 3:45 p.m. Monday, took $230 in bills from the office safe and ticket booth, and fled in a San Bernardino station wagon taxicab.

The Montclair Police Department received a call about the holdup about 4:05 p.m. The holdup man, a Negro, 25, 165-170, with a 1-inch Afro, cut the phone lines in the theatre, and told his victims to stay there 25 minutes. They complied.

Police Sgt. Clyde Graham recalled seeing the taxicab about the time of the holdup at Holt Boulevard and Ramona Avenue, but he was not alerted to the robbery until he was at Montclair Plaza.

Ontario pair robbed driving into garage

ONTARIO — Police Monday continued their search for three men, one armed with a shotgun, who robbed an elderly couple of a small amount of cash and some jewelry in a garage at 406 E. Sunkist St., Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Walter McCurdy, both in their 80s, told police they drove their car into their garage about 6:42 p.m. Sunday. They were followed by a man carrying a shotgun with a white stock.

The McCurdys said the man pointed the shotgun at them and took their valuables in a wallet and a purse. The robber ran out of the garage and got into a car parked on the street. Two other men were inside of the car, the McCurdys said.

The robber was described to police as a Caucasian, 35, 6 feet, wearing a wide-brimmed hat and a dark jacket. The McCurdys could not describe the other men in the car.

Walnut to get report on park plan

WALNUT — The City Council will receive the final feasibility report on the proposed Winnett Ranch park project Wednesday at its 8 p.m. meeting at City Hall.

The proposed plan calls for the creation of an 80-acre natural park with hiking and riding trails, picnic areas and other facilities. Funding for the project, estimated at about $700,000, would require passage of a municipal bond proposal.

The feasibility study has been put together by Lampman and Associates of Pomona.

Other agenda items for the meeting include a public hearing and final council consideration of the Environmental Resources Mangement Element (ERME), which includes the city's conservation, open sapce and recreation plans.

Prison complaint

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Women's Lib has reached into the New Mexico State Prison.

The New Mexico Civil Liberties Union, in a complaint against the penitentiary, said woman inmates do not receive the same rehabilitation opportunities at the prison as the male convicts.

Drivers help selves at open pumps

ONTARIO — Gene Tennis, the owner of a Texaco Service Station at Euclid Avenue and Mission Boulevard gave a little more for Christmas than he intended to Sunday.

Police said one of Tennis' customers called the police station about 10:04 a.m. to report that he had followed another car into the service station and started to fill up his tank with gasoline when he noticed the station was closed. The customer said he saw the man in the other car before him fill up his tank and leave.

Tnenis checked his pumps Sunday and discovered that 187 gallons of gasoline had been pumped out.

Auto repossession ends up in fracas

ONTARIO — A tow truck operator attempting to repossess a car for a West End bank was injured Sunday when the irate former owner of the vehicle jumped onto the moving tow truck and hit the driver with a wrench, police reported.

Police said the tow truck driver, Robert Cohen, 21, of Montclair, temporarily lost control of the truck and scraped the side of a Southern California Edison pole. The guid wire on the Edison The guide wire on the Edison er of the car, Frank Leon Williamson, 28, of 1145 W. I St., off the side of the tow truck and knocked him unconscious.

Police said Cohen and an Ontario Bank of America employe, Bruce David Chase, 21, went to repossess the car at Williamson's apartment about 11:06 a.m. Sunday. The two men put the car on the tow truck hook and began to drive away when Williamson suddenly ran out from the apartment complex garage and jumped on the side of the truck, ordering Cohen to stop so he could get his personal belongings out of the car. Cohen contisued to drive and Williamson allegedly grabbed a star wrench from the bed of the tow truck and began hitting the side window.

Police said that the wrench broke the window, and hit Cohen in the neck. Cohen lost controll of the truck and Chase grabbed the wheel. The truck hit the curb and the car it was towing scraped the side of the Edison pole. The Edison pole guide wire caught Williamson in the head knocking him from the side of the truck.

Police said both men were taken to Montclair Doctors Hospital for treatment. Williams was kept at the hospital overnight for observation and treatment for a head injury. Cohen was given first aid treatment for a neck injury and released.

Fuel priority requested for fishing fleet

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The state Fish and Game Commission has called on federal and state officials to give a high fuel priority to California's commercial fishing industry and commercial passenger fishing fleet.

In a resolution released Monday, the commission cited contributions of the fishing industry to the world's protein supply and the "efficient utilization of a renewable resource which cannot be stockpiled."

It said California's 5,000 commercial fishing boats produced an annual catch grossing more than $100 million at dockside and processing worth an additional $320 million.

The state's partyboat fleet of nearly 500 boats carries about 720,000 fishermen and generates $6 million yearly, the commission added.

Chino crash hospitalizes Ontario driver

CHINO — A 26-year-old Ontario woman was released in good condition from Chino General Hospital Monday with a leg injury suffered in a two-car collision at the intersection of Philadelphia Street and Central Avenue Saturday.

Patricia Ann Hargrove of 505 W. Ralston Ave., Ontario, was injured when her car, westbound on Philadelphia Street about 11:27 p.m. Saturday, collided broadside with another car southbound on Central Avenue. The driver of the second car, Ysabel Munoz, 15, of 1646 Farman Place, Pomona, was not injured.

Space going to work in next year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There won't be any manned space shots for the next year and a half, but the space agency plans to double its unmanned satellite missions in 1974 with the heaviest emphasis yet on practical work.

Twenty-six satellites are on NASA's schedule for the new year, the most since the 28 flights in 1967. Twelve of the upcoming launchings are for communications satellites and five are for weather watchers. Most again will go from Cape Canaveral.

There were 13 civilian shots in 1973, including the launch of the Skylab space station in May and three crews rendezvousing with it in May, July and November. The final three-man team of Skylab astronauts is scheduled to return Feb. 8 after spending a record 12 weeks in orbit.

If the current flight in the big orbiting lab goes as long as planned, the nine Skylab crewmen will have logged more than 12,000 man-hours in space —almost double the time recorded on 27 earlier spaceflights. But Project Skylab is conducting research for the future, while the 1974 unmanned missions will have a more immediate payoff.

Unless a Skylab rescue flight is required, the U.S. will not be launching astronauts again until July, 1975, when three Apollo pilots will go into orbit to rendezvous and dock with a two-man Russian Soyuz spacecraft.

The new generation space shuttle rocket plane will be making major headway on the drawing boards and in the test labs of many aerospace contractors, but it won't fly in space until 1979 at the earliest.

Besides the ongoing Skylab mission, NASA has three unmanned spaceflights carrying into the new year. The Pioneer 10 probe is now on its way out of the solar system after an historic flight past Jupiter Dec. 3, and a twin called Pioneer 11 is cruising to a February rendezvous with Venus and on to a March passby of Mercury.

There are several new scientific missions on the 1974 schedule, including an unprecedented German-American probe close to the sun, but the communications and weather satellites will be the big job of the year.

Three of the radio relay satellites will be the first designed solely to relay messages data and television communications within the United States. The first of these new relay stations, called Westar and owned by Western Union, is to be launched April 11 from Cape Canaveral.

Six other companies are moving into the domestic communications satellite business and tht outlook appears unlimited. NASA's role is limited to launching and initial tracking services, for which it is reinbursed.

"You can get a feeling for the potential of the newly instituted domestic satellites by looking at current revenue of telephone, radio and TV which is about $18 million a year," said Nasa administrator James C. Fetcher.

The International Telecommunications Satellite Consortium (INTELSAT), of which America's Comsat Corp., is the principal partner, is the pioneer in the commercial satellite business and now has an annual revenue of $260 million and a global network of satellites.

Three more large INTELSAT 4 satellites are scheduled for launch in 1974 from the Florida spaceport. One is to go into a 22,300-mile high stationary orbit Jan. 30, the other two are set for flight in June and August.

In addition, Comsat is having two new satellites built to relay communications from ships at sea to all sides of the oceans. They are called Marisats and will be leased by the U.S. Navy at first and later used for commercial maritime traffic. The first Marisat is set for launch in September, with the second to fly two months later —both from Cape Canavral.

NASA also will launch two Skynet 2 military communications satellites for Great Britain on Jan. 17 and in June. And the agency plans to orbit an experimental applications technology satellite in

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

Howard Hughes was named to the 1973 Aviation Hall of Fame. In 1935, Hughes set a world's speed record of 352 m.p.h. for land aircraft in a plane he designed and manufactured, The World Alamanac recalls. In 1937, he set a new transcontinental record of 7 hours and 28 minutes. In 1938, Hughes and four assistants made a record round-the-world flight in 3 days, 19 hours and 8 minutes.

April that, among other things, will beam educational television to remote areas in the United States.

The last launch of 1974 is scheduled to be the first flight of a new experimental communications satellite, Symphonie, built by France and West Germany.

Three of the five weather satellites on the 1974 launch schedule will be new type spacecraft designed to soar into stationary orbits where each will be able to maintain a constant watch on the clouds over one third of the globe.

Like the communications satellites, they take advantage of the phenomenon whereby the orbital speed of a satellite 22,300 miles high matches the rotation of the earth—thus the satellite remains over one point.

NASA also will launch an operational, lower altitude weather satellite for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) in July from the west coast space center at Vandenberg AFB, Calif. An advanced, experimental Nimbus weather satellite also is set for launch from California in June.

The only experimental rocket flight is set for Jan. 24 from the Cape when a combination of the Air Force's triple-barrelled Titan 3 and NASA's Centaur upper stage will be test flown into orbit. This Titan-Centaur is scheduled to launch Viking Mars landing craft in 1975.

Two of the 1974 launchings will be carried out Jan. 30 and in April by Italian engineers from the Indian Ocean firing platform called San Marco, off the coast of Africa. U.S.-built Scout rockets will orbit scientific satellites built by Italy and Britain.

Returns stolen drill with $20 for 8-year use

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Police got a package in the mail recently and thought it was a bomb.

Demolition experts found there were no explosives in the box but there was an electric precision drill along with a $20 bill.

A letter with a return address of L. W. Montgomery, Route 1, Landis, Tenn., explained that a drill was stolen from a construction project here eight years ago and the sender wanted it returned with interest for use.

Police said they did not know what to do with the drill and they were not planning to question Montgomery.

Casino device spots cheaters

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — A computer device to stop slot machine cheaters by sounding an alarm or stopping the machine will get a trial run in a Las Vegas casino.

A 60-day trial for the device at the MGM Grand Hotel was approved recently by the state gaming commission.

Cheaters bilk Nevada slot machines of $10 million a year, using everything from gum wrappers to hairpins, the commission was told. But the new device will spot any irregularity in a machine and ring a bell or lock the "one arm bandit," an electronics expert said.

Arab action has Europe, Japan limp

By United Press International

By United Press International

The decision by the Persian Gulf oil producing Arab countries to double the price of petroleum brought more dismay Monday to a world already hard hit by Arab cutbacks of oil production. The Tokyo stock market fell and there were predictions of widespread unemployment in Europe.

There were warnings throughout Europe of sharp increases in the price of gasoline, and French economists predicted it would go to $2 a gallon. Venezuela hinted it would follow the lead of the Persian Gulf states, which would increase the price of gasoline in the United States.

Indications were that the Arab use of the oil weapon against nations considered too friendly to Israel might be extended. Ministers of the Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries (OAPEC) met in Kuwait to consider further steps against the west and the Kuwaiti Oil Minister said the squeeze would go on.

Britain already was putting industry on a three-day workweek, and political sources said in London Monday that doubling of oil prices was a serious blow to Britain's program to hold down prices and curb inflation. It also will worsen Britain's serious balance of trade deficit. Experts estimate it will add up to $2.5 billion to Britain's import bill and raise gasoline prices by 18 cents a gallon from the current range of 95 cents to $1.10.

Oil-starved Japanese began selling cars, stocks and the national currency Monday following the decision taken Sunday in Tehran by the six Persian Gulf oil states to double oil prices. The Tokyo Stock market plunged and the average of 225 industrial stocks dropping more than 106 points to 4,028 during a two-hour morning session.

Japanese motorists were warned the price of gasoline soon might rise to $1.68 a gallon and many said they would put their cars up for sale. The price of the Japanese yen also dropped in relation to the American dollar anl the Bank of Japan was forced to intervene to hold it at 200.

The energy crisis was so bad in Japan that a commercial bear farm on Japan's northern island of Hokkaido announced it would have to kill 55 of the beasts because protective devices to keep them from escaping dependod on fuel oil.

Frenchmen, assured on several occasions that France would remain a "privileged country," stared in disbelief at the Monday headlines. Economists predicated the rise would add another 2 per cent to France's cost of living, already rising at 12 per cent a year. The newspaper France-Soir said the oil rise would cost another $4 billion—five times France's balance of payments excess, half of its monetary reserves and half of the national education budget for 1974.

Adolf Hallmann, president of the West German oil industry, warned that motorists must be prepared to pay up to $1.60 a gallon for gasoline, a rise of 15 to 20 per cent. He predicted industrial costs would rise up to 25 per cent and that West Germany's Gross National Product growth rate might reach zero.

South America also was hit by the oil shortage but it is summer in the southern hemisphere and there is less of a heating crisis. Argentina was blacked out in many areas Sunday night but the government pledged there would be lights for Christmas Eve.

In New Delhi a Planning Commission official said the rise of crude oil prices could wreck India's five-year plan before it gets started in April. India had planned to spend $667 million for oil but the price hike takes the amount to $1.33 billion.

Industry and government sources in Bangkok said the price increase would cost Thailand an additional $300 million annually and drastically affect the nation's economy. In Singapore, industrialists warned that prices could escalate and increase the dangerous level of the cost of living.

Denver hardest hit

Winter storms mar Yule

By United Press International

A full-blown winter storm left metropolitan Denver under snow drifts as much as 10 feet deep Monday and played havoc with Christmas Eve highway travel from the Rockies to the Great Lakes.

The Colorado capital's Stapleton Airport was virtually shut down. Snowplows gave up trying to clear two bogged eastwest runways until the wind died down.

Ambulances, police and fire vehicles were stuck along with private automobile traffic in Denver's 3 to 10 foot drifts. All major east-west highways in the area were reported closed, plows quit trying to operate in populous Jefferson County, west of downtown Denver, and in suburban Aurora the only police unit reported moving was a World War II tracked "Weasel."

The storm laid belts of snow and freezing rain eastward across the Plains and Midwest. Much of eastern Nebraska was coated with ice and the state highway patrol recommended motorists stay off the highways. State offices were ordered closed in Des Moines, Iowa, and ice buildups on electric lines caused power failures in several southeastern Iowa communities.

Ice blockages backed up water in sewers in Council Bluffs, Iowa. Semi trailer rigs were scattered along roadsides in western Iowa after they slid off the ice-glazed pavement.

An accident involving a semi-trailer truck and several cars blocked the westbound lanes of Interstate 80, a major coast-to-coast highway, between Waverly and Greenwood, Neb. Indiana State Police closed Interstate 65 at Lafayette when a one-inch layer of ice formed on the route linking Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville.

A double threat—a treacherous glaze on the highway and fog that cut visibility to 20 feet —slowed motorists in north central Illinois.

Farther south, rain was a boon to snow-bogged Effingham, Ill., and the St. Louis area. Temperatures were above freezing and the rain knocked a deep snow pack down to less paralyzing proportions.

Nine inches of snow fell at Grand Rapids, Neb., 3 to 8 inches bogged parts of Minnesota and Iowa and 5 to 12 inches hit Lower Michigan.

Death penalty, new speed limit, etc.

Many changes facing state in 1974

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Capital punishment will be reinstated, welfare grants will go up and the maximum speed limit will go down when hundreds of new California laws take effect New Year's Day.

Anticorruption measures prompted by Watergate, a bill requiring prices of the top 100 prescription drugs to be posted publickly, and legislation permitting less beer per bottle also will become law Tuesday.

Other bills range from designating the prehistoric sabre-tooth tiger as the official state fossil to granting women equal community property rights and credit opportunities.

The measures are the product of the first half of the new two-year, congressional-style legislature—which Asstmbly and Senate leaders have praised as highly successful. The second half of the 1973-74 legislature convenes Jan. 7.

Gov. Ronald Reagan signed 1,217 bills during 1973, and most of them take effect Jan. 1.

The maximum speed limit will be reduced from 65 miles an hour to 55 m.p.h. on New Year's Day under a bill by Democratic Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti.

The measure sped through the legislature during a December "mini-session" in reaction to the national energy shortage. It is expected to save 300 million gallons of gas annually.

Another law passed during the December session will provide hefty welfare increases to 500,000 blind, aged and disabled Californians.

Tye increase, averaging $38 per recipient, is coupled with a new federal law which will result in the Social Security Administration issuing aid checks to adult recipients from Washington starting Jan. 2.

The death penalty will be restored in California for 11 categories of murder under a bill by Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach. The restoration was authorized 14 months ago by voter passage of a constitutional amendment calling for the ultimate penalty. A spokesman for the state Department of Corrections said the apple-green San Quentin gas chamber has been maintained in working condition and is ready for use at any time. However, he said there are no plans to institute another "death row"—at least for a while.

Some 105 prisoners were on "death row" awaiting execution when the state Supreme Court ruled in February, 1972, that capital punishment was unconstitutional. A subsequent U.S. Supreme Court ruling indicated the death penalty could be reinstated if applied on a mandatory basis.

Beginning next Tuesday, capital punishment will apply to hired assassins, police slayers, life-term convicts who kill guards, mass and repeat murderers, train wreckers, killers of witnesses to crime, and persons who commit murder during rape, robbery, kidnaping, burglary and lewd acts involving children.

Politicians will have to disclose more about their financial holdings to the public under two Watergate-spawned bills.

Already more than a dozen local officials have quit instead of complying with the new conflict-of-interest bill. A companion bill will require candidates in the 1974 elections to disclose more details on their campaign contributions and expenses.

Some 5,000 pharmacies in California will begin posting the prices of the 100 most widely used prescription drugs under another new law. The posters, prepared by the state Department of Consumer Affairs, will display the names and the costs of the drugs so consumers can compare prices more easily.

Beer cans and bottles will be alowed to contain less of the frothy beverage than their labels say they do under a new law by Assemblyman Ray E. Johnson, R-Chico.

The law permits beer containers to have only about 11 ½ ounces of the liquid when the label declares the contents weight 12 ounces. Sponsors said the law was needed because beer brewers' measuring machines are not accurate enough to measure any closer than that, and they otherwise would face harsh penalties.

Other new laws will:

—Impose strict new logging standards on the $1 billion-a-year California timber industry to protect privately-owned forests from massive overcutting. The compromise measure was passed after two years of bitter battling among environmentalists and timber men.

—Reduce the mandatory jail term for second drunk driving convictions from five days to two. Judges have been reluctant to impose the five-day sentence, contending it was too harsh.

—Create new penalties for health care violations in nursing homes.

—Require testing by the department of Health of all glazed ceramic products imported into California. The measure was passed two years ago but its impact was delayed until Jan. 1.

—Stiffen penalties for killing threatened wildlife ranging from the humpback sucker to the California Yellow-billed Cuckoo.

—Grant private duck clubs in Merced County a tax break on marshlands in an attempt to preserve the waterfowl habitat.

—Increase registration fees for commercially designed vehicles such as vans and pickup trucks.

Above adv for pw's Wednesday dec 26 and thereafter.

He was born April 20, 1904, in Mexico and had resided in Pomona since 1918. He was a member of the Sacred Heart Catholic Church.

Survivors include one brother, Vincent of Pomona; a sister, Mrs. Frances Rodriguez of Pomona; and several nieces and nephews.

Rosary will be recited Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at Pollock Chapel. Mass of the Christian Burial will be celebrated Friday at 9 a.m. at Holy Cross Cemetery. The Rev. Joseph Kearney, pastor of Sacred Heart Catholic Church, will officiate.

Nixon, Kissinger confer on Mideast

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon conferred with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger on the Middle East peace conference Monday and was expected to meet with him again today.

The diplomatic developments meshed with holiday festivities at the White House.

Kissinger, who returned Saturday from a 15-day tour of Europe and the Middle East, said his hour-long meeting with Nixon was a "full discussion of the Middle East," but he declined to comment further on the session. The White House also declined to give details of the first face-to-face conference the two have had since Kissinger returned.

As he left the White House and entered a waiting limousine, Kissinger told reporters he expected to meet with Nixon again today. He also said he has cancelled plans to fly to Acapulco, Mexico, for a two-week vacation "because I have much work to do' on the Mideast peace conference in Geneva.

Nixon meantime signed compromise legislation giving partial home rule to the District of Columbia.

Several other pieces of legislation, passed by Congress in the final hours before adjournment, awaited Nixon's consideration. They included a bill to hike Social Security benefits by 11 per cent in 1974, a $73.7 billion defense appropriations bill and authorization for a major job training program that includes provisions for unemployment caused by the energy crisis.

Legislation granting a near record $5.8 billion allocation for foreign aid and a proposal to merge seven bankrupt Northeastern and Midwestern railroads into one modernized rail system also await Nixon's consideration.

The Nixon family will gather at the White House Tuesday for a morning of gift-opening and traditional celebrations followed by a turkey feast. Both daughters, Tricia Nixon Cox and Julie Nixon Eisenhower, and their husbands, will be on hand.

There still was no word whether Nixon would go to Key Biscayne, Fla., for a work-play vacation through New Year's day.

Bridges on hand to salute 1st China-bound freighte

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The first ship carrying general cargo from San Francisco to China left port this week, following a salute from Harry Bridges.

Bridges, longshore labor leader whom the government once tried unsuccessfully to deport as a communist, spoke at a celebration in the crew's messroom aboard the MV Caspian Sea.

Standing under a portrait of Chairman Mao, Bridges spoke both as president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Association and as a member of San Francisco's Port Commission.

"It's a great day for our organization," he declared.

His hosts served Tsingtao beer and a Chinese soda pop that one reporter said tasted faintly of oranges.

An invitation to Bridges to visit the People's Republic of China was withdrawn after his union's newspaper printed articles that appeared unflattering to Peking.

The ship was loaded with cotton and aluminum ingots.

Reagan wishes Rocky success

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan considers New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller an "outstanding governor" with whom he has enjoyed working over the years.

Rockefeller resigned recentl yand said he wanted to continue his tasks with two commissions. Many viewed Rockefeller's move as the first step toward a bid for the 1976 GOP presidential nomination. Reagan whom many also consider as a potential candidate, made no mention later of any presidential possibilities for Rockefeller.

"Governor Rockefeller has been an outstanding governor and I have enjoyed working with him over the years."

"I wish him every success with his new commission and I'm sure his background and nor of New York will be of experience gained as govergreat help to him in this undertaking."

Non-Communist Asia in throes of rapid inflation

By ROBERT C. CRABBE

TOKYO (UPI) His modest income diluted by inflation, a sharecropper on a Malaysian rubber farm cuts down to two meals a day.

Chinese housewives, traditional guardians of their families' savings, swarm Taipei's stock markets, seeking growth stocks or windfalls to keep the buying power of the family capital intact.

Tokyo women watch the price of toilet paper rise from six cents a roll to 16 cents in three weeks. Each morning, they crowd around the doors of supermarkets just before opening time. When the doors open, the women charge in like football players to strip the shelves of the few available rolls.

The year 1973 already has brought the non-Communist countries of Asia the worst inflation since the early years after World War II. It claws greedily at the people's hard-won savings. In countries with delicately balanced economies such as South Korea it threatens a postponement of economic growth.

The situation was bad in 1972. It was growing worse this year, even before the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries (OAPEC) started a petroleum embargo Oct. 17 as a strategic weapon in the Middle East war.

Oil Embargo

All over Asia, the oil embargo will deprive manufacturers of the basic raw material for a while panorama of goods—stove oil, gas for cars, synthetic textiles, and anything made of plastic.

As a result, the curves of consumer prices grew steeper in almost every country in December. The few experts willing to talk about it had nothing to offer but gloom.

In Tokyo, Japanese Minister of International Trade and Industry Yasuhiro Nakasone coined a new phrase, "negative economic growth." In laymen's language, this meant that in 1974 for the first time since the war Japan's big industries might produce less than they had the year before.

In almost every country this year the cost of living increase has run far ahead of the interest paid ordinary people on their savings in banks. One of the few exceptions is Indonesia, where savers can get an astonishing 18 per cent for their money.

In Singapore, the official cost of living index rose from 121.72 at the end of 1972 to 150.4 in August of this year—a result of strikes that brought down the government of Thanom Kittikachorn Oct. 14. Almost all the strikes have resulted in pay increases.

The threat of social unrest also hangs over Japan. The Liberal Democratic Party (LDP), which has been in power since the late 1940s, has been slumping steadily at the polls in recent years, especially in big cities.

Facing a crucial election for control of the upper house of parliament next summer, LDP has been fearful of standing up against union demands for high wage increases. Japan's big unions won wage increases averaging around 20 per cent in the spring of 1973.

Goods Shortages

The goods shortages have beaten down the walls even in Asian countries that were notably successful in restraining inflation before.

Nationalist China held the cost of living increase to an average annual rate of 1.7 per cent a year from 1961-72. There is no official forecast, but informed people in Taipei think the inflation rate will be 10-20 per cent this year.

Country by country:

Nationalist China — "In order to combat the first notable inflation in years, housewives flock to stock markets to speculate in stocks," reports UPI Taipei bureau manager Shullen Shaw. "Every stock exchange is jam-packed with women, and sometimes you hardly find any men there at all. Many women go there before 7 a.m. with lunch boxes and their life savings to occupy the few available seats and operate all day."

The government is subsidizing some food staples such as imported soybeans, and is lowering taxes on flour, wheat and construction materials. Saudi Arabia so far has treated Taiwan as a friendly country, and not restricted oil shipments. The government hopes not to increase gasoline prices before July 1, 1974. Vegetables are up around 30 per cent this year, and synthetic textiles have posted price increases of 30 to 50 per cent.

Philippines — the rate of inflation was 14.6 per cent in 1971, 10.2 per cent in 1972, and 20.8 per cent for the first eight months of 1973, according to the Philippines Central Bank.

Cost of living

The price of clothing had risen 20.6 per cent by September. Food prices were up 19.8 per cent, with rice, sugar, coffee and cooking oil leading the way, reports UPI's Fernando Del Mundo.

Indonesia—The cost of living is expected to go up about 15 per cent this year. Thrift is still popular with the banks paying 18 per cent interest. Spiraling rice prices have been one of the biggest contributors to the cost of living increase for the last two years.

Singapore — Singapore's cost of living index rose from a 1960 base figure of 100 to only 113.6 in 1971, an extremely stable performance. The government is reducing tariffs on a wide range of foodstuffs and raw materials in an effort to take off the pressure, says UPI reporter Nepal Ghose.

Food prices are up about 20 per cent this year, with most of the increase coming in the last six months. Rice, pork, bread, milk, beef and mutton have led the way.

Thailand—Thailand's cost of living index has risen from a base of 100 in 1962 to 141.61 in December. Almost all of the increase has come in the last two years, says UPI reporter Sumalee Phithayakorn.

Rice Prices

Since 1972, the price of rice has virtually doubled. With the stern Kittikachorn regime gone, a new government is trying to draw up a constitution, and has not yet come to grips with the inflation problem.

Although rice prices are at record highs, Thailand is expected to export about one million tons of rice in 1974, to partly cover its serious balance of payments deficit.

South Korea—Flour, eggs and sugar have registered 20 per cent price increases this year, says UPI reporter H.C. Shin. The government does not publish a cost of living index.

However, there were many major increases in wholesale prices in 1972, and a large share of these were passed on to the consumer.

As a result of the oil embargo, the government allowed a 30 per cent increase in the wholesale price of oil products Dec. 4. This and other recent price increases are responsible for a rise of 11.5 per cent this year in the Korean wholesale price index.

Cold Korea

Korea, an industrial country without oil supplies of its own, has been hard hit by the Arab oil boycott.

In addition, it is the coldest country among Asia's non-Communist nations.

Malaysia—the country's Central Bank says the cost of living on the Malay peninsula rose seven per cent this year through September.

Malaysia has not been hit as hard as most countries, says UPI reporter Ratan Singh. The economic planning unit of the prime minister's office says that "subject to many uncertainties" there is reason to hope the increase will not be so steep in 1974 and 1975.

Price increases this year include rice and other cereals up 17.1 per cent, meat 11.9 per cent, and fruits and vegetables 12.9 per cent.

Rose Parade floats short-lived, costly

PASADENA, Calif., (UPI) — With an average, run-of-the-mill float costing around $22,500, the annual tournament of roses parade is big business in Pasadena.

Once a year the majestic floats come gliding along Colorado Boulevard, resplendent with exotic colors, blooming flowers and pretty girls. They are in their glory for the two-hour parade, are on display for two more days, and then they are gone.

And the work for next year's parade begins.

But getting a float into the parade is not easy. According to W. Reid Allen, Jr., float entries chairman, approximately 200 applications are received every year for the 62-float parade.

Most of the floats, Allen said, have been in previous parades and receive priority for permits. This year, he noted, there were only six openings for new entries.

Life size big red

One of the fortunate newcomers is a float sponsored by the Kentucky Derby, the city of Louisville and the state of Kentucky and features a life-size replica of super-horse Secretariat.

"We were very lucky to get a float in," said Linda Dozoretz, representing the Kentucky float. "There were a number of things in our favor. It was a centennial for the Kentucky Derby and it was the 200th birthday of Kentucky."

Miss Dozoretz said they began planning the float last February, getting artists' renderings and bids for construction. By June, most of the work on the float had begun.

Out of chicken wire, styrofoam, fiberglass and wood, the skeleton of what will soon be a moving flower garden began to form.

The life-size model of Secretariat was created in Canada by sculptor Robert Wakeford, using the horse's exact measurements. Every muscle, every tendon, Miss Dozoretz said, was made exactly to Secretariat's form.

Six float makers

Wakeford first sculpted the horse in a substance similar to styrofoam, then covered it with fiberglass. The model was then cut apart, shipped to Pasadena and reassembled on the float. The more than 5 feet high horse weighs only 15 pounds.

While the real Secretariat was retired to a stud farm, the model will find a permanent home in Kentucky's Churchill Downs Museum.

With six float-making companies for some 62 floats, one might say business is indeed blooming. Herrin and Preston, for example, are working on 13 floats, including Secretariat's.

According to Wayne Herrin, his company employs 18 persons for construction of the floats, including engineers, designers, architects, artists, sculptors and painters. Another 720 persons are hired to put on the flowers 48 hours before the parade.

Anything goes on the floats — as long as that anything is flowers. Floats may be covered in blooms, petals, stems or leaves. Chrysanthemums are the most common flowers, favored for their durability. Mums are usually cut about a week before the parade, while roses are cut the day before and must be kept in vials of water. Herrin said about 90 per cent of all the flowers come from California.

After the parade, the floats are on display for two days, and then are destroyed except for the chassis. And then the work begins for next year's tournament.

Managua, a year later: Rebuilding on same location

By LEONARDO LACAYO

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Howard Hughes was in seclusion on the tightly guarded seventh floor of the Intercontinental Hotel, which he and his aides occupied exclusively. Strongman Anastasio Somoza was preparing to retire at his suburban hacienda.

But countless Nicaraguans were sitting outdoors in the bright moonlight.

Not only was it a hot night but, between 11 p.m. and 11:30 p.m., two earth tremors had shaken the city, causing some nervousness and apprehension despite the general pre-Christmas gaiety which pervaded Managua.

Then, at 12:35 a.m., a year ago today, the first of three major earthquakes began to pulverize this Central American capital. After the second one, just one hour after the first, most of the city was reduced to a macabre pile of twisted rubble.

At least 10,000, possibly 12,000 persons died in the quakes. An exact and final figure will never be known.

Another 20,000—including this correspondent—were injured as walls and ceilings fell, and roads and streets buckled, cracked and dropped into blackness.

More than 60,000 homes and buildings in a 600-block area covering 16 square miles of the heart of the city were destroyed or damaged beyond repair. Consequently, 300,000 persons were homeless. There was no electric power, telephone or water and most of the city's sewage system was ruptured.

Thus, for the second time in 41 years Managua was destroyed by earthquakes. On March 31, 1931, the city had also been leveled.

An estimated 1,000 persons died and 5,000 others injured in 1931, and there were immediate demands that the capital be moved. But after the initial clamor faded the city was rebuilt on the same site—only to be destroyed anew in 1972.

Now, Managua—like an adamant Phoenix—is going to rise once again across the same quake-prone territory.

Which poses this question: are Managuans so addicted to this spot, the nation's capital since 1851, that not even two catastrophes in less than half a century—and the advice of some geologists—can persuade them to move?

The answer is a qualifed yes.

As the 48-year-old Gen. Somoza explains it, one of the basic factors involved in the decision to rebuild the city here is the astronomical cost required for a transfer elsewhere.

Even more important, he said, is the fact that while Managua will stay where it is, the plan for rebuilding the capital—devised by earthquake savvy Mexican experts—envisions a major restructuring of the whole city to make it far less vulnerable.

For example, the area of the city traversed by four major quake "fault" lines will be forbidden to any construction, he said. Instead, broad boulevards—at least 120 feet wide— will dominate that supersensitive zone. It also will be embellished with parks, gardens, and other nonhousing developments.

Ex-President Somoza, commander of the Nicaraguan National Guard, is chairman of the National Emergency Committee, which has directed all post-quake operations including planning for the future.

Part of those plans call for the construction of 10 satellite cities (ciudadelas), each capable of housing 60,000 persons, around the periphery of the capital. Each will have its complex of public buildings as well as commercial zones.

Reconstruction of Managua is expected to get under way early in 1974, Somoza said. It will take between five and seven years, according to present estimates, and require at least $500 million.

How this is to be financed has not yet been spelled out. Scores of nations poured huge supplies or relief after the quake. The United Nations reported that 62 countries had donated total of $8.6 million within six months of the disaster.

The United States sent $27 million, including food supplies and emergency housing within only 90 days of the catastrophe. This included a "program loan" of $15 million covering hospital construction, rubble removal and water and sewer repair. Help from private U.S. volunteer agences added several million dollars more.

But a year after the tragedy, the job of demolishing unsafe buildings and clearing rubble is still unfinished.

Of the 600 blocks hardest hit by the quake, 400 have been cleared at a cost of $7 million of the $15 million loaned for this purpose from Washington. The remaining 200 blocks are expected to be swept clean by next May.

Not only will rebuilding in this 600-block zone be subject to especially rigid quake-resistant codes, but the area itself is being allocated for construction of important government buildings that will blend with private housing in which "both the rich and poor" will mix in a special planning pattern, according to Somoza.

Somoza was the only Nicaraguan known to see and speak to Howard Hughes during the mystery billionaire's stay of several months in this country.

After the quakes battered the city, Hughes fled from the isolated protection of the seventh floor of the Intercontinental Hotel, a pyramid-like eight-story structure which was badly damaged but which survived the catastrophe.

Somoza recalled, with some irritation, that Hughes never returned to Managua since the quake. He commented:

"Hughes always talks of money, but in the hour of our greatest need he forgot all about us."

Since last Dec. 23, Managua has, in fact, felt more than one thousand earth tremors including a particularly strong one last March 31. Coming on the 42nd anniversary of the 1931 quake, it provoked widespread panic among the populace.

But they remain and look forward to a new hopefully earthquake proof Managua.

Richardson cites 'ugly view of power abuse'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former Attorney General Elliot Richardson said that the country has "caught an ugly glimpse of the abuse of power" since the Watergate scandal was uncovered.

"Behind the layers of secrecy successively peeled back by persistent investigation we caught an ugly glimpse of the abuse of power," Richardson said. "It has been a frightening glimpse."

Richardson spoke at a Hotel Pierre dinner sponsored by the Appeal of Conscience Foundation. Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York and builder William Levitt were presented with the foundation's annual "Man of Conscience Award."

Richardson, who resigned rather than comply with President Nixon's order to dismiss ex-special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox, stopped short of attacking the President.

He said Nixon was "ill-advised," but added that the President "certainly is a man of conscience."

In that case flag stamps are available

NEW YORK (UPI) — Big city vignette:

Elderly lady, at stamp window of post office: "Fifty 8-cent stamps, please — the ones with the American flag."

Clerk: "Don't have any flags right now, but here's 50 8-cent stamps. What's the difference?"

Elderly lady: "Most of my mail goes to relatives in Poland. I want them to see the flag that has done so much for me."

Clerk: 'Wait a minute. ("Hey!" — to clerk at next window — "got any flag stamps?") "Here you are lady 50 flag stamps. Thank you."

Junior college has its own air force

ST. GEORGE, Utah (UPI) — Many a banana republic probably wishes it had an air force the size of the one owned by Dixie College.

The small unior college in southern Utah boasts six propeller driven airplanes—including a 20-passenger DC3. The "Rebel Air Force" —as it is known on campus—also has a jet fighter and a helicopter.

The planes, mostly U.S. Air Force surplus property, are used in flight training and aircraft maintenance classes at Dixie College.

Only four planes in the "Rebel Air Force" actually fly. They include two Cessna single engine 150's, a twin-engine Cessna 310 and the twin-engine DC3.

An F86 Sabre jet, a Bell 47 helicopter, an old fabric-wing military spotter plane and a twin engine C45 Beechcraft do not fly, but are used extensively in aircraft maintenance and repair classes.

Dixie, one of the smallest colleges in Utah with only 1,000 students, is the only college in the state to offer flying classes as part of its regular curriculum.

It is one of two schools in Utah to offer training for an aircraft mechanics license. The other is Utah State University, where many Dixie College students finish their education.

The Dixie aero technology program is run by Garn O. Huntington and V. Lowell Hansen, both avid aviators. Both teach the maintenance classes, which prepare students for a Federal Aviation Administration license, and Hansen teaches flying classes and also serves as pilot for college administrators, who use the Cessna 310 for business trips.

"It's one of the best places in the world to learn to fly," says Huntington. "We have good flying weather 360 days a year."

Huntington said the flight school got its start with the private "Desert Wings Flying Club" in St. George.

The club bought the two Cessna 150s with their own money, but found they were difficult and expensive to maintain. The group then donated the plates to the college and became a campusassociated organization.

The next plane to join the college air force was the twinengine Cessna.

"It was Air Force surplus," said Huntington. "They donated it to us on the condition we recondition and repair it so it would pass FAA standards."

The Air Force also gave Dixie the Korean War vintage Sabre jet, the helicopter, the old Stinson spotter plane and the Beechcraft.

"We have the students tear these planes down and rebuilt them," said Huntington. "All are in working condition, but are not certified to fly."

The latest addition to the flight line was the DC3, donated by the Georgia Air National Guard.

"They flew officers and occasionally the governor in it," Huntington said. "IT is absolutely immaculate. It was like getting a Cadillac with 150 miles on it."

The DC 3 will also be used in the maintenance classes and eventually, Huntington hopes, for flying lessons.

"It will really be something for someone just starting as a pilot to be qualified for a plane of that class," he said.

Huntington also has a "nice array" of jet engines and other aircraft systems, including almost a complete set of parts for a B52 bomber, thanks to the military surplus people.

"We built our engines for training literally out of junk heaps," he said.

About 20 students are now enrolled in the aircraft program, and Huntington claims his graduates now work in airports from coast to coast.

Pilot union chief flays UAL cutback

CHICAGO (UPI) — An official of the Air Line Pilots Association has accused United Air Lines of taking advantage of the national energy crisis to cut back on flights and personnel and increase profits.

Capt. William E. Arsenault, chairman of the United Pilots' Association Master Executive Council, said that United Air Lines "may well have formulated its plans to furlough the employes prior to President Nixon's speech on the fuel crisis.

United announced that starting Jan. 7, 1974, 100 flights would be canceled and 300 pilots and 650 cabin attendants would be furloughed "to meet the fuel shortage."

Arsenault said the association planned no retaliatory action immediately, but that it would "take a close look at the situation to determine whether all the furloughs were truly necessitated by the fuel shortage or whether other factors played a part."

Memorial medal

AUSTIN, Tex. — Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson has accepted the first silver medal commemorating the United States' 200th anniversary.

Mary T. Brooks, director of the U.S. mint, said the LBJ Library was selected to receive the first medal because Johnson was President when the American Revolution Bicentennial Commission was created in 1966.

Mrs. Brooks said the next five medals will be presented during October to the John F. Kennedy Library, the Dwight D. Eisenhower Library, the Harry S. Truman Library, the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, the Herbert Hoover Library and to President Nixon.

Missionary doctor in Thailand has an unorthodox background

By ROBERT KAYLOR

PUA, Thailand (UPI) — After several years as a missionary, Garland Bare decided he could not stand by helplessly as witch doctors rubbed buffalo dung in the wounds of mountain villagers and caused them to die of blood poisoning.

So he began to teach himself the rudiments of elementary medicine and eventually returned to college at the age of 33 to become a doctor.

That was 10 years ago. Today, Bare presides over a small hospital in this north Thailand town.

The concrete building usually has double its capacity of 14 patients on the rolls and could only be described as primitive by Western medical standards.

But it gets the job done and Bare is proud of it. "I would be appalled at the conditions if I walked in as a doctor straight from the United States," he says, "but we manage to do everything here except brain and open heart surgery."

Born in Tibet

Bare's family comes from Lincoln, Neb. But he was born in Tibet to missionary parents who were the only Westerners allowed in the interior region of the Himalayan country. The rest of his life has been just as unorthodox.

He was a college dropout and an atheist for a time before becoming a believer again and getting a degree in theology and linguistics. He is also a rare missionary who rejects the teachings of organized faiths, thus cutting himself off from their financial support.

"I have found that the established Christian denominations do not have much in their teachings for the Asians in underdeveloped countries to relate to," says Bare. "You have to stop telling people that love alone conquers all, because it doesn't."

Bare has developed a simple and direct version of Christian doctrine that he can put across in the dialects of the Meo and Yao hill tribes of the area.

He relies for support on what he describes as "a few independent free-thinking churches in the United States" and also gets financial aid from U.S. Air Force units based in Thailand, a source some missionaries would shun.

Full schedule

An intense person, Bare manages to find time to maintain a full schedule at his hospital, operate a hostel for hill tribe students who attend the district school here, walk the steep mountain trails on weekends to conduct church services, run an antimalaria campaign in remote villages, give driving lessons to young tribesmen so they can get jobs as truck drivers, and scrounge medical supplies from various sources to supplement the meager $500 a year budget for drugs he is allotted by the Thai government.

The hills around Pua are the domain of Communist-led hill tribe guerrillas, but in his 18 years in the district Bare has become a respected figure to the tribesmen and can go alone to areas where troops can't.

"My work with the tribesmen is aimed at educating them and then bringing them back to work with their own people," says Bare. "I would like to see them keep their tribal identities and customs. Perhaps I feel that way because my grandfather was an American Indian."

Although he feels the work he started here in the early 1950's is unfinished, Bare plans to leave Thailand for good early next year. His young daughter is a victim of cerebral palsy, and the only place she can get the necessary medical treatment and therapy is the United States.

Despite the occasional conflicts, Thai government officials say they will be sorry to see Bare go.

"We have started looking for a replacement for Dr. Bare at the clinic," says a health official from the provincial capital, "and we have not yet figured out what we will be able to do. He will be a very difficult man to replace."

3,000-YEAR-OLD MYSTERY SOLVED — A team of scientists has disclosed it has solved the puzzle of the origin of the Colossi of Memnon near Thebes in Egypt. Using some of the most modern scientific processes, the group determined that the statues were brought up the Nile from near Cairo, more than 420 miles away. Each statue weighed 720 metric tons and towered 47 feet above the pedestals they rested on. Here the group measures one of the two huge monuments to King Amenhotep III.

Priceless treasures

China sitting on huge archaeological finds

By GREGORY JENSEN

LONDON (UPI) — All around it are priceless treasures, the riches of ancient China. But one of the most thought-provoking exhibits in London's current Peking-sponsored show of Chinese antiquities is a photograph of a hill.

"This mound covers the tomb of the Chin Emperor Shih Huang Ti, the unifier of China," the picture's label says. This emperor, who died in 202 B.C., is the one who built the Great Wall of China.

"Incredible treasures are recorded as being buried with Shih Huang Ti" within this huge mound, surrounded by a mile-wide wall. Yet, the label says, "so far archeologists have not excavated it..."

This is a little like knowing the precise location of Troy, or Egypt's Valley of the Kings, and leaving them untouched.

Dig they must

China holds unnumbered Troys, still untouched. Seven thousand unbroken years of history have honeycombed China's soil with equivalents of many Valleys of the Kings, and most still await the archeologist's spade.

One lesson of the current Peking exhibit is the staggering number of discoveries made in the last 25 years. Another lesson is how many are still left to be made.

"The Chinese are in no hurry," said a British Broadcasting Corp. (BBC) reporter after visiting Shi Huang Ti's untouched burial mound. "They know how much still lies underground. They can afford tto wait."

They have waited a long time. A strange combination of circumstances has kept them waiting, and has kept China the richest archeological trove on earth.

The Chinese have always built of wood, and palaces and temples burned or crumbled. Civil disorder and dynastic wars scattered and destroyed the great Imperial collections. With few exceptions, almost nothing ancient remains above ground in China.

Tomb furnishings

But under the ground are numberless tombs, stuffed with unimaginable riches. The Chinese furnished their dead with everything necessary or desirable in life. Sometimes actual belongings were buried with the dead; sometimes mere funerary models were buried— exquisite works of art representing servants, musicians, horses, houses.

And once buried, the dead stayed buried. The ancient Chinese believed death was merely prolonged sleep.

The dead still owned their houses and lands, and might reclaim them at any moment. Excavation disturbed their slumber, and the very stability of the world depended on the ancestors sleeping on.

Thus serious archeology remained unknown. Only irreverant tomb robbers pilfered tombs to furnish Western museums. A few Westerners tentatively began scientific archeology in the 1920s, but the Japanese war and then China's civil war cut that short.

But with the Communist takeover of 1949 the waiting ended. Archeology simply exploded. Discoveries came faster than people could properly dig them up. Hundreds upon hundreds of sites are now known but not yet touched.

Imperial riches

Emperor Shih Huang Ti's mound tomb is one. Another is the double tomb of Empress Wu, who hacked her way to power in the 8th Century and then ruled supremely well, and her overshadowed emperor-husband.

Since 1950 alone, writes John Hay in "Ancient China," a book just published to coincide with the London exhibition, more than 400 Stone Age sites have been located in just one river valley. One of them measures more than a million square yards.

Every one of the 385 exhibits in the current show was discovered in the last 25 years. Many of the most spectacular were found less than five years ago.

"Every month brings news of new discoveries in widely separated parts of the country," reported David Bonavia, Peking correspondent of the London Times.

The latest spectacular find was announced in October—20 tombs dating as far back as 770 B.C. with what the Chinese news agency called "many rare historical treasures."

The doctor comments

Keep the nose moist to break bad habit

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Can you explain what causes a person to pick his nose? We are all made alike. Some people do it and some do not. I was always taught not to, but to use a handkerchief or tissue. I never found my husband doing it until lately, and it not only distresses me, but I find it a disgusting habit. I have dropped a couple of hints, in fact came right out and said "he never used to do it." But he continues to do it, and I find it hard to respond to an embrace a short while afterward.

DEAR READER — It can be a nervous habit. Another problem that is frequently a factor in this habit is the dry nose. This happens to some people as they get older. The normal moisture of the lining of the nose dries out.

When the dry nose is the problem, a good idea is to place a small amount of petroleum jelly in the tip of each side of the nose each morning. You can use a coton swab to put the small amount of lubricant in. Press the nostril shut on each side to help spread the lubricant around. This will serve as a moisturizer and keep the skin from getting dry and irritating the person. It will also help to prevent the formation of tight adherent crusts. Tell him "try it, you'll like it."

DEAR DR. LAMB — I find when running and needing wind, if I try nose breathing only, the nostril opening is not nearly wide enough. Will this change with more exercise? In winter if one nostril is stuffed with a cold, the other would not be adequate if I were to breathe more than usual. Is there a safe way to correct this?

DEAR READER — Most people who must breathe heavily or move a lot of air breathe through their mouths. Just watch the runners during competition. There is nothing wrong with this.

A lot of people have a nose that is more for decoration than functional purposes. That is too bad since the small hair structures in the nose help to filter the air and the nasal passages warm the air before it reaches the lungs.

If the air passageways are too narrow for reasonable breathing, it is possible for them to be increased in size by surgical methods. The septum between the two sides of the nose may need to be straightened or excess tissue in the passages removed.

5 tips for those who plan to drink and drive home

CLAREMONT — Don't take that "one for the road" if you plan to drive home.

But if you should, the California Highway Patrol urges you to observe these five rules for the drunken drivers.

—Carry a large amount of money, preferably in travelers checks. You will need this to post bail.

—Carry a toothbrush and any other toilet articles needed for a short stay in jail.

—Make arrangements with your boss to take a few days off to go to court. This will provide you ample time to explain to the judge why it is is all right to drink and drive.

—Start building your case now on what to tell your neighbors and friends when they read of your exploits in the newspapers.

—Cooperate with the officer that administers the sobriety tests, handcuffs you and transports you to jail. You and other citizens are paying him to keep the highways safe for driving.

Officials are estimating that 10,000 drinking drivers will be arrested during the Christmas and New year's holiday period.

This number of arrests would set an all-time record for the 10-day period said Lloyd Turner, chief of the state Office of Traffic Safety.

Highway patrolmen arrested 5,000 intoxicated drivers last year and expect to top that number this holiday period.

And with the arrests by local police agencies, the number should easily exceed 10,000 he added.

"The holiday campaign winds up a year in which the highway patrol raised its drunk-driving arrests by 20 per cent over last year and this is having an effect," said Turner.

"Unfortunately, even this pressure isn't enough. On the average to change much during the holidays.

"Arrests solve some of the problems but we won't see dramatic improvement until drivers make it a personal responsibility to drive only when sober."

Local highway patrolmen expect an increase in number of drunk-driving arrests, based on the 40 arrests made last weekend .

"Based on this, our total number of drunk-driving arrests for the 10-day period starting Dec. 22 should reach about 100," said Capt. W. C. Jones, area commander.

Officers recorded 75 such arrests during the same period last year.

Two area credit bureau officials receive awards

POMONA — Two officials at the Pomona Credit Bureau have been awarded certificates of merit by the Associated Credit Bureau, Inc., (ACB) for service to the individual consumer, the community and the credit industry.

They are Carl Neumeyer, manager, and Dianne Perry, assistant manager. The ACB is an international trade association which serves 3,400 credit bureaus and collection service members in the United States, Canada and several foreign countries.

"The standards of achievement established for this award exemplify the service provided by the Pomona Credit Bureau and also reflects an impressive performance in meeting community civic obligations," said John L. Spafford of Houston, Tex., ACB president.

Executives who earn the certificate of merit award are eligible to compete for the state leadership award to be presented next spring.

Jaycees planning awards banquet

POMONA — In conjunction with National Jaycee Week, Jan. 20 through 27, Pomona Jaycees will hold their annual Distinguished Service Award and Boss of the Year Banquet on Jan. 23 at Orlando's Restaurant at 7:30 p.m.

The recipient of the Distinguished Service Award must be a young man who has been actively involved in the community over the past year. He must be between 21 and 36.

Key Men and other awards will also be presented during the banquet. Steve Holmes and Tom Dreyer are chairmen for the project.

Valley car club has 5 winners

POMONA — Five representatives from the Pomona Valley's Uniques Car Club were winners in the first annual Autorama held recently at the Anaheim Convention Center. The program was sponsored by the Pick-Ups Limited Club.

The local winners were: Bill Nichols, a Pomona guest, 1929 Ford pickup, first place, pre-1934 closed pickup category; Bruce and Margaret McCoy, 1933 sedan, second place, street sedan category; Darold and Mae Wellbaum, 1929 roadster pickup, second place, fendered roadster pickup; Bud and Mickey Jackmon, 1921 roadster pickup, second place, non fendered roadster pickup category; and Ron and Sharon Foreman, 1932 coupe, third place, street coupe category.

FIRED UP WITH CHEER

Nine-year-old Heather Hofford receives candy and some friendly chat from the Pomona Fireman's Association's Santa Claus during the association's distribution of goodies to children. Operating from a fire truck, Santa, with the assistance of other fire personnel, gave the candy away at north, south Pomona and downtown locations Saturday.

Jr. high principal in Congress race

COVINA — Frank Cooper, a junior high school principal, has announced he will seek the Democratic nomination in the 35th Congressional District primary election next June.

Cooper, 42, said he plans to base his campaign on restoration of responsibility by public officials and showing the average citizen that members of government can care about their concern.

"Americans demand their representatives be people of integrity and honesty who are sensitive to the needs of the people," Cooper said. "I believe we need people in politics who care about this country, its people and its quality of life.

"Americans are deserving of better representation than they have had."

Cooper is a resident of Covina, and is principal of a Baldwin Park junior high school.

He has been active in community affairs, and is currently a member of the Los Angeles County Democratic Central Committee.

Cooper is the third Democrat to formally announce he will run for the 35th district seat. No Republican candidates have yet announced.

The newly reapportioned 35th district includes all of the Pomona Valley (with exception of Diamond Bar) and the San Gabriel Valley cities of West Covina and Covina.

Cal Poly professor predicts January beef shortage with price increase

POMONA — Consumers can expect a slight beef shortage and an increase in beef prices beginning the first of next year, according to Jack T. Gesler, professor of animal science at Cal Poly.

Gesler claims this shortage situation is the result of the government's ceiling on beef prices during the summer months of this year.

"Because of uncertainty during the price ceiling period, feed lots were putting cattle on substitute feeds which are cheaper than grain. When the ceiling was lifted, the cattle were put back on grain, but these cattle won't go to market until February or March."

Feed lots, basically hotels for cattle, held off slaughtering cattle during the price freeze, Gesler said. Once the freeze was lifted, cattle were put on the market, creating somewhat of a surplus. Consumers according to Gesler, also curtailed their beef buying habits to some extent.

This has all led to a situation which will culminate in a small shortage of beef in January, he said. The market should stabilize shortly thereafter, he added.

Gesler, who is also a consultant to the U.S. Feed Grain Council, points out that it requires about 1½ years from birth to the market place for a typical beef cattle. The cost to the feed lot is nearly 50 cents per pound.

Gesler said the average price hike per steer will be beween $60 and $70, or an average of 10 cents per pound at the wholesale level.

Problems in the beef market have occurred primarily due to the price freeze on beef while feed prices were allowed to rise, said Gesler. Feed prices have gone up close to 100 per cent.

"Right now," he said, "the price of beef in proportion to the price of feed is very good buy."

Gesler said an additional problem in the beef market is the change in beef-buying habits of the average American family. He finds that at the time of the beef price freeze and shortage period, the typical consumer turned to other foods as substitutes. But, Gesler feels, the amount of meat consumed is directly proportional to the disposable income of the family. "It may take six months to a year, but the market will stabilize." Gesler points out. "Our prices are still much cheaper than the rest of the world."

Council to study petitions for Kellogg access

POMONA — Petitions by residents for additional access to the Kellogg Park I tract will be considered by the City Council in the adoption of the city budget for 1974-75.

During the budget sessions, the council will examine the possibility of providing additional access by extending Orange Grove Avenue west from Ganesha Boulevard to Gleneagles Avenue within the tract.

The Orange Grove extension presently is included in a five-year capital street improvement program for 1976-77 construction, according to Public Works Director Ronald Kranzer.

The council could give the project higher priority and schedule the improvement for the 1974-75 fiscal year.

School accepting registrations for the spring semester

POMONA — Pomona Adult School will begin accepting spring semester registrations Jan. 2.

The office, on the main floor at 800 S. Garey Ave., is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

New classes being offered this spring include organic gardening, African art, pattern adjustment, advanced signing and communication for parents of deaf children, wood shop and ornamental iron work.

More than 50 courses will be offered during the semester.

Social Security office announces some changes

POMONA — The Social Security office here will start the new year with new office hours and different colored benfit checks.

Under the new schedule, the office will open at 9 a.m. instead of 8:30. It will continue to close at 4:30 p.m.

The change will allow employes to spend the first hour on training matters related to the new supplemental security income program and to clear up any work left from the preceding day, said Mrs. Lorraine Brannen, district manager.

"In this way, we hope to complete action on new claims as quickly as possible and get the process started for issuing checks without delay."

New gold-colored checks will be issued next month as payment for supplemental security income benefits.

The new program will provide benefits for the needy, disabled, blind and persons 65 and older. A single person may receive $130 a month and an eligible couple, $195 a month.

Green-colored checks are used to pay for retirement, survivors and disability insurance benefits.

The district office is at 445 E. Holt Ave.

YMCA starting swimming

POMONA — The Pomona Valley YMCA will be offering a variety of swim programs beginning in early January, including swim lessons for adults and preschool-aged children and swim-safety instruction for boys and girls.

Swim lessons for adults on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. will begin Jan. 7. Another class, for women only, will be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 10 to 11 a.m. The cost will be $1 for YMCA members and $10 for nonmembers.

Preschool aged children's lessons will be divided into mother-baby courses and a tiny tot program. The mother-baby sessions, for youngsters from three months to 3 years old, will be held on Mondays and Wednesdays at 10 a.m. and at 3 p.m. The tiny tot classes, for 3 to 6-year-olds, will meet on the same days at 9, and 9:30 a.m. and at 2:30 p.m. An additional class will be available at 9 a.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays. The cost for these classes, which begin Jan. 7 and 8, is $15 for 10 lessons.

The water-safety class, for boys and girls 12 and older, will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The class will run for five weeks.

For more information on the YMCA's swimming programs, persons may call 623-6433.

THURLOW CORNWELL of Pomona has received a $25 savings bond from the General Telephone Co. for suggesting that certain telephone switching equipment be combined to improve longevity and productivity. Cornwell, a telephone equipment-installer, received the award through the company's employee suggestion program.

Emerson Jr. High principal announces honor roll

POMONA — Names of students who made the first-quarter honor roll at Emerson Junior High School were released today by Principal Nils K. Stamps.

The Message

That small, faint voice you may have heard above the racket of the cash registers during the Christmas shopping rush was that of an infant hoping to be noticed amid the hurrying crowds.

Most people, if they listened, recognized the voice as that of the Christ Child, the Savior. His birth, His mission on earth, is what Christmas is all about.

For many others — or different religious persuasion, or lesser persuasion, or no persuasion — the voice may have had a different source.

But it was and is present nonetheless, and the message it speaks is the same for all men.

It is a message that echoes across the ages each year at this season — a message of hope, of belief in the essential worth of mankind, a rebounding faith that despite all the sorrow men visit upon themseleves they are learning little by little how to live in peace with one another.

It is a message that has been relayed from one disillusioned, frustrated, yet hopeful, generation to another, and will go on being relayed until the allotted time for man on this planet runs out.

Man today has quite a bit to say about how long or short that time will be. For in this century he has discovered the power that can either reduce civilization to savagery, if not wipe it out altogether, or elevate it to heights undreamed of.

Yet it is not that power that needs controlling. It is man himself, just as it has always been.

That is why the Christmas message is as live and pertinent and hope-refreshing today as it was when it was first heard 2,000 years ago.

There CAN be peace on earth, if men will but have good will. There ARE tidings of great joy, if men will but unclog their ears of the noise and confusion they surround themselves with.

We will listen, for a time. For a brief moment, we will believe.

Then we will forget. We will carefully store away the precious, perishable joy of the holiday and again put on the tired old cynicism and selfishness of the everyday world.

We will forget Christmas — until another year, when its undying message comes ringing back again, as new and fresh and real as ever.

Kent: do the times justify the means?

The horror of Kent State was frozen for all time in the photograph of an anguished girl kneeling over the body of one of the victims.

For many Americans, that one picture symbolized the tragedy far better than any amount of words could, as no doubt it will continue to do for every generation to come.

It also symbolized a much larger tragedy that befell America during the bitter years of the Vietnam war.

Many Americans forget, if they ever knew, that the girl in the picture was not a student at Kent or a college student of any kind. She was a 15-year-old runaway from Florida who happened to be on the scene at Kent State because, at that particular moment during those days when America seemed to be coming apart, that was "where the action was."

Now, after three years, a federal grand jury in Cleveland is looking into the killing of four Kent State students and wounding of 11 others by Ohio National Guardsmen, and "at long last," say the parents of one of the slain students, "there is hope that justice might be done."

Justice? Certainly, if evidence is disclosed indicating that some of the guardsmen conspired to fire indiscriminately into a crowd of students, those involved should be brought to trial. The photographic evidence alone strongly suggests that they were hardly in imminent danger from the students.

But this "evidence" seems inadequate to the larger questions involved.

Whether or not then Ohio Gov. James Rhodes acted wrongly in sending the National Guard to the campus, he was responding to the appeal of the mayor of Kent, whose city had for two days been in a state of turmoil, with bands of students — and nonstudents — rampaging both on the campus and in the downtown area.

The whole country was in turmoil in May 1970. Student demonstrators had shut down some 300 campuses in response to President Nixon's invasion of Cambodia. Antiwar people were taking the law into their own hands, and justifiably or not, were setting the stage for the kind of mindless tragedy that happened to take place at Kent State.

It is understandable that the parents of the slain students want to have the full truth establsihed about the immediate circumstances surrounding the killing of their children.

But to focus on the actions of the guardsmen alone, would be to ignore the long train of events — the rise of the youth culture and nomads, the runaways, the campus takeovers, the defiance of authority, the flirtation with revolution — the whole climate of the times which culminated in Kent State.

The guardsmen were the contemporaries of the students. What goaded them into such rash action? What caused them to look upon a distant, faceless crowd of students as the "enemy"?

Who are the guilty — only those who actually fired the rifles, or also those who contributed to a situation in which the need to restore order combined with human weakness or stupidity or fear to produce tragedy?

Questions like these will have to be asked, and answered, if we hope to achieve "justice" in the larger sense about Kent State.

Light Enough for Everyone

JACK ANDERSON

It's not merry Christmas everywhere

STRINGTOWN, Pa. — Velma Robinson isn't impressed with the plaints of people who have turned down their thermostats and shut off their Christmas lights to save energy. "I wonder," she mused, "how they would feel if they had lived without water for 20 years."

There was more resignation than indignation in her voice. For Mrs. Robinson and her neighbors have learned to live in homes without water, except for the rain they can trap and the wells they have dug.

If they want water to brew coffee, it takes more than a simple turn of the tap. They must walk to their cisterns or wells. They have learned to save the dirty water form their wringer washing machines for scrubbing floors. And it's a cold trudge through the snow to reach the outhouses behind most homes.

Yet Mrs. Robinson feels fortunate. Her sturdy, wooden home has a large roof, which catches more rainwater than her neighbors get. The water from the sky washes down the drainpipes through a sand-and-charcoal filter into a cement cistern.

Status symbol

Her husband Lloyd, like most of the menfolk in Stringtown, is a coal miner. He also built her an indoor bathroom, which has given the Robinson home a special status. The water is pumped into their house from the cistern.

Stringtown rises out of a rugged, wooded hillside and quickly slumps back into it. The homes are built in a string along the main street, an arrangement which apparently gave the town its name. There are no shops, except for a small beauty parlor which Annabelle Pratt operates out of her home down a dirt road from the old schoolhouse. The youngsters who used to study their ABC's in the single schoolroom have been replaced by a local hunt club, known as the Sportsmen's Club, which now meets there.

The town overlooks the Monongahela River, whose waters are so near yet so far away. The Riverside Boatel, a wooden hostelry built 129 years ago for the river runners, burned to the ground a few weeks ago. The $45,000 loss wasn't covered by fire insurance, because there are no fire hydrants in Stringtown.

The householders, if they want fire protection, must pay exorbitant rates — if they can get any insurance at all.

Hardy townspeople

Stringtown has 40 families, hardy folk, who depend largely upon the Buckeye Coal Company for sustenance. Of the town population, 18 are retirees and six are widows.

The Buckeye mine reopened only recently after a fire had closed it for two years. The fire damage, aggravated now by the intensified mining operations because of the energy crisis, threatens the town's tenuous water supply. Because of the excavations, cisterns are cracking and wells are drying up.

At the appeal of the townspeople, I sent my associate Bob Owens to Stringtown to listen to their complaints. Despite a snowstorm, more than 40 residents gathered at the schoolhouse.

One of widows, Sarah Sands, her years etched deeply in her features, said she "had no water all last winter." But now she has a cistern, which stores rainwater. However, she, like her neighbors, must buy trucked-in city water when rainfall is insufficient to fill their cisterns.

Dry periods

The beauty operator, Annabelle Pratt, invested $1,500 in a well. "In time, we'll lose it," she said, "because of the mining." Already, the well has dry periods. Then Mrs. Pratt borrows water from Mrs. James Deems, who lives across the road, and uses five-gallon water cans to give shampoos.

The townsfolk used to gather at the schoolhouse for community dinners, which were cooked in a kitchen off the schoolroom. But now the well has gone dry.

A member of the state legislature, Donald Davis, has been battling in vain for government funds to pipe in water. He reported to the assembled citizens that he had run into a "stone wall."

"Everybody here has pride in his property," he said. "They pay their taxes, but they aren't getting any help."

'Too rocky'

For two decades, the local Carmichaels Water Authority has contended that the terrain is too rocky to provide water. But the word that our representative was coming to Stringtown stirred the water authority into sudden action. The day before Owens' visit, the company offered a plan to provide water service and fire protection.

The estimated cost would be $200,000 — little more than President Nixon soaks the taxpayers for four flights to San Clemente. But the water authority can't afford to put up the money. "It would break us," a spokesman told Owens.

Becoming as little children

Phony Santa Clauses play "Jingle Bells" on Main Street cash registers. Women plow through department store basements like so many hammerhead sharks, shoving, wrecking, buying, stealing. A clerk says "Merry Christmas" as he shortchanges them.

A bum who smells bad is shaking a can on the street corners, begging alms for bread and buying booze. A dad takes his son on a drive into the snowy countryside and tramples his neighbor's fence to chop down his neighbor's tree so father and son can take it home and hang tinsel on it and gather the family around it and celebrate the birth of Him Who taught "Thou shalt not steal."

And they spell His birthday with an "X." Xmas. "X" marks the spot where humanity lies — steals. And Xmas morning the radio blares carols interrupted by news of murder, depravity, corrupt politics and "2,200 teenagers in one county pregnant last school term."

And in the din somebody is calculating how he can exchange a misfit gift and how much that crummy toaster cost in the first place and on every hand men proclaim "peace on earth." And there is no peace. So men of goodwill rush to open first the packages that gurgle, for Xmas is a dandy excuse for a drunken orgy.

But then somewhere, elsewhere, in an apartment apart or in a house at the end of a freshly swept walk, small children who should be sleeping fidget and peek and wonder what time it is; determined to stay awake until Santa comes — but they never can quite.

And it's still dark when they awaken and bound from the bed to the scrawny, lovely lighted tree and delightedly rip the wrappings from presents which aren't much: knit gloves, hand-knit, Mom's hands. The gadget from Santa's workshop you just thought you saw in Dad's workshop the week before. And in the stocking by the mantel an orange and some candy. Nowhere in the skies is there a light as in the eyes of a boy when he's 4 and it's Christmas. Spelled like Christ . . . mas.

Unless you become as little children you can never see what they see. They see the Kingdom on Christmas morning. In the child's eyes is reflected the long-sought light which first entered the world through the window of a stable. For in this house on this day are the gifts you cannot have until you give them away. In this house on this day are faith and hope and love.

LETTERS FROM P-B READERS

As others see it . . . . . . letters

Which is more important?

Everyone has been asked to dispense with the outside lighting of trees, homes, commercial displays and such in order to conserve energy. Many of the small towns have gone along with this suggestion, willingly, others have gone along with it bust most unwillingly.

The point is, you can't save energy in one direction to destroy that saving in another. You don't want to disappoint the children, that's what it's all about. Has no one thought about the disappointment when the last paycheck is brought in by the family breadwinner? Can't be, you say, Don't be so sure. The energy shortage stems from lack of oil. Oil is the base for many products we now take for granted. Have you not noticed a marked shortage in certain areas — resin by-products, plastics, all these things that go together to make the things one uses daily.

Cut off the supply at the ground and it works its way all the way up. No base to operate from, no products to manufacture, who needs the workers? Cut the factory force, next it's the administration of aforementioned factory. And you're wondering am I crazy; no, not really, I just see bleak days ahead, and far too many disappointed children in the future.

I read with utter disbelief, the little bit we're using can't make that much difference. So add all the little bits together, it's one helluva mountain. Is it worth it to have to do without a few lights now, in order to keep that family paycheck coming in a little longer? After all how much hunger later will lights that are turned on now assuage. Which then is more important, lights for the eyes to delight in, or food for the hungry later? Will lights outside on a tree keep you warm inside a cold house? Think people: Think. — Phyllis Hochfeld, Glendora.

Gossip for today

A lot of us older folks would like to follow Benjamin Franklin's advice: "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise." But so far as that route to health, wealth and wisdom is concerned, we are finding it one that day by day becomes increasingly difficult to live up to. The "early to bed" part is easy enough. In fact, we go to bed with the chickens. But it is the early rising that is getting us down. The truth of the matter is we get up so often during the wee small hours that we have to go back to bed and sleep until nine or ten in order to be able to make it through the rest of the day.

INSIDE REPORT

Rep. Mills sees his power eroded

By ROWLAND EVANS
and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Although a completely recuperated Rep. Wilbur D. Mills of Arkansas resumes full-time chairmanship of the House Ways and Means Committee in January, his once majestic authority has dwindled close to mortal dimensions — with scant chance for recovery.

With Mills convalescing since mid-August following back surgery, the revolution now leveling authority in Congress has caught up with the Ways and Means Committee and its awesomely prestigious chairman. Rep. Al Ullman of Oregon, acting chairman in Mills's absence, instituted democratic procedures to give individual members a voice in policy decisions.

Thus, the 25-member committee, intensely loyal to Mills for so long, is now overwhelmingly opposed to restoring his authority.

Given their taste of freedom, committee members will not relinquish it — though many concede the efficiency of the most important committee in Congress has been badly eroded by the new leveling. Mills, last of the postwar congressional giants, has had his chairmanship cut down to size. The Mills era, with the legislative master from Kensett, Ark., controlling key domestic legislatiion for more than a decade, is over.

Dispersal of Power

Besides his legendary legislative craftsmanship and political astuteness, Mills's unique power derived from absolute control over the committee. In 1958, his second year as chairman, he abolished subcommittees to gain that control. During the past four months, Ullman has restored them in embryonic form as "task forces." This dispersal of power is so popular among members that they would fight Mills to retain it.

Through "task forces" and other reforms, Ullman has ingratiated himself with committee members. When the Senate turned the Social Security bill into a "Christmas tree" loaded down with costly goodies, Ullman formally consulted his committee on what to do. In contrast, Mills would have informally consulted Sen. Russell Long of Louisiana, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Ullman's course guaranteed delay in passing the bill. Moreover, his tendency to compromise on every point diluted the foreign trade bill. Joining the rest of Congress, the Ways and Means Committee has become a markedly less efficient instrument as a result of reform. Nevertheless, even committee members who recognize this naturally prefer Ullman's permissive reforms to Mills's austere authority.

That's why Mills would face heavy going in any showdown over reform with Ullman, a showdown possibly presaged by cooling relations between them. Some committee members say Mills was not happy with an article in Dun's Review, containing lavish praise of Ullman by committee members. For his part, Ullman grumbled to members when Mills was issuing statements to the press about the trade bill from his Little Rock hospital bed while Ullman was grappling with the bill in committee.

Can't count on support

Thus, Mills can no longer count on unquestioning committee support. For years, Ullman himself was a loyal Mills lieutenant. Rep. Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois, once a Mills stalwart, enjoys the new freedom. Republican members confide they will not tolerate the old intimate working realtionship between Mills and Rep. Herman Schneebeli of Pennsylvania, the committee's senior Republican.

Even if Mills had not missed four months because of illness, erosion of his power seemed inevitable. House reforms now require open committee meetings and fewer restrictions on floor amendments to Ways and Means bills, undercutting the chairman's authority.

Moreover, the committee is facing two additional challenges to its primacy. The recommendations of a select committee headed by Rep. Richard Bolling of Missouri, long a rival and critic of Mills, would strip away much (health, welfare, foreign trade) of the vast Ways and Means jurisdiction and limit it largely to tax legislation. Simultaneously, a newly liberal Senate Finance Committee, headed by a newly aggressive Chairman Long, is serving notice it demands equal status with Ways and Means.

Finally, Mills has not fully recovered from the decline in his prestige suffered last year when, obviously bored with minutia of legislation, he ran for President.

Berry's world

"What's with our parents? This year, YOU got a doll and a nurse's kit, and I got a toy truck and a doctor's kit!"

ROOFTOP DISPLAY

This nativity scene on the roof of Christ the King Lutheran Church in Walnut, won the top award in the city's Christmas decorations contest this year. Rearranging part of the scene is Quinn Lewis, one of the members of the church's youth group which put together the decorations.

Career hotline cools burning job questions

INDUSTRY — Are you concerned about how the energy crisis might affect your job? Are you looking for a skill that will guarantee you job security?

These and many other questions related to the world of work may be answered through the new Career and Vocational Counseling Hotline effective Jan. 2.

Sponsored by Valley Vocational Center (VVC), the hotline telephone number, (213) 333-3558, will be manned by trained, professional counselors between the hours of 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. Evening appointments and other information can be arranged by phone or visit.

According to Mike Abramson, coordinator of the program, "the Career and Vocational Hotline is part of a comprehensive Career Counseling Center at VVC.

"We can provide labor market information, job placement information, test information on the G.E.D. and vocational tests as well as a library of career information."

Two placement offices are available on the VVC campus that add input to the Career Hotline.

Abramson explained the satellite office of the West Covina district Department of Humane Resources Development located at VVC is open to the public. This job bank site receives a computerized daily report of 8,500 new jobs listed with HRD in Southern California. In addition, VVC has its own placement office that provides part time employment for certain students through the college work study program.

The impetus for the career hotline came from VVC's concern over the fact that most persons don't really have enough information to make career decisions that affect the rest of their lives.

"Also, with the threat of an economic recession resulting from the energy crisis," noted Abramson, "we feel that the time has come for men and women to be able to find out just what jobs are available, what is the status of their present job categories, and how they can reach their educational and vocational goals by the ease and convenience of a telephone call."

Abramson brings to the Holtline over 25 years of professional vocational counseling experience.

Prior to his work at VVC, he spent years organizing and supervising vocational training and placement programs for such groups as the Los Angeles Women's Job Corps Center, the Jewish Vocational Service and the Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation (presently known as the Department of Rehabilitation).

"My main concern," he said, "is to make sure that we can reach anyone who needs advice or assistance on one of the most important problems that people and society face; how to obtain satisfactory, constructive, worthwhile employment."

Appointments for job counseling can be made by calling the Career Hotline 24 hours a day. "We hope to establish on-going relationships with persons who have diverse occupational capabilities and needs," said Abramson.

CAREER COUNSELOR

Mike Abramson is coordinator of Valley Vocational Center's career and vocational counseling hotline telephone service which becomes effective Jan. 2. Professional counselors will take calls at (213) 333-3558 Monday through Friday from those wishing to retrain or acquire new job skills to gain employment.

VA checks on way to MSAC vets

WALNUT — Things are looking up for many Mt. San Antonio College veteran students. After a delay of several months, their Veterans Administration checks are coming in, and an emergency fund has been established to ward off future financial crises.

The Veterans Emergency Fund received a shot in the pocket-book this week when the Disabled American Veterans of Pomona donated $500 to be used for temporary emergencies experienced by MSAC veterans.

Commander Larry Dunn, former MSAC student and a veteran of Vietnam, made the presentation to college President Eldon E. Pearce on behalf of DAV's Jack Ford, Jr. Chapter 9. The donation is part of the chapter's Veterans Aid and Assistance program and is earmarked for short-term loans to student veterans.

The donation came as a direct result of news stories about the veterans' problems this semester when they did not receive their VA subsistance checks. For many of these veterans, the checks are their only means of support while attending classes. The VA computer problems, which is blamed for the long delay, has been rectified, and the veterans are now beginning to receive overdue payments.

With the donation of the Pomona DAV and the tradition of the $1,500 loan supplied by the Associated Students and the $1,500 grant given by the MSAC Faculty Association, the new fund will continue to assist vets with momentary money needs, according to college officials.

Student restaurant going up in Rowland

ROWLAND HEIGHTS — Ground has been broken for construction of a student-operated restaurant at Rowland High School.

The restaurant is designed as a vocational education training facility. It is planned to accommodate 80 patrons and will require minimal construction because it is being built within existing concrete base and roof structures, said Ruth Richards, for services director.

This campus program will cater to students in menu planning, decor and atmosphere.

It is partially funded through a grant from the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Students enrolling in the district's two-year food service course will receive instruction in basic nutrition, menu planning, orientation to the food service industry, sanitation and safety, quantity food preparation, short order quantity food preparation, work simplification and restaurant service.

In addition, students will receive training as waitresses for patrons sitting in booths, at tables and at counters.

Consumers to feel effects

Economic outlook not too bright

By LEONARD CURRY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumers will be paying more for less in 1974. Workers in chemicals, housing and the auto industry will be laid off more frequently and in larger numbers. Production will decline.

Rare optimists say the economy will grow slightly in 1974. Most experts say there will be little or no economic expansion. But few predict a recession.

If the definition of a recession is accepted as either six months of no increase or an actual decline in the gross national product, however, then signs for a recession next year are active.

"The wild card is oil," said Dr. Richard S. Landry, economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Landry's assessment was repeated again and again by other economists and leaders of government, industry and labor in a series of interviews and public statements.

Higher prices

All were unanimous in predicting higher consumer prices, based on increasing labor costs, more expensive fuel and shortages of raw materials and oil.

"In some cases these shortages will be quite unlike any we have seen before in scope or duration," said Commerce Secretary Federick B. Dent. "So what we are talking about is a business' ability to remain functioning in the face of potential plant shutdowns and massive employe layoffs."

Economists from the universities of Pennsylvania and Michigan foresee growing unemployment because of shortages of raw materials, which will mean less production. These respected schools of economics also say the reduced flow of finished goods will drive up retail prices, reducing consumer demand and further discouraging production.

Double unemployment

The number of married men without jobs will probably double as unemployment rises from 4.5 per cent to at least 7 per cent. House Speaker Carl V. Albert says unemployment will be 8 per cent, while Chamber economist Landry says 6 per cent would be "slightly on the low side."

"If we really have cutbacks in industrial employment, the real brunt of this is going to fall on the married working man and the unemployment problem is going to be more serious than what we have experienced," said John Swearingen, chief executive officer of Standard Oil of Indiana.

While unemployment looms for industry, the Agriculture Department reports farmers straining to increase production are facing labor shortages. The department says farm income probably will match the record $89 billion of 1973 despite shortages of fuel, fertilizer and workers.

Continued high prices for food will contribute to a "rapidly" rising cost of living in 1974, according to AFL-CIO economist Nathaniel Goldfinger.

"Workers are not going to sit by" while this is happening, he said.

Pay to decline

Economist Pierre Rinfret, citing a lag between cost of living increases and union demands, said real take-home pay will decline for many workers next year, encouraging basic wage settlements about 30 per cent higher than in 1973.

Adding to industry's dilemma will be rising prices for diminishing supplies or raw materials.

U.S. Steel Vice President William Whyte said that zinc, for example, is getting such high prices overseas that it virtually has disappeared domestically. As a result, galvanized steel, which requires zinc in its manufacture, is scarce in the auto and housing industries.

Short supplies of building materials and high interest rates have sent construction down 30 per cent since August. Home sales have declined about 25 per cent, adding to an already serious housing shortage.

The Associated General Contractors, which represent about 6,000 major builders, said the government's tight-money policy and shortages of gasoline are forcing thousands of building mechanics to lose jobs every week.

Chemical industry

Wholesale unemployment also could occur in the chemical industry if fuel shortages continue for an extended period, according to a study for the 20 largest companies.

The study said a reduction in oil would cut supplies of petroleum byproducts used in the manufacture of fertilizer, plastics, synthetic fibers and rubber with a resulting nationwide loss of 1.6 million jobs.

The auto industry, with sales of 1974 model cars down 11 per cent in the first six weeks of the model season, began cutting back production lines in December. The gasoline shortage and bans on Sunday sales were also having rippling effects on service station operators and repair garages.

The AFL-CIO's Goldfinger said the economy is already decelerating with sales of autos, building materials and home appliances declining, total retail sales slow and the buying power of workers slipping.

"Superimposed over all this is the energy crisis," said Goldfinger, "and we don't know its depths."

Ban asbestos water pipe, group urges

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A re earch goup Monday asked the government to ban use of asbestos cement pipe in drinking water systems because it may cause cancer.

The Center for Science In the public interest said a study conducted by a major asbestos manufacturer, the Johns-Manville Corp., showed that water passing through such pipe washes asbestos fibers from the cement and carries them into the tap water.

Air-borne asbestos is a known cancer causer, although less has been documented about its effect in food or water. The center said, however, there is "ample reason to believe that ingestion of the major varieties of asbestos leads to increased risk" of cancer of the stomach and digestive tract.

A Johns-Manville spokesman said that despite many tests "no one has ever determined any problems" with asbestos cement pipe.

Barry Castleman, a researcher for the science center, and Dr. Albert J. Fritsch, codirector of the center, told the Environmental Protection Agency ((EPA) in a letter that there are more than 200,000 miles of asbestos cement pipe serving U.S. consummer, put down since the pipe was first introduced in 1938.

"We must cease manufacturing asbestos cemen pipe for use in portable water supply," the letter said. The group did not request that existing pipe be unearthed and replaced.

Castleman said in an interview, "There is no proof that the level (of asbestos) in water represent a hazard to health...."

But he said the type of cancer involved sometimes does not show up until after decades of exposure and "until we know for sure, there's no reason to continue to expose people to it...I think there is a very good case for not making any more of this pipe."

The pipe is used in municial water supplies largely in the West and Southwest where it is cheaper than cast iron pipe which would have to be brought from the east where most foundries are located.

The Johns-Manville study, a copy of which the Center submitted to the EPA, was made in 1969 and 1970 on municipal water supplies in Malvern, Pa., and Glendale, Ariz. Well water was involved in both cases and the Malvern well was in an area where asbestos minerals occurred naturally in the surrounding rocks.

The battered presidency

Nixon's glowing plans of year ago now lie in pieces

By ARNOLD B. SAWISLAK
UPI Senior Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Battered but still battling, the Nixon presidency lurches toward its sixth year sorely beset by too much Watergate and by shortages of what seems to be practically everything else.

The second year of Richard Nixon's second term begins so differently from the first that the hardest fact to accept about 1973 may be that it lasted only the usual 12 months.

As 1972 ended, the proud winner of a 62 per cent election mandate was confidently planning, at long last, to translate years of campaign rhetoric into action that would lead the nation back to "independence, self-reliance, pride."

Now, the plans lie virtually forgotten, many of the men who were to carry them forward are in disgrace or worse and the campaign that produced the greatest electoral vote landslide of three decades is widely held in contempt.

Worse may lie ahead. The Vice President, two cabinet secretaries and a long list of aides who worked at the President's shoulder in the first four years are gone. Some stand in jeopardy of prison.

Under attack

The President himself is under the gravest attack—some members of his own party have urged him to resign and the House Judiciary Committee is preparing an inquiry into the allegations of "high crimes and misdemeanors" contained in a small but menacing pile of formal impeachment resolutions.

More has gone awry than Nixon's personal fortunes. The administration began the year struggling to find workable wage and price restraints and to stabilize the dollar in world markets. No sooner had those running sores been bandaged than the nation began running short of a bewildering shopping list—beef, gasoline, paper, onions, plastics, soybeans and, as winter approached, the fuels that millions of Americans depend upon to move and to warm their homes and shops.

The year did see the final withdrawal of American troops from Indochina and the return of the prisoners of war. But the war itself did not end and another conflict began in the Mideast tinderbox that was arrested with the shakiest of cease fires.

Nor could the discreet yearend visitor to the White House make small talk by asking "Aside from that, how did you like 1973?"

Beginning year

The President began the year by trying to redeem his promises to "trim down" and "shuck off" federal programs that "just threw money at problems.' He impounded federal funds previously appropriated by Congress (and approved by himself) for a long list of activities, with emphasis on social welfare programs started in the Kennedy and Johnson administrations. One such program, the Office of Economic Opportunity's "War on Poverty," he undertook to abolish.

The Democratic-controlled Congress made some threatening noises, but it was the courts that blocked the White House. They ruled in a number of cases that holding back legally appropriated funds was itself illegal, and not only told Nixon that he was obliged to continue OEO, but that his appointed undertaker for the agency, Howard Phillips, was serving illegally in the office of director.

Nixon did not get most of his prized legislative proposals through Congress—the long awaited Phase II of New Federalism, called Special Revenue Sharing, went nowhere —but he did maintain a kind of negative mastery over Capitol Hill. Congress tried to override eight of his vetoes during 1973 and failed in every case but one —the "war powers" bill that would limit the President's power to send U.S. forces into action abroad without Congressional approval.

New initiatives

For 1974, White House and departmental spokesmen are talking about new initiatives to reform public welfare and enact a broad new health insurance program. But applying Nixon's own yardstick of "negotiating from strength" to his relations with Congress, his prospects for doing business with House and Senate leaders in any domestic field cannot be rated high.

The notion that the new Vice President, Gerald Ford, will be able to work miracles for the White House on Capitol Hill remains to be tested. But it should be remembered that Lyndon Johnson was a pretty fair country operative when he was in Congress and not too much help to John Kennedy when he became Vice President.

In foreign affairs, Nixon had to postpone his long-scheduled trip to Europe in a year that was supposed to be devoted to improving American prospects on that continent, but he did act as host of a successful state visit by Soviet Party Chairman Leonid Brezhnev, who he had to stand up to a few months later when the Arab-Israeli war appeared headed for a U.S.—Russian confrontation.

Kissinger promoted

Presidential adviser Henry Kissinger became Secretary of State and kept on traveling and fixing—with more visits to China and to Middle Eastern countries to lead the way toward a cease-fire and peace conference.

Foreign economic developments were less upbeat, except for the turnabout in the balance of trade, which produced black ink for the first time in some years. But world gold prices went out of sight and the U.S. dollar took a fearful battering earlier in the year and had to be devalued for the second time in 18 months.

The 1973 record for world affairs might be regarded as a plus except for a development, perhaps more domestic than foreign in origin, that threatens a dark and chilly winter for the nation—and, by the processes which form public opinion—for the Nixon administration.

It really should not be startling news that the United States is running out of energy. Foresighted business people as well as scholars have been saying for years that the country was abusing its fuel supplies and would have to cut back soon. In the summer of 1973, it happened.

Gas runs short

Gasoline ran short in many areas of the country, inconveniencing a lot of Americans. But as the days grew shorter, authorities began talking about coming shortages of oil and electricity, and that meant discomfort. This possibility became a reality when Arab nations, objecting to U.S. arms and diplomatic support of Israel in the latest Mideast conflict, cut off oil shipments to this country. While the Arabs provide less than 10 per cent of the oil used in this country, even that loss transformed plans for voluntary cutbacks into mandatory reductions of aviation fuel and heating oil and brought talk of gasoline rationing for the first time in 30 years.

As the year ended, airlines, automobile manufacturers and a number of other energy dependent industries were laying off workers or making cutback plans, and unemployment, at its lowest peacetime level in decades, was starting to climb again. Worse, so was inflation, as the marketplace demanded more money for the decreasing supply of fuels.

His main worry

This is what President Nixon should be worried about. His Watergate problems may turn out to be his smallest concerns if Americans in large numbers are (1) unable to heat their homes and shops, (2) thrown out of work because products or services depending upon energy cannot be sold, and (3) denied the use of their automobiles, the symbol of the post-World War II prosperity that did much to get the nation into the energy mess in the first place.

Soviets look forward to year of detente, growth

MOSCOW (UPI) — Richard Nixon had his Watergate in 1973; Leonid I. Brezhnev had his dissenters. But comparisons stop there.

For Communist Party General Secretary Brezhnev and the Soviet people, 1973 has been — dissidents aside — a year of triumphs rather than of political tragedy.

Brezhnev's policy of detente with the West survived the clash of interests arising from the Middle East war. American businessmen have been falling over one another in the rush to sign deals with the Russians.

Soviet military strength has reached new peaks. Relations with the Arabs and India have been strengthened, and with the Communist would—China excepted — they have been serene.

Brezhnev has consolidated his position as No. 1 in the Kremlin hierarchy, and he has succeeded in getting his country's sluggish economy moving again.

For the average Soviet citizen, 1974 holds the promise not of fuel crisis and recession but of more food on the table and of consumer goods that have long been denied.

"The Soviets can look back on 1973 and find a lot to crow about," a western diplomat said here recently.

Whether that will be true of 1974 is a question mark.

Detente faces a roadblock in the U.S. Congress where lawmakers, disturbed by Soviet repression of dissent and restrictions on Jewish emigration, are seeking to deny the Soviet Union most-favored nation (MFN) trade status and government credits.

MFN is not vital to Soviet-American trade, but credits needed to finance huge development projects the Soviets hope to carry out over the next decade are another matter.

"The loss of credits could slow down detente," a European diplomat said. "But if you accept the premise that the motivation for detente is primarily political rather than economic, it won't stop it."

Diplomats predict that if the U.S. Congress rejects credits, as seems likely, the Soviets will turn more to western Europe and Japan for help. And the multibillion-dollar deals that Armand Hammer and other American industrialists have negotiated for Siberian gas in 1973 will be in doubt.

In the midst of considerable diplomatic activity, the Soviets are planning a World Communist Conference next year. Diplomats believe the purpose is twofold—to reassert Soviet leadership of the Communist movement and to deal in some way with the Sino-Soviet dispute.

The Soviets have run into opposition from parties that do not want to be pushed into taking sides in the Soviet controversy with China. But the Russians appear determined to hold the conference in 1974, diplomats say.

On the home front, Soviet agriculture has recovered after the worst harvest of the century in 1972 and for the first time has grown at a faster rate than industry.

This has brought assurances of a better break for the consumer next year. Consumer production was cut back this year because the Soviets had to use scarce resources to buy grain abroad.

But full bellies do not necessarily mean contented citizens, and there are still a few Russians who protest restrictions on personal freedom in their country.

Increasingly the dissidents have been put in labor camps and mental hospitals, and more may find their way there in 1974. For while the Soviet Union marches toward greater accommodation with the West, it has redoubled its efforts to make sure that this does not give rise to expectations of greater liberalization at home.

10-year project, $380 million

PANAMA CITY (UPI) — The Panama Canal was built by the United States at a cost of $380 million from 1904 through 1914. It is approximately 50 miles long, deep water to deep water, and follows a northwesterly to southeasterly direction.

Not to climb, but descend

PHOENIX (UPI) — The recruiters meant well, but psychologically it was an inopportune moment to try to sign up Thomas Schepp and Jeff Berman for a mountain climbing club.

Members of the Arizona Mountaineering Club had just rescued Schepp, 19, and Berman, 21, from Camelback Mountain, where the two had been stranded for five hours recently.

The rescuers asked them if they wanted to learn how to climb.

"No, we're going to learn how to get down," replied Schepp.

Currency ills won't go away

..By CHARLES FLINNER..

WASHINGTON (UPI) — World monetary relations in 1973 weathered a dollar devaluation, rapid worldwide inflation, widespread shortages of food and fuel and political tensions.

After two decades of dominance, the dollar became a question mark in the late 1960s and early 1970s, leading to a major shakeup which included two dollar devaluations within 18 months.

Now, measured by such standards as balance of payments, trade, productivity, inflation, growth, employment and interest rates, the dollar has made a substantial comeback.

"Marked improvement in our trading accounts has been evident throughout the year," according to Paul A. Volcker, undersecretary of Treasury for international monetary affairs.

But new uncertainties loom in 1974.

"Agricultural trade accounted for the great bulk of the recovery in our trade position this year," Volcker said. "This will not recur. As time passes, we must count more heavily on extending recent gains in the manufactured goods sector."

Volcker, testifying before Congress, foresaw "a sharply rising import bill for energy products."

"This will cut into gains in our trade balance directly, as well as place new pressures on the internal price structure," he said. "I cannot estimate with accuracy the full impact of this development, but it does plainly underscore the continuing challenge of dealing with our inflation and maintaining a strong competitive position."

The relative strength of the dollar usually is measured in terms of the currencies of Western Europe and Japan.

When the dollar was devalued for the first time in 1971, a reform of the international monetary system was launched. "What we have to construct is an international monetary and trading system in which these three regions can live together in economic peace," according to C. Jeremy Morse of the International Monetary Fund (IMF), chief architect of reform.

"In doing so," Morse said, "we have to take account of the emergence of a group of developing countries, mainly oil-producing, whose surpluses and reserves will be a major factor in the future system. And in a shrinking world we must also be more watchful than ever not to damage but rather to promote the economic development of the other countries of the Third World, some of them relatively less developed, some very poor."

The environment in which currencies are working today is changing drastically and rapidly. While the outlook for the recovery of the dollar has been good, the resources crisis has brought new clouds.

David Rockefeller, chairman of the Chase Manhattan Bank, has said that the U.S. energy shortage could cause a zero economic growth.

"In fact, industrial production, I think, is likely to decline perhaps as much as 6 per cent or more and therefore I would guess that unemployment would reach something perhaps in excess of 6 per cent by the end of next year if nothing is done about the fuel shortage," Rockefeller said.

This ominous outlook for the United States, outlined in a nationwide television panel, may be offset by developments in other countries. Japan and Europe, for example, are far less self-sufficient in energy.

Because of the fuels shortage, Commerce Secretary Frederick B. Dent warns of "competititive disadvantage for American goods."

"While we may have an advantage over some nations in that we are closer to energy self sufficiency, the problem still exists," he said.

Dent said, "there will be shortages, not only this winter, but for quite some time into the foreseeable future. In some cases these shortages will be quite unlike any we have been before in scope or duration. So what we are talking about is business' ability to remain functioning in the face of potential plant shutdowns and massive employe layoffs.

To explore 1974 prospects requires most of all a determination of how well governments adjust to the new environment of higher prices for scarce resources.

Still another threat to economic tranquility in 1974 is inflation, which former IMF Managing Director Pierre-Paul Schweitzer calls a "cancer."

"It is a cancer because while it persists, the risk remains that it will grow and spread, posing a threat that is not just economic but social and political as well," he said.

Suspect found beside victim in the morgue

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Red-faced sheriff's deputies recently found a murder suspect they had been seeking since Nov. 26 lying in the county morgue next to the man he allegedly killed.

"I've been in this game for 16 years and I've never encountered anything like this before," Sheriff's Capt. Valjean Haleye said.

Investigators discovered the "missing" man 24 hours after Enroch Martinez, 47, died of stab wounds he received in a fight at a migrant labor camp in Delray Beach Nov. 26.

Investigators intensified their search for Martinez' attacker after the migrant worker died. Several persons interviewed by deputies named 25-year-old Ramon Nieves as the attacker, but told officers "he is dead."

Investigators thought the witnesses were confused and meant Martinez was dead. They learned that Nieves had been killed in a traffic accident last Sunday. His body was lying beside Martinez' in the county morgue.

Population control helps

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — By the turn of the century the world should reach a stable population of 7 billion, but without controls, the population by the year will be 35 billion, according to former Delaware Gov. Russell W. Peterson.

Peterson, an executive of the Rockefeller Foundation for the Third Century, says a zero population growth at the 7 billion level is required to support the current quaity of life on earth.

Small car demand hard to meet

U.S. auto industry heading for dip in sales and profits

By EDWARD S. LECHTZIN
UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — After three straight years of record sales and high profits, the U.S. auto industry is headed for a downturn in 1974 that could be accelerated by gasoline shortages and rationing.

More Americans want small cars and the industry is hard pressed to meet the demand.

Government action in rationing gasoline, taxing gas guzzlers or legislating fuel economy improvements could push more motorists into cars they wouldn't have even looked at a few years ago.

One thing is certain. The old debate between the desire for personal transportation and the greater need for public mass transportation has been renewed and some Americans are going to end up by surrendering some of their personal mobility.

Some predictions

A few things can be safely predicted about cars and car buyers in 1974.

Sales will drop from this year's record 11.8 million U. S. and foreign-built cars. Top auto executives say the drop will be down to about 11.1 million, but this could drop even lower if Americans decide the automobile is one discretionary item they can put off.

While sales drop, prices are on the way up, the biggest increases going on the high-demand small cars. The automakers were granted average increases ranging from $55 to $74 when they introduced the 1974 models, but came back for second-round increases in early November averaging between $114 and $188.

And the car buyer will continue to get cars equipped with safety and emission control devices he really doesn't want.

On the 1974 models it was the ignition interlock that makes you belt up before driving. For 1975 models, the big new item will be the catalytic converter, a chemical smog-control device that could add another $150 to the price of a new car while leaning up exhaust gases and, say some auto men, improve fuel economy.

The automakers still hope they can get the 1975 rules changed or delayed by the Congress so the muffler-like devices won't be needed. But it appears all cars in California and as many as 50 per cent elsewhere will be equipped with catalytic converters.

No change for him

Joe Gordon, a middle-aged millwright in a Detroit-area automotive supply company, wants no part of any of the new devices.

"I'll tell you straight. I've got a 1969 Dodge Dart that runs real good. It's got more than 70,000 miles and I'm going to keep it until it stops running," he said.

"I still get decent mileage, it starts most of the time and I don't have to worry about belts, buzzers or gadgets that kill all the power," he added. probably ase it."

Gasoline is the wild card for 1974. If the fuel crisis worsens and rationing is imposed for the first time since World War II, car sales could plummet well below the predicted 11.1 million.

The first two months of the 1974-model year showed the future course as sales slipped considerably from the record 1972 levels. Sales in November were off 13 per cent, with big cars taking the beating and automakers unable to meet demand for small cars.

200 laid off

The first result was the announced layoffs of 200,000 auto workers, more than one-fourth of the industry's labor force. Most of the idled workers were scheduled off less than one week right before Christmas as automakers sought to adjust their huge inventories to slow-moving sales.

Roy D. Chapin, Jr., chairman of American Motors which is bucking the trend because of its heavy reliance on small cars, said he did not know how long this "frenzied level" would contimue.

"I think we're in a period of semi-hysteria now on the part of many people which is understandable," said Chapin. "I think, obviously, that the economy is not going to grind to a halt."

Chrysler Chairman Lynn Townsend, however, says sales shouldn't really be affected by the energy situation. He contends people will buy as many cars, but they just won't use them as often.

Part of the reason for the switch to the small imports in the late 1960's was the concern over steadily declining mileage of the big U.S. cars.

Caught flatfooted

Compact and subcompact cars now account for about 40 per cent of all sales and should climb to one of every two sales in the next two years. Detroit's automakers were caught flatfooted and are trying to recoup.

"The market never reacts with logic," lamented Bennett E. Bidwell, Ford vice president and Ford Division general manager, recently. "Small has suddenly become so much 'in' that logic doesn't prevail."

Ford, already enjoying high sales for its Pinto and Maverick, pushed its new, smaller Mustang II up for introduction this fall, advertising it as: "The right car at the right time."

Now Ford and General Motors are hurriedly switching over assembly plants to smallcar production, American Motors is pushing out Gremlins and Hornets as fast as possible while putting the final touches on a new and smaller urban car and Chrysler is toying with the idea of introducing its own sub-compact.

"The whole country, the whole world for that matter, has swung over to a worldwide shortage of basic materials," says Townsend. "This is affecting many of our vendors' ability to furnish parts to us and is affecting our ability to produce the schedule the market would call for.

"The penetration of the various companies and the volume of vehicles that are sold may very well be determined to a much greater extent by the companies' ability to produce cars than they are by the depth of the market to receive cars," Townsend explained.

Cost is not the main reason for the big switch to the small car since most are going out of dealers' showrooms optioned up to a price tag well over $3,000. Currency changes have forced up the prices of foreign-built compacts to as much as $3,000 for Volkswagen Beetle.

Mileage and operating costs may be the determining factors. Studies by the Environmental Protection Agency during certification of the 1974 models noted that fuel economy slipped three-tenths of a mile per gallon from 1973 models to 15.1 m.p.g.

A survey shows it costs 13.6 cents a mile to operate a standard car, 10.8 cents to run a compact and 9.4 cents for a sub-compact. That's increasing daily as gasoline prices go up along with service costs.

While future government legislation may push more Americans into small cars, the greatest incentive to put out small cars will be in the marketplace.

"We've got customers lined up sometimes waiting to buy the Gremlins and Hornets right off the lot," remarked one Detroit American Motors dealer. "They don't want to wait five or six weeks and maybe face another price hike. They'll take what we have."

Chile making slow economic comeback

By CHARLES E. PADILLA

SANTIAGO (UPI) — Austerity and belt-tightening, months of emergency security measures against possible antigovernment terrorist attacks and a slow, painful recovery from economic chaos.

That is the outlook for Chile in 1974 under the four-man military junta that toppled Marxist President Salvador Allende last Sept. 11, ending four decades of democratic rule.

As 1973 drew to a close, the junta indicated its immediate task was to disarm the population and wipe out any vestiges of guerrilla warfare.

"We are the protagonists of an internal war," said Gen. Oscar Bonilla, the Interior (police) Minister. "The armed forces are carrying out operations to finish off terrorism, uncover hidden weapons and capture dangerous elements."

Gen. Agusto Pinochet, junta leader and commander-in-chief of the army, said in mid-November the junta calculated it would take six months to give Chile the "degree of social peace' necessary to start economic recovery.

In the meantime, a declared state of siege includes a nightly curfew that prohibits Santiago's three million people from venturing out between 11 p.m. and 6 a.m.

Two months after the coup, sporadic shooting was still heard at night in various parts of the capital.

Coupled with the security measures were drastic moves to solve the economic crisis that gave Chile an inflation rate of 449.2 per cent in the first 10 months of 1973. That figure included a jump of 87.6 per cent in October, the junta's first full month in power, according to official statistics.

The new government authorized price increases of up to 500 per cent for food and other basic items. It said the move was necessary to promote agricultural and industrial production stifled by artifically low prices maintained by the Allende government for political reasons.

Low-income groups, source of Allende's strongest support, were hardest hit by the price increases. The junta acted to soften the blow with the emergency payment of two extra months' salary for workers during the final three months of 1973. The minimum monthly income was also raised, from 4,000 escudos ($14) to 12,000 escudos ($42).

"I am now working only to feed my family," said a waitress in a nearly-deserted downtown Santiago restaurant. "I have no hopes of buying any clothes or anything for the house. Only food for my family."

On the international money markets, Chile's image appeared to be on the upswing, despite the $800 million foreign debt increase during Allende's three years in office, to a total of $3.45 billion.

Reports published in New York said private American banks would loan the Chilean Central Bank more than $100 million to build up its foreign commerce. The Manufacturer's Hanover Bank of New York granted credits of $24 million to the Bank of Chile, and an International Monetary Fund mission was reported to have recommended an emergency loan of $80 million.

Return of U.S. companies that left Chile during the Allende years was reported to be under consideration.

Chino Tourney opens

By KEVIN CLOE
P-B Staff Writer

CHINO — The San Dimas Tournament of Champions is over, but what could be termed another Tournament of Champions will begin Wednesday morning at Chino High.

Although the tournament is not called the Tourney of Champions, there are enough proven champions in the Chino classic to make it one of the best attractions this week in the Southland.

In fact, it may even provide some better competition than the 32-team Covina Tournament which also starts this week.

The official title is the 33rd Annual Chino High Lettermen's Club Invitational Basketball Tournament, and it boasts five tournement champions of this year and one divisional CIF runnerup from last year.

"This year's tournament is probably the strongest it's been in a long time," stated Chino first-year head coach Bob Elder. "Ganesha should be the tournament favorite."

The Giants from Ganesha captured the Upland-Montclair Tournament title this year and won the consolation championship in the rugged San Dimas Tournament of Champions. But they aren't the only ones who will enter the tourney with outstanding credentials.

Other tournament kings of this year include Miraleste, Cerritos, Claremont and host Chino.

Last year's CIF 2-A runnerup and the defending tourney champions, La Canada, will also be making a return appearance.

Last year with CIF 2-A Co-Players of the Year Bob Hatch and Rick Ertel, La Canada knocked off Ganesha in the tournament finals, 83-74, to win the championship.

But this year Hatch and Ertel are gone, while Ganesha is bringing back three returning starters.

Ganesha comes into the tournament against Cerritos (2 p.m.) with a 6-2 record, and should be led in scoring by center Cleve Porter (22.9), forward Broderick Hunter (17.1) and guard Earl Wilson (12.1)

Other Giant starters include forward Gary George and guard Mike Hall.

Chino will enter the tournament with an unblemished 5-0 record for the year, and Claremont will begin tourney play with a 6-1 slate.

The Cowboys, paced by forward Tim Smith with a 18-point average, won the Edgewood Tournament this year.

Although the tourney hosts will be without star Mike Coppess, who broke his ankle in the semifinal game of the Edgewood Tourney, they should be considered a heavy favorite to reach the finals of their own classic.

"We really didn't feel this was going to be our year," stated Cowboy coach Elder. "We felt we were still one year away."

Other starters for Chino, which opens against Santa Ana Wednesday night at 7:30 p.m. against Santa Ana, will probably be Rob Hairston at forward, Dirk Story (6-foot-7) at center, and Keith Mundee and Manny Delgado at the guard spots.

Claremont, this year's Azusa Tournament champions, has only lost to Ganesha this year. And despite that loss the Wolfpack went on to claim the fourth-place trophy in the Upland-Montclair Tournament.

The 'Pack is led by transfer center Bruce Abraham, who is averaging 16.6 points per game. Abraham is a former student at Pomona High, but moved to Washington before returning to the valley — transfering to Claremont.

Abraham will be complemented by the play of guards Todd Ervin (12.3) and Rip Sears (9.7) and forwards Reggie Goldsmith (9.1) and Joe Hillstock (8.9)

The Wolfpack will see its first action in this year's classic against Escondido at 3:30 p.m.

Altogether there are five San Antonio League teams, and two Hacienda League teams competing in the tourney.

Bonita and Upland will raise the curtain at 9:30 Wednesday morning, followed by the Pacifica-Temple City (11 a.m.) and Duarte-Miraleste (12:30 p.m.) games in the morning.

The Ganesha and Claremont games will be followed up by the Montclair-La Canada contest (6 p.m.), the Chino-Santa Ana game, and the University-Ontario battle at 9 p.m.

Miraleste won the Temple City Tournament this year, while Cerritos copped its own tourney title.

The Chino Tournament dates back to 1938 when it was cosponsored by the Chino 20-30 Club and Chino High. The Chino Lettermen's Club took over full sponsorship in 1964 when the 20-30 Club disbanded.

The Chino Classic rates as one of the oldest and finest basketball attractions in all of Southern California — and this year is no exception.

HEISMAN FOR CHRISTMAS

The best present under the tree this year for 11-year-old Joseph Cappelletti is the Heisman Trophy won by big brother John, the Penn State back. Joseph is the 1973 Leukemia Poster Boy.

Merry Christmas

As Superfan puts it, the world of sports is the toy department in human affairs.

Christmas is the one day each year the toy department — except for the Lakers — takes a short rest. It may be a sign of things to come with the energy crisis.

Let's hope Santa Claus was good to our friends in the sports world.

Here are some good gifts for the sports celebrities:

Carroll Rosenbloom, Rams: Football season to last three more weeks.

City of San Diego: A true major league baseball team.

Washington politicians: A baseball team in D.C. without the help of federal tax money.

Willie Davis: A guide on speaking French in Montreal.

Cal Poly basketball coach Don Hogan: The title as the world's best-dressed cage mentor.

Pomona-Pitzer football coach Walt Ambord: More players for his thin squad.

La Verne College's Roland Ortmayer: Return to campus for home football and basketball games.

P-B city editor Jim Fulton: More time to play tennis and more Indiana victories.

UCLA's John Wooden: Must be something the man doesn't have but it's hard to tell looking at his awesome teams.

Pepper Rodgers: Happiness in Georgia.

Ohio State's Woody Hayes: A warm and pleasant vacation in Southern California.

Photographers: A warm and friendly greeting from Woody Hayes.

Dick Enberg: Oh my! A few more Angel victories.

Ontario Motor Speedway: Enough gallons of gas.

Cal Poly's Don Warhurst: A football coach within two weeks.

Poly's new football coach: Good luck.

Claremont-Mudd's Bill Arce: A new world atlas.

USC's Bobby Boyd: The opportunity to move his tem at least 200 miles from Westwood.

USC's John McKay: A crown of roses.

Bear Bryant and Ara Parseghian: A big night in the Sugar Bowl.

Howard Cosell: A big night describing the Sugar Bowl.

California Collegiate Athleic Asstociation: More members.

Cal Poly assistant Allen Van Winkle: Same success he enjoyed at SW Louisiana — on the basketball court, not the legal courts.

Pomona recreation leader Phil LaPierre: An assistant to help direct the ever-growing program in the city.

Merry Christmas from the P-B sports Department to our readers.

Rams refund fans' checks

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Rams spent between $6,000 and $7,000 to do the clerical work for a football game that will never be played.

The cost involved sending out 50,000 tickets to their season ticket holders for a Dec. 30 game which the Rams would have hosted if they had defeated Dallas Sunday.

The National Football League will reimburse the club for most of the expense, a Ram spokesman said, and in any case the money spent was nothing compared to the blow to the team's morale and pride with the loss to the Cowboys.

Public sale of tickets for the canceled Dec. 30 game would have started Monday.

The 45,000 tickets purchased in response to the 50,000 mailing are redeemable at any branch of the Union Bank on or before Jan. 31. Total amount involved is approximately $500,000 since the tickets were priced at $12.00 each.

The bank charges no fee for the redemption service since it gets use of the money put up by the Rams for a matter of days or weeks and the interest on such an amount is considerable.

The breakdown of reimbursable costs including two mailings shows postage totaling about $4,000. Printing costs were about $1,600 and costs of envelopes and preparing letters ran about $1,000, making a grand total of $6,600.

Bad news for UCLA foes

By DON BRADLEY
P-B Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES — There were more discouraging words Monday for upcoming foes of UCLA.

Coach John Wooden told writers at the weekly basketball luncheon that, in effect, the Bruins are just as good right now as he wants them to be.

"I said two or three weeks ago (following the Maryland game) that I thought our team was behind what I had expected them to be at that time," he said.

"Now I think we're up to where I thought we would be at this time. I made some changes," he continued "We're a one guard front and pay more attention to the point men."

"We were too concerned about getting the ball in to close and looking for individual shots. We also made a couple of changes in our offense that is opening it up better."

"David Meyers is now playing as though Bill Walton is not in there. I think before," he explained, "we were playing with the idea of letting Bill do it. We're not going to do that anymore," he concluded emphatically.

Wooden also revealed that he has changed his phsychology somewhat regarding his use of players.

"I have quit babying some players along," he told writers. "I've been using 11 or 12 players and worrying about each getting enough playing time. I'm now going with seven or eight and the ones that are playing are practicing together."

UCLA will be able to suit up only 12 players once conference play begins. Wooden has given 16 players varsity experienec to date.

"I'm not ready to say that my mind is made up on who the 12 will be," he remarked. "I don't want to discourage anyone at this date from feeling that they still have a chance to make the team. Obviously some players will be better off playing regularly with the junior varsity than playing infrequently with the varsity."

The "Wizard of Westwood" revealed that he has been voting for his Bruins as number one in the weekly UPI coaches' poll. When asked, he wouldn't put the other nine in the order he voted them, but did list them.

They were: USC, Long Beach St., Notre Dame, Indiana. Marquette North Carolina, North Carolina St., Maryland, and a newcomer.

"I put Vanderbilt in the top 10 this week," he said. They're 7-0 and I felt they deserved recognition."

Wooden revealed that he has enjoyed the progress made by Meyers and rated him as one of four players whose progress has pleased him the mst.

"I've had four players who have pleased me immensely," he said "four players who weren't widely recruited by major colleges. David is one who has progressed to the point where he plays extremely well. He starts slowly each year, but I think I like that because he is going to be good when you most want him to be good."

The other three players are Gail Goodrich and Keith Erickson, who have made the grade in professional basketball, and Jack Hirsch, a forward on the same club which gave Wooden his first NCAA championship.

Although he wasn't asked about it, the UCLA coach revealed what he considers the single most important ingredient or, rather the combination of two ingredients and what he emphasizes.

"When I recruit," he told writers, "the thing I look for more than anything else is quickness. I'm going for quickness with as much size as possible where I think a lot of coaches go for size with as much quickness as possible."

"The second thing I look for," he concluded, "is one who appears to be unselfish in his play."

Wooden and Lute Olson of Long Beach St. were the only coaches present at the luncheon.

Olson repeated a statement he had made earlier. "I think Clifton Pondexter is the best freshman ever enrolled at Long Beach St.," he said, "and I saw Eddie Ratleff play as a freshman."

"He (Pondexter) has got to be super," Olson continued. He jumps to the moon, is shooting 56 per cent from the floor; he's our leading scorer and rebounder and his defense is improving."

"He doesn't go to the offensive boards at all like he should," Olson admitted and he doesn't move well without the ball which is his biggest weakness. But he's very coachable. At this stage he's ahead of Ratleff. But whether he will work hard enough to become as great as Ratleff was as a senior remains to be seen."

Player of the week honors went to Gus Williams of USC in the University Division and Bobby Walters of UC Riverside in the college division.

Energy crisis bothers college grid schedules

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — University of Oregon athletic director Norv Ritchey said Monday the energy crisis could force a realignment of college athletics which would largely eliminate intersectional contests.

His counterpart at Oregon State, Jim Barratt, said he hopes it isn't so.

Both already face some problems caused by a shortage of jet fuel.

Wake Forest has asked Oregon State for a release from its scheduled football game at Corvallis next Sept. 28 because it cannot get a jet charter.

Ritchey said Oregon had been unable to secure commitments from airlines for its football charters next fall.

Barratt, reached by telephone at Corvallis, said he is seeking a replacement opponent for the Sept. 28 date at Corvallis and "we hope to release Wake Forest by Feb. 1." He said he will seek another opponent— possibly San Diego State, Fresno State or Pacific—at the NCAA meeting in San Francisco next month.

"We'd be stupid to let them (Wake Forest) off the hook unless we get a replacement," he said. "We are making a good faith effort to find a replacement to accommodate them."

Ritchey, in a telephone interview from Eugene, said, "I assume that every effort will be made to continue a national caliber program but if the energy crisis affects transportation then we are certainly going to see a readjustment and realignment."

He cited the recent Pacific-8 action in returning to northern division and southern division schedules in baseball, replacing a conference-wide round-robin, as the sort of thing that could become widespread.

He added, "We have been unable to secure commitments for football charters next fall. We are finding it increasingly difficult to find blocks of space and preferred travel times on airlines."

Ritchey said a switch to commercial airline travel "certainly forces us to take a look at travel schedules and the amount of class time missed."

He said a change would not come immediately but is "entirely dependent on what happens in the next few years" in regard to fuel supplies.

Barratt said he would be against any realignment of schedules now based on the current energy crisis. "I've worked too hard to build schedules through 1986 to want to do the whole thing again," he said.

Merritt says no to Wichita

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Tennessee State University football coach John Merritt Monday declined an offer to coach Wichita State University.

Had he accepted he would have been the first black coach of a major college team.

"I have decided to remain at Tennessee State basically because of my loyalty to my coaches, to the boys we have recruited recently who expected us to be here, and to the university which I feel at this time particularly needs me more than Wichita," the cigar-puffing Merritt told a news conference.

Another factor which entered into his decision, Merritt said, was the fact that three of his assistant coaches did not want to follow him to the Kansas school. He did not identify the three.

Rams pick Cowboys rest of way

DALLAS (UPI) — If anybody is getting up a pot on the Super Bowl, count Fred Dryer and Harold Jackson in on the side of the Dallas Cowboys.

The Cowboys, who have done whatever was necessary the past four weeks to survive in the race for pro football's championship, have made believers out of at least a couple of the Los Angeles Rams.

"Dallas seems more explosive than any team we've played," said Jackson, the flashy Ram receiver who was hounded and harrassed to the point of frustration against the Cowboys Sunday in Dallas' 27-16 victory that set up the NFC title match with Minnesota.

"I think they've got the team that can do it. You can't afford a single mistake against them. They are great."

Dryer is the Ram defensive end who, by happenstance, took Cowboy running back Calvin Hill out of the Viking game. He was quick to announce his favorite.

"I pick them for the Super Bowl," said Dryer. "They're very explosive and you can never afford to make a mistake on them."

Los Angeles made two costly mistakes early against Dallas, which put the Rams 14 points in the hole. And from there it was up to the defense until a slightly woozy Roger Staubach joined up with rookie Drew Pearson on their 83-yard touchdown pass that wrapped up the victory.

The defensive effort put forth by the Cowboys was typical of recent weeks. The Rams were the No. 1 offensive team in the NFC during the regular season, but the twin running threat of Jim Bertelsen and Lawrence McCutcheon was held to a combined 85 yards and quarterback John Hadl could connect on only seven of 23 passes.

"The defensive team was tremendous," said Cowboy Coach Tom Landry. "They never played harder than they played against Los Angeles. I don't think we have ever been in a tougher fight in a game. It was a tremendous battle physically."

Los Angeles coach Chuck Knox could sympathize with McCutcheon, whose fumble set up Dallas' second touchdown early in the game.

"He was hit about as hard as anyone I have seen hit all year," said Knox.

But the euphoria in the Dallas camp was tempered by the loss of Hill, who gained 1,142 yards during the regular season and who had picked up 97 yards against Los Angeles before dislocating his elbow.

Hill himself said doctors always tended to "overreact" on injuries and that he planned to be ready. But Cowboy team physician Dr. Marvin Knight said Hill was, without question, out for the Viking contest.

"I was reaching for the ball (Hill had fumbled inside his own 20) and the guy (Dryer) just fell on my arm," said Hill. "I thought I had blown the whole game."

Following Hill's fumble the Rams stormed into the end zone in two plays to reduce Dallas' lead to one point.

Moments late Staubach hit Pearson and Hill, with his left arm trussed up in a makeshift sling, was one of the first to run to the end zone to congratulate the rookie hero.

"That pass made me feel better," Hill said.

'Anita season opens with 'Cap

ARCADIA, Calif. (UPI) — Featuring 51 stakes events and more than $8 million in purses, Santa Anita launches its 37th meeting Thursday with the $30,000-added Palos Verdes Handicap as the opening day feature.

The Palos Verdes is expected to attract such sprint stars as Ancient Title, Briartic, King of Cricket and Zulu Tom.

Laffit Pincay Jr., who directed his mounts to a record-breaking $4 million in earnings this year, heads the list of jockeys converging here for the 75-day season that runs through April 8.

The list includes Bill Shoemaker, Steve Valdez, Don Pierce, Alvaro Pineda, Fernando Toro, Jerry Lambert, Jacinto Vasquez, Eddie Belmonte, Angel Santiago and Braulio Baeza.

OLA hosts cage tourney at Damien

The Our Lady of Assumption Athletic Association will sponsor their 13th Annual Holiday Basketball Tourney, with action beginning Wednesday and running through Sunday.

18 local Catholic elementary schools will participate in the tourney, with all games slated to be played at Damien High in La Verne.

Eight games will be played on Wednesday and Thursday, with the semi-finals of the tourney to be held on Saturday and the finals played on Sunday. Games will begin at 12 noon and run to 7 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday, Saturday's action will be held between 1 p.m. and 4 p.m., while Sunday's games will begin at 3:15 p.m. and run to 7 p.m.

According to Herb Naish, Athletic Association President, admission to the tourney will be $1 for adults and 50 cents for children for each day of action. A cheerleader competition between the participating schools is also slated.

Recreation

The two major youth sports activities for the holiday season take place Thursday. The Pomona Park and Recreation Departments' Second Annual Cross Country Meet is set for the Pomona High School course at 1 p.m.

Earlier in the day, the Cal Poly Optimist Club will conduct a basketball skills contest for eight to 13 year old boys. The event begins at 9 a.m. and will have able assistance from the school's varsity basketball team.

The cross country meet is open to any boy or girl born in 1959 or later. There are seven divisions for each group based on the year you were born. The distances run range from one-half mile for the youngest up to two miles for the oldest.

Pre-registration is not needed for the would be harriers. Participants should show up at 1 p.m. and await the call of their age group.

The top five in each event will advance to the San Gabriel Valley Municipal Athletic Association meet on Jan. 5 in Glendora. Approximately 70 Pomona youths will advance to this meet.

If you are going to the cross country meet and are concerned about the time of your event, remember this. The youngest divisions are run first at 1 p.m. The oldest boys group, born in 1959, goes off at 2:50 p.m. It is better to be early than late.

Pre-registration for the skills contest has been conducted on the local recreation areas for the past week. However, because of the holiday period, final sign-ups will be taken at the Cal Poly gym at 8:30 a.m.

Because only 200 applicants can be accepted for this event, it would be far safer to register tomorrow at one of the local recreation areas. They are open from 12 noon to 4 p.m.

Fall sports winners

Pomona's Northside Teen captured the first Adult Passing League title with an impressive 7-0 mark. They edged out a fine Roadrunner squad, 6-1.

Two had met in the opening league game with the Post prevailing 8-7. From that time on they played even, but it wasn't enough for losing Coach Herb Businger and his team.

Bob Smith again handled the winners. The year 1973 was a very profitable one for Bob and the Teen Post. Early in the year they captured a basketball title with a 15-0 mark. Later it was the top slo pitch softball league.

The young Mr. Smith has done an excellent job with the Teen Post operations. Prior to Bob taking over, many teams were reluctant to play them. When they won, they were poor winners.

When they lost, they were even poorer losers. In general, the sportsmanship left much to be desired. Smith has changed all that. Now opponents look forward to playing the Teen Post even though they usually come out second best.

Fall volleball leagues have concluded. There was one big winner, but two others are equally happy with their titles.

Teams coached by Lynn Emis won the six-man title and the Division One coed crown. General Dynamics, under the leadership of Harvey Meltzer, captured the Division Two coed race.

The six-man titlist, the Spikers, went on even farther. They competed in the SCMAF play-offs, a first-time event for volleyball.

The opening level was the San Gabriel Valley Municipal Athletic Association tournament held here in Pomona. They finished second to Burbank which was a disappointment. The top two teams, however, advanced on.

The finals held two weeks ago in Lomita was a different story. The Spikers swept aside their opposition to become the first SCMAF Volleyball champion.

The team members included Emis, Gil Bernabe, Luis Montes, Mike Phillips, Bill Adamson, Doyen Klein, Steve Wilbur, and Don Radford. Congratulations to a great team.

On this most beautiful day of all days, I wish everyone the Merriest Christmas that will continue on to be a very Happy New Year.

Pole vault clinic at MSAC

WALNUT — A four-day pole vaulting clinic, conducted by Pacer America of Santa Fe Springs, will be in progress at Mt. San Antonio College Wednesday through Saturday.

Among the instructors for the clinic will be former Olympic champion Bob Seagren, MSAC track coach Don Ruh and Polish National track coach Roman Korban.

Cost of the four-day camp is $50 for athletes of high school age and older. Further information may be obtained by telephoning Don Ruh, 595-7090.

Hard to compete in L.A.

Loyola needs 'help'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — You should have the problems Dick Baker has.

Baker, 39, is athletic director at Loyola of Los Angeles and he must compete against University of Southern California and UCLA for the sports dollar and high school athletes.

Needless to say, Loyola comes out third best.

"Athletic programs are expensive," Baker stated, "and if you don't have the gate—I mean draw people to see you play—you're in trouble. I think that's the problem with most small schools. It's dollars."

True. And most schools aren't located in the same city with USC and UCLA, either.

"I remember we wrote a letter to Bill Walton when he was still in high school," Baker recalled. "When we got no response, we figured we didn't have a prayer.

"But it's not just the UCLAs and the SCs. Everybody in the world comes in here and recruits. We pretty much get the leftovers."

In his sixth year as Loyola's AD, Baker stepped down as the school's basketball coach this year after compiling a 55-73 record in five seasons. Loyola is a member of the West Coast Athletic Conference, a major basketball conference.

The Lions' athletic budget is $210,000. That includes scholarships for 10 sports, expenses and the salaries of all of the school's coaches.

"That's not very much," admitted Baker, "but that's a big chunk of money for this school.

"Sure we lose money. In the best of years, the most we can recover from TV and road guarantees and other things is $50,000 of the $210,000."

Baker is adamant about staying in the WCAC, though. Despite the fact that he doesn't think Loyola has much of a chance at winning the basketball title now that Jerry Tarkanian has moved from Cal State Long Beach to Nevada-Las Vegas.

"Every now and then people raise the question that maybe it would be better for us to compete against the Whittiers, Occidentals and Redlands," said Baker.

"But I'd like to see us stay where we are even though I think it's going to be extremely difficult to win the conference in basketball. I think before Tarkanian it obviously was possible.

"But Jerry ... he just damn well gets the job done."

Baker believes in the future of the small, private university in America in athletics. However, he says the problems that must be overcome are astronomical.

"The small schools are generally having problems apart from their sports programs," he noted. "Athletics are somewhere down at the end of the line when it comes to things.

"If schools are not breaking even or close to it, it becomes difficult. And then your budget goes down some and your product becomes somewhat less and consequently your gate becomes even less."

Baker is a 1956 graduate of Loyola and he's staying at the school at a personal sacrifice. He left as assistant city manager of Redondo Beach, Calif., at an $8,000 pay cut to return to his alma mater.

"I really like the school and I enjoy my life working with the kids," he explained. "Plus it's a little bit of a dream to get a new facility built on campus."

The Lions play in an antiquated 1,800-seat campus gym now.

Baker envisions a 5,000-seat multi-purpose facility within the next five years at a cost of $3 million.

"The school has gotten to the point where it says it needs it," the athletic director said. "We could afford to put it up now but it's a matter of priorities. It will be built by donations."

Poly Optimist Club offers cage contest

POMONA — Final registration for the Cal Poly Optimist Club's Tri-Star Basketball Contest will be held Wednesday. The contest is set for Thursday, in the Univeristy's gym at 9 a.m.

Boys between the ages of eight to 13 years of age are eligible. They may register at any of the six local junior high school recreation programs during the hours of 12 noon and 4 .m.

The programs, sponsored by the Pomona Park and Recreation Departments, are conducting practice for the event at 1 p.m. Wednesday. The areas open are Lorbeer, Palomares, Emerson, Fremont, Simons, and Marshall Junior Highs. Full staffs are on duty.

The events will cover passing, dribbling and shooting skills. The top three in each division will be featured at the Purdue-Cal Poly basketball game Saturday. All participants will be given free passes to the game.

Boys and girls interested in registering for the Recreation Department's basketball program may do so at the same locations. Teams are being formed that will play on Friday evenings and Saturdays after the first of the year.

For further information call the Park and Recreation office at 620-2321.

O.J. enters Superstars competition

ROTONDA, Fla. (UPI) — Football star O.J. Simpson and baseball's two Most Valuable Players, Pete Rose and Reggie Jackson, will compete against 21 other sports greats in a playoff competition here on Feb. 25th and 26th to determine the finalists for the 1974 "Superstars" competition.

The Superstar Classic, held for the first time this year and won by pole vaulter Bob Seagren, carries a total prize package of $122,000. Seagren has already qualified for a second shot at the title.

The Superstar competition pits the athletes against each other in seven of ten events, excluding his own professional specialty. This year the events are: baseball hitting, tennis, nine-hole golf, swimming, bowling, weight lifting, 100-yard dash, half-mile run, one-mile bicycle race, and a challenging obstacle course race.

The 1974 competition has been expanded to include four semi-final contests. The first two were held in August of this year and the other two are scheduled for Jan. 28th and 29th. Already qualified for the finals are Seagren, basketball greats John Havlicek and Jim McMillian, Olympic gold medal speed skater Ard Schenk, Montreal Canadien hockey star Yvan Cournoyer and European skiing ace Karl Schranz.

Joining Simpson, Rose, and Jackson in the January semis are Jean Claude Killy, who placed second in the 1973 Superstars, auto racer Peter Revson, who placed fourth, auto racer Bobby Allison, driver Craig Breedlove, boxer Bob Foster, Olympic wrestler Dan Gable, rodeo specialist Larry Mahan, Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles, soccer player Kyle Rote Jr., and Olympic decathlon champion Bill Toomey.

Damien entertains top soccer teams

By TOM FAHEY
P-B Correspondent

LA VERNE — Soccer, the fastest growing sport in America, will have another opportunity to win over some new fans during the holidays.

Damien High School will host its first Invitational High School Soccer Tournament that will feature 16 teams.

The games will be played at Damien Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

Some of the top teams that will be entered in the tourney are South Torrance, San Gabriel, and Salesian, all rated in the top ten in CIF.

The local teams that will be featured are Chino, Ganesha, Montlciar, Pomona and host Damien.

Coach Al Mistri of the Damien Spartans organized the tournament for a dual purpose, "I wanted the tourney so that the teams could play some good games and also in the hopes of generating some interest in the game".

Although South Torrance is the favorite, Mistri feels that the outcome might prove to be a little different.

"With the great rise of AYSO (American Youth Soccer Organization), a lot of teams are now stocked with some fine talent, and there may be a few surprises before this tournament is over," says Mistri.

Mistri noted the fact that earlier this year, Pomona defeated San Gabriel by a score of 1-0.

The tournament is double-elimination with the games starting Thursday at 9 a.m.

The finals will take place Saturday night.

The Damien Tournament will be the last warmup before the San Antonio League gets underway in the beginning of January.

With five of the S.A.L. teams participating, there promises to be a preview of what can be expected to come.

Damien has started out fast this year. In the Alemany Tournament held last week, the Spartans came away with top honors by defeating Montebello in the finals, 1-0.

Opening trade in tennis loop

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The first trade in the World Team Tennis League (WTTL) was made Sunday when the Pittsburgh Triangles gave up cash and a player to be announced later to the Boston Lobs for Peggy Michael.

Miss Michael, the Lobs' 12th draft round choice, was an NCAA finalist when she was at Arizona State University. She will be a doubles partner of Yvonne Goolagong of Australia who signed with the Triangles two months ago.

SUNDAY RACING??? — The energy crisis notwithstanding, the jury appears to be divided on a verdict for racing's newest "toy."

At Santa Anita, officials are holding their collective breaths, hoping the energy crisis doesn't force them to return to the old Tuesday through Saturday format.

At Golden Gate, officials say Sunday racing isn't worth it. Too much goes out in premium pay, too little returns at the gate and through the mutuel windows.

At Los Alamitos they found out last weekend that Sunday racing isn't a cureall. The Sabbath count of 8,409 was far below the nearly 10,000 that witnessed Saturday's afternoon card.

At Bay Meadows, results continue to improve as a season's high of 15,076 saw Out of the East win the Children's Hospital 'Cap.

At Suffolk downs, the North American Riding Championship drew nearly 12,000, despite a driving rainstorm.

On and on it goes. But as the story lengthens, it becomes different strokes for different folks.

CALIFORNIA BOUND? —Jockey Sandy Hawley may be California bound in 1974.

The winningest single season jockey in history has revealed that he would like to try Hollywood Park next spring. He might even be on hand for a part of the Santa Anita meet. But before they finalize plans, Hawley and agent Colin Wick have one more goal to reach.

"We made up our game plan last Jan. 1," said Wick. "We wanted to break Bill Shoemaker's single season mark of 485 and we wanted to be the first to ride 500 winners in a year.

"We've got one record and now we're bearing down on the other."

Hawley, who picked up $10,000 in winning Suffolk's riding championship last weekend, should hit number 500 before the week is up.

"It's been an unbelievable year for me," said the affable Canadian after he collected his Suffolk honors. "This is a very exciting win here, particularly after breaking Shoemaker's record."

★ ★ ★

SWITCH OF HATS — Wally Wolf, the former Angel hurler who has been serving on the public relations staff at both Hollywood Park and Western Harness has been signed on as a full time member of the sulky association's team.

Wolf reportedly turned down another offer which would have meant leaving his Orange County home. Wally boards several horses on his Yorba Linda spread, including his own Cadiz, the former Hollywood Gold Cup and Californian winner from New Zealand.

★ ★ ★

11 IN A ROW — Southwesterners are humming about a speedster named Sturdy Indian who last week raced to his 11th straight victory in the Thoroughbred Futurity Trial at Sunland Park.

Sturdy Indian is by the former California speed king, Hempen, who also is the sire of Annihilate 'Em, winner of the $100,000 Travers at Saratoga and one of the leading three-year-olds of the year.

★ ★ ★

NEW ROOTERS — Sandy Hawley gives credit to members of "Hawley's Horses" for some of his riding success this year.

The lads selected the name for their pee-wee league hockey team, for which Sandy foots the bill. Seldom does Hawley miss a game and after each contest he pops for ice cream and other goodies. The Horses are battling for their league lead.

"I believe my rooting for the boys has done a lot for them and I know their rooting for me has been a big help," Hawley opined.

Sandy wanted to paly football when he entered hign school but ths coach sent him home on the second day of practice. "Too small," said the mentor.

"I switched to wrestling and placed second in the 95-pound division championship" Hawley added.

★ ★ ★

OUT AGAIN — Art Johnson, well known to quarterhorsemen in the Southwest and California, reportedly has been squeezed out of a second managerial post within the past year and one-half.

Art was general manger at Sunland Park when a change in management caused a termination of his assignment. He moved on to Santa Fe, where he did a yeoman job. But the majority stockholder in the eastern New Mexico track has changed and Johnson is out again.

ONE TO WATCH — A Charlie Whittingham-trained youngster is drawing most of the raves these mornings at Santa Anita. She is Polka Dot Veil, an unraced daughter of Round Table-Nas-Mahal and thus a full sister to Hollywood Derby winner Tell. Poka Dot Veil will be a three-year-old during the 1974 Arcadia session, which begins Dec. 27 and her half-sister, Turkish Trousers, was sophomore filly queen there three years ago.

Winternationals forms out

POMONA — Entry blanks for the National Hot Rod Association's 14th annual Winternationals of drag racing are being distributed to contestants this week in preparation for the February 1-2-3 classic at the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds here.

According to NHRA officials, more than 700 entries are anticipated for the rich event, which annually kicks off each new drag racing season of major races. Eight important Winternationals championships, including the newly dded Pro Comp Eliminator title will be up for grabs, along with more than $200,000 in prize money.

"We're keeping a close watch on the energy crisis," explained NHRA president Wally Parks, "but we don't anticipate any major problems that would interfere with the running of the event.

"Practical all of our major sponsors have confirmed their particip tion for the 1974 season" Par said, "and we have added few new ones as well."

"As a ma er of fact, our optimism is uite high," he added, expla ing that NHRA recently spe $25,000 to repave the qu ter-mile racing surface at P mona in preparation for t '74 Winternationals.

Second oldest of NHRRA's eight major National events, the Winternationals was established in 1961 as a western counterpart to the annual NHRA Nationals, held at Indianapolis over the Labor Day weekend. The L.A. County Fairgrounds drag strip, one of the oldest in Southern California, began operations in the early 1950s under auspices of the Pomona police department as a means of curbing street racing and traffic violations in the area. It's success has been lauded by law enforcement officials across the nation and has served as a pattern for other communities.

The new racing surface, repaved several weeks ago, is one of the same asphalt formula used at the Ontario Motor Speedway which is known for its exceptional traction that afforded the sport's first five-second run.

"We feel certain that our new surface will provide better racing than ever for the Winternationals and we are looking for a string of new records,' Parks said.

The three days of racing, one fewer than in previous years, will get underway Friday, February 1, with the first of two qualifying days to set the individual fields for the February 3 finals.

In addition to trimming one day off the running schedule, NHRA officials also announced a reduction of the final Top Fuel and pro Stock fields to 16 cars each. Previously, the 32 lowest elapsed-time qualifiers in each of those professional categories advanced to the finals.

Other racing categories will consist of the 16 lowest e.t. qualifiers in Funny Car, Pro Comp and Comp, and class winners in the Modified, Super Stock and Stock Eliminator categories.

Tickets for the 1974 Winternationals are on sale now at all Ticketron outlets plus all Mutual Ticket Agencies and Wallich Music City Stores.

A tiny screen, old film—just great!

ATLANTA (UPI) "My name's Marlow. General Sternwood is expecting me," the gruff voice said from behind the door, and we immediately whisked away into yesteryear.

My wife and I went to the movies the other night. We bought a bag of popcorn, sat in the back row and held hands. It was like old times in more ways than one.

For this wasn't one of the run-of-the-widescreen epics: this was the famous 1945 version of Raymond Chandler's private eye classic "The Big Sleep," shown much the same way it was more than 30 years ago.

Even the screen was small, I couldn't believe we actually watched movies in those days on a screen that little. And the seats were hard, straight-back affairs. Indeed, it was like old times.

About half the audience was from our era and they cheered and chuckled at Humphrey Bogart's exploits in the role of Philip Marlow and even applauded the bombastic overtures of Max Steiner, that master scene-setter.

Movies were king

This was a big slice of yesteryear and we loved it. I grew up in a time when movies were king, a time when television was mostly a dream. Watching Bogart and Lauren Bacall tool through their paces in a movie brought back the multitude of Saturday afternoons of my youth and their adventure epic, their serials.

While others my age were running up and down the aisles or out buying more popcorn, I was reading the credits. Perhaps an odd quirk, but I felt I knew Lyle Talbot, George MacReady, Frank Faylen, Charles Middleton and Fuzzy Knight. All solid supporting actors but not exactly household words.

I probably was the only one on my block who knew, or cared, that Harry Shannon played Dr. Zarakhov in the Flash Gordon serials or that Tom Tyler, who played Captain Marvel, also was the mummy in the "Mummy's Hand," replaced in the sequels by Lon Chaney Jr. My ambition was to play the Frankenstein monster.

Gerald Jones, the 29-year-old film maker who brought to Atlanta the two-month series of vintage movies of which "The Big Sleep" was part, described Nostalgla as "a shallow emotion," and said most people came because of "solid entertainment value."

Not camp

It wasn't a matter of "camp," he said, except perhaps in the case of "Little Caesar" when the audience laughed. I recalled several years ago, in a crowded theater, they laughed at Boris Karloff's sensitively played monster in the original "Frankenstein." It was, I thought, almost sacrilege.

To me, it was partly nostalgia, partly just re-seeing a good movie. "The Big Sleep" reminded us that there was gas rationing in World War II (a B sticker adorned Marlow's windshield.) I had forgotten there was heat rationing then, too. While promising to help his police friend bust the case, Marlow said it would get him some "red points." Gas was selling for 28 cents a gallon, ham and eggs for 35 cents.

Bogart was the best Marlow, I thought, and I saw them all. Violence was there, of course, but it was nothing to compare with the Coke-bottle-smashed in the face-of-the-pretty-girl trick employed for shock value in the newest Marlow, "The Long Goodbye," which we saw two nights before.

"The Big Sleep," with a script coauthored by none other than William Faulkner, had Bogart equal to every task, whether gunning down a killer or charming a young bookstore clerk (Dorothy Malone). When Martha Vickers, as Bacall's childish younger sister, asks if the person they are discussing "is cuter than you?" The homely Bogart snaps, "Nobody is," never blinking an eye.

Great dialogue

When tied up and waiting for the killers to return, Bogart tells Bacall, "They'll kick my teeth down my throat and then beat me to death for mumbling." They just don't write dialogue like that any more.

Three times during the showing, there was a break while the projectionist changed the reel. In my day, we would have hooted, whistled, stamped our feet and clapped like mad. But this time, the audience was quiet, probably preconditioned by the multitude of pauses for television commercials.

As Bogart leaves the darkened bookshop after sharing a bottle of rye with Dorothy Malone, he says, "So long, pal." That pretty well tells the story. We left the theater with a feeling of "So long, pal." So long to a past we all remembered fondly. My two teen-age daughters call them the olden days. I call them them them golden days.

LAPD will regain record

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The police department's jogging team dragged out the superlatives to boast they intend to make the world's longest relay run.

Team camptain Charles Foote said his 13-man crew will leave from the steps of the nation's capitol sometime next spring and reach Los Angeles precisely 18 days, six hours and 11 minutes later.

The way Foote figures it, each man will jog 10 miles on a rotation basis, successfully crossing hill and dale and a couple of mountain ranges along the way. By the time they reach Los Angeles City Hall each man will have run 291 miles.

The police department runners, among them 53-year-old officer Frank Mullens, aren't exactly beginners when it comes to exhausting, long distance runs.

They set the previous world's distance run with a 2,012-mile event from Tijuana, Mexico, to the Canadian border. But this past September a northern California athletic group, the Striders, ran 3,411 miles in 19 ½ days. And now the police want their stolen title back.

Seeking wedge to get okay for casino?

MINDEN, Nev. (UPI) — A South Dakota investor who couldn't get a permit to build a gambling casino at Lake Tahoe says he now wants to build hog pens on the site.

But District Attorney Howard McKibben said that the investor, Ted Jennings, Miller, S.D., will be advised he can't do that either. The land is zoned for tourist facilities.

A 500-room hotel-casino Jennings wanted to build on the land was turned down on environmental grounds, officials said.

Jennings' local business manager denied the hog pen idea was designed to get reconsideration of the casino plan, but added Jennings had not given up on a casino.

IT'S THE SPIRIT THAT COUNTS — Monique Waldron, an eight-grade student at St. Paul's School in San Pablo, wrote to the Richmond Independent for help in resolving a personal energy crisis. She asked if it would be all right to light the family's outdoor tree since there are no lights on the indoor tree. The paper printed its reply on the front page advising her to "pick the brightest star in the heavens and make it your own Christmas light . . . to brighten your Christmas."

Rubella tests mandatory after Jan. 1

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Prospective brides in California will be required next month to take blood tests to detect German measles before they can get a marriage license.

The statewide rubella tests were postponed last July after it was found that 41 counties did not have adequate facilities to handle the tests.

State Health and Welfare Secretary Earl Brian said that after Jan. 1 all brides-to-be must show county clerks evidence of a laboratory test for rubella antibodies in order to obtain marriage licenses.

He said women who do not have rubella antibodies are considered susceptible to the disease and run greater risk of giving birth to a defective child if infection should occur during the first three months of pregnancy.

Brian said there may be delays of tests in some areas and he urged women planning to be married to arrange for the tests at least two weeks before their weddings.

No prison riot, but celebration

BOISE, Idaho (UPI) — What looked like a near riot recently at Idaho's new state prison proved to be a real headache for three inmates Thursday.

What prison officals initially reported as an "upheaval" and a potentially riotous situation turned out to be an early celebration of the holiday season by three inmates in the new prison south of Gowen.

The three got drunk on some homemade liquor called "Squawkee" and became boisterous.

But, before they could do anything besides acquire potential hangovers, security personnel broke up their party.

'74 problems are fuel, inflation, says industrialist

NEW YORK (UPI) — Inflation and the energy crisis are the two biggest problems facing the economy in 1974, according to Charles J. Pilliod, president of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

Pilliod, responding to a year-end UPI economic poll, suggested that the energy problem could be eased by speeding up construction of the Alaskan pipeline and nuclear power plants and, as an interim measure, by reducing restrictions on high-sulphur coal.

The Goodyear president's complete answers to the survey follow:

Q. There has been much talk about the possibility of a 1974 recession. Do you have any such worry? How do you see the economy next year?

A. No, I do not foresee a recession in 1974 despite the fact that the energy crisis will certainly slow down the economy. But it will be a period of much slower growth or possibly leveling off. The strongest force in our economy should be the continued spending by business for plant and equipment and inventory rebuilding.

Q. Some business executives, economists and newspapers have characterized Mr. Nixon as a lame duck president three years before his term expires. If that proves true, what effect would it have on the economy?

A. If Congress doesn't support the President on legislation designed to strengthen our economy and to slow down inflation, this could, naturally, have a negative effect. However, I do not visualize Congress risking an economic slowdown for possible political gain because this could certainly boomerang. Mr. Nixon has had a minority Congress throughout his term as president, and there is no question that he is now working very hard to restore the confidence of the American people and both parties in Congress in his administration.

Q. Do you feel present price and wage controls help or hinder the economy? What if anything should be done about them?

A. The lesson of the past year has been that wage and price controls create distortions in the economy, result in supply shortages and cause other disruptions that would not occur if free market forces were allowed to operate. The price control law will continue in effect until April 1, 1974, and it is my opinion that it should be allowed to expire. However, between now and April 1, the government should selectively decontrol by individual industry so as to reduce the trauma of an abrupt transition on April 1 and a sudden shock of a return to a free economy.

Q. In your opinion, what are the two biggest problems facing the U.S. economy today, and what can be done about them?

A. The two biggest problems are inflation and the energy crisis. With respect to the energy problem, we should speed up construction of the Alaska pipeline, accelerate the construction of nuclear power plants, and, as interim measures, reduce restrictions on the use of high-sulphur coal, and implement conservation and allocation programs directed toward the most economic use of available materials.

As for inflation the expiration of the price control law on April 1, 1974, will result in a free marketplace. And, although there might be a sudden and temporary surge, the competitive factors will tend to put downward pressure on prices in general, providing the law of supply and demand becomes effective without resulting in severe shortages of products or raw materials.

Q. Some have said that the U.S. is becoming a second-rate economic power because of dollar-softness and the emergence of Japan and Germany as world traders. What can the U.S. do to regain international trade dominance?

A. The U.S. does not want international trade dominance because no country should have that dominance. What we really need is a long-term, favorable balance of trade and the reevaluation of the dollar along with renewed exports. Both Germany and Japan are experiencing a higher rate of inflation than the United States, and this should result in the U.S. regaining considerable lost ground in the field of international trade.

Q. Dollar devaluation and the immense international dollar overhang have led to heavy foreign investment in the U.S. economy. Do you see this as a boon or a threat?

A. We welcome foreign investments in the United States, just as U.S. investments are welcome in major free-world countries abroad. In view of heavy imports over the past few years, the increased investment by foreign firms in the U.S. is a natural move designed to replace products previously produced abroad and sold here. The new jobs created with other accompanying benefits, such as increased tax revenue and reduced requirements on foreign exchange for imports, is certainly preferred. I definitely see this as a boon rather than a threat.

For the first time, Japan's young see economy wane

By ROBERT CRABBEE

TOKYO (UPI) — Merchants in Tokyo's famous Ginza shopping district turned on all their neon signs and all their store lights the night of Oct. 11 while 44 radiant floats passed by in the Ginza Festival parade.

Today the lights of luxury-loving Ginza are out—the first casualties in a frantic program to save electricity because of the Arab oil embargo.

Japan's prospects for 1974 are just as gloomy as Ginza's streets at night. The New Year may be the most difficult and turbulent since the bleak days just after World War II.

The oil embargo is only part of the trouble facing the Japanese, whose history from 1945 to 1973 was encapsuled in two words—"economic miracle."

Rising from the ashes of their bombed-out cities, the Japanese built up the world's third-largest industrial economy, after the United States and the Soviet Union. Japanese reveled in Asia's highest standard of living.

That "economic miracle" was built on a foundation of cheap raw materials. Japan was short of natural resources, but other people had them in plenty.

"The world will be our supermarket," boasted Japan's industrial tycoons. Japan sucked in torrents of Australian iron ore, American coal, Arabian oil, turned them into ships, automobiles, panty hose, television sets and industrial machines, and sold them all over the world.

Japanese called it the "bicycle economy." Japanese companies ran on shoestring capital, and had to keep moving ahead to keep from falling over.

Now the raw materials "supermarkets" have high prices and a lot of empty shelves. Crude oil, scrap iron, aluminum and coal may never be plentiful or cheap again. The foundations of Japan's economic miracle are disappearing like the morning dew.

The the Japanese people, the readjustment will be painful.

Heading into the new year, Japan's younger generation for the first time in their lives saw the country's economy going down instead of up. From Minister of International Trade and Industry Yasuhiro Nakasone the public learned a depressing new catch phrase— "negative economic growth."

That meant slumping production and shortages of goods in the stores.

Inflation ravaged the country, melting the people's savings. The cost of living in Tokyo by the end of the year had risen at least 15 per cent.

The yen, one of the world's most sought-after currencies in early 1973, retreated in value under waves of selling on the Tokyo foreign-exchange market. Speculators scented Japan's newly revealed economic weakness, and rushed to get back into Yankee dollars.

A country that took pride in its people's traits of discipline and cooperation seethed with ugly stories of hoarding and panic buying of everything from stove oil to toilet paper.

Businessmen could hardly rent space in warehouses. These were crammed with consumer goods and raw materials snapped up by Japan's canny wholesalers in anticipation of fat profits as shortages overtake the country.

"Our weaknesses were always there,' said one of the dozens of the Japanese business community. "They just weren't apparent."

Predictions by certain American economic thin tanks that Japan would be the powerhouse of the Pacific in the 1980s, and surpass the American standard of living later on, looked hollow.

"Anybody could sit down and project those curves upward when we were doing well," says Ryosukej Kashiwagi, Japan's former Vice-Minister of Finance, and now a private banker. "But there wasn't any sign it (the reversal) was going to happen."

The man on whom the blow fell hardest was Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaa. He rode into office in 1972 on a wave of popularity. Polls showed 60 per cent of the Japanese people supported his policies of friendship with China, and dispersing Japan's congested cities.

Now he has become a Japanese Herbert Hoover. Like the 1928-1932 American President, Tanaka stepped into the driver's cab just in time to see prosperity come crashing down around him. Recent polls have shown his support at less than 25 per cent. His rivals in Japan's ruling liberal Democratic Party (LDP) are trying to bring him down, and he gets little sympathy from the public.

The LDP itself is in deep trouble, and that is a serious thing for the United States. The party has ruled Japan without a break since the country got back its independence in 1952. It is the only one of Japan's five political parties that favors close cooperation with America in Foreign affairs. The other four want to take Japan into Swedish-style neutralism.

Plagued by inflation, housing shortages and pollution, Japan's long suffering urban voters are rapidly dumping LDP, and voting in droves for Communist and Socialist Party candidates in local elections. Japan enters the new year with her six largest cities under the rule of opposition mayors elected with leftist support.

In 1974, LDP may for the first time lose control of one of the two houses in the Japanese Parliament.

LDP's majority in the House of Councillors, the upper house of the Japanese Diet (Parliament), has shrunk to eight seats. In an election next June, opposition parties have a good chance of winning a combination majority for the first time in history.

Even with LDP still in control of the other house, the possibilities for political chaos then would be enormous.

It wasn't intended that way, but the brilliantly lighted Ginza festival last October may have been the last hurrah for an era of prosperity and stability now drawing to a close for Japan.

Setters can't get too much exercise

By Dr. Frank Miller

DEAR DR. MILLER: We just bought Red and Ned, two nine-month-old Irish setters. We got them cheap because they were no longer "cute" puppies. We figured it was wise to get two of them so they could keep each other company while we are gone during the day. We are going to have to leave them in the house and we didn't want one to be too lonesome. My question concerns the amount of exercise these dogs should get. They are peppy and we want to give them enough exercise so they don't get fat but we don't want to wear them out. How do you know what's the right amount? — A.G.

Dear A. G.: Be assured on one point: You are unlikely to over-exercise healthy Irish setters. If you are taking them out for walks on a leash, and it would be dangerous to take them out in most areas without a lease, you could plan to jog with them for several hours daily. This would provide them a minimum amount of exercise. For the same reason, given any energy outlet, this breed will burn calories, not store them as fat.

Leaving them while you are gone would be a hazardous-to-the-house way to determine if they are getting enough exercise.

If not, they won't simply be content to lounge around and chat with each other about their inactivity; they will find something to do. This could be scouting the windows for something to bark at. But a more likely outlet for boredom, however, would be chewing. Chew-bone types of pacifiers might help. But if legitimate chewables didn't keep them busy enough, miscellaneous portions of the house and contents could be next. Obviously two could create this mayhem job twice as fast as one. If they don't ever resort to such activity, they are (a) well-exercised, and (b) well-trained. If both of these traits do not yet apply, better start working on them. (Temporarily, Red and Ned might need more Spartan quarters.)

DEAR DR. MILLER: I had a cat which, after a long struggle, died, it was discovered, of a disease called feline infectious peritonitis. Should she have died if the doctor had been able to tell earlier what it was? Wouldn't that have made a difference? — N.N.

Dear N.N.: Not in the outcome, I'm afraid. Mortality rate in feline infectious peritonitis is approximately 100 per cent.

Unusual sports call for Gowdy

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Even for sportscaster Curt Gowdy, who has covered virtually every kind of sport, his assignment following the Rose Bowl will be unusual: A play-by-play of a symphony.

It's part of a concert by the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra the night of Jan. 1. Other scheduled numbers include "Dance of St. Vitus," "The Grossest Fugue," and "Concerto for Piano vs. Orchestra."

Gowdy will be flown by helicopter from the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, according to a spokesman for the philharmonic, "to appear as himself doing a sportscast of the first movement of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony with Prof. Peter Schickele at the Los Angeles Music Center."

Insurance executive sees possible recession in '74

NEW YORK (UPI) — The chairman of a major insurance company says there is a possibility of a "significant slowdown, if not a recession" in the 1974 economy.

R. Manning Brown, Jr., chairman of New York Life Insurance Co., the country's fourth largest, also thought that price and wage controls are doing more harm than good and that the U.S. system of financing political campaigns should be reformed.

Brown's exact answers to a year-end United Press International economic poll of major corporations and financial institutions follow:

Q. There has been much talk about the possibility of a 1974 recession. Do you have any such worry? How do you see the economy next year?

A. We are very near the top of one of the nation's largest business booms that seems most unlikely to sustain itself in 1974.

A significant slowdown, if not a recession, is a matter of genuine concern. And the energy crisis will clearly compound the problems in an overheated economy. The outlook for 1974 is for a lessening of real output, prevailing higher prices, and bigger government deficits.

Specifically, real gross national product in 1974 will probably not grow at anywhere near the 6 per cent rate anticipated this year. Even the most optimistic forecasters look for real growth to go down to roughly half of this year's rate. Unfortunately, inflation and unemployment are likely to continue to be significant problems in 1974.

Other problems of a softer economy next year also seem apparent. Chances are we will see a slowdown in the purchase of autos and other big ticket items. New housing activity may be down significantly from the 1973 pace, reflecting, among other things, the difficulties in the single family mortgage market that developed at midyear. Capital spending plans seem quite strong, but there is some doubt that they can be carried out in view of the economic trouble spots and energy problems that lie ahead. Corporate profits this year should be about 30 percent above last year, but they will probably decline in 1974 as a result of the generally slower pace of economic activity.

The energy crisis, with its reverberating effects on the economy, will severely challenge the nation throughout 1974. The clear need now is for the administration, for Congress, for business, and for the American people to pull together in meeting this crisis.

Q. Some business executives, economists and newspapers have characterized Mr. Nixon as a lame duck president three years before his term expires. If that proves true, what effect will it have on the economy?

A. Political instability inevitably contributes to economic uncertainty. We have seen ample evidence of this in the gyrations of both the stock market and the international monetary market.

These events are influenced by many factors, including the energy crisis and the general outlook for a softer economy. But they are undoubtedly much more reflective of the crisis of confidence in the aftermath of the Watergate scandal and all of its sordid ramifications than they are of the fact that Mr. Nixon's term expires in three years.

It is an inescapable reality that the health of our economy depends to a great extent on the faith and confidence that people have in our institutions and in their leadership. Unless the President can somehow successfully dispel the doubts about his administration and restore confidence in his ability to lead, the economy will, unfortunately, continue to feel the added burden of this national uncertainty.

Q. Do you feel present price and wage controls help or hinder the economy? What, if anything, should be done about them?

A. Unfortunately, the government's direct controls on prices and wages haven't worked too well. And at the present time, they're probably doing more harm than good.

The plain fact is that even under the best of circumstances such controls could not long suppress price increases in an overheated economy.

Current bottlenecks and shortages are the best evidence we have that price and wage controls will not work satisfactorily in our economy over an extended period of time. And the longer we persist with them, the more likely they are to further disrupt the marketplace.

The controls program should be ended now since every additional day that we stay with them will strengthen arguments that "now is not the time." It's true, of course, that with any ending

Eco-groups rip House energy bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A coalition of Environmental groups says the House-passed version of the National Energy Emergency Bill is "a public disgrace.'

It said Monday there is little in the bill which will ease the current situation—"most provisions deal with the long term ... and will have disastrous effects."

Such groups as the Sierra Club, Friends of the Earth, the American Public Health Association and the National Wildlife Association as well as various state groups joined in a National Clean Air Coalition in charging that the only emergency the House resolved was one "to see that the special interests received their Christmas present on time."

"Running under the banner of the 'Energy Crisis', special interests such as the energy companies have used the House emergency legislation for their own selfish purposes," coalition coordinator Richard Lahn said.

The coalition spotlighted five House amendments for attack.

One, it said, would "effectively suspend for six years the regulation of emissions from power plants."

A second would take power away from the states to regulate air pollution.

A third restricts what kind of transportation controls the government can order to cleanup the air.

The fourth would freeze car exhaust standards, and a fifth would give power projects exemption from the law requiring environmental impact statements on new projects.

State of firsts

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Indiana's economy has been acclaimed as a world leader in the production of limestone and a frontrunner nationally in manufacturing of trailers, prefabricated homes and band instruments.

But the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce also reports Hoosierland is a leader in the making of funeral caskets.

American citizens contribute $19.6 billion to charity annually

It's a fact. But not likely to be a headline. Violence and scandal are the staples of news; individual charity and kindness go unremarked. This is not to make any Pollyannish assumption that violence does not exist in harrowing abundance. In perspective we must see that violence is in all of us. So is God. The time is now to try His way, in concert, on a scale never before attempted. Get together with your family, friends, neighbors, or co-workers to discuss the problems of violence and how you can work together to help solve them. # Utility chief fears 'energy recession'

NEW YORK (UPI) — The chairman and chief executive officer of the country's second largest utility is worried about the possibility of a 1974 "energy recession."

Leslie H. Warner of General Telephone and Electronics, which had $4.33 billion operating revenues and 183,000 employes last year, still believes a recession can be avoided but thinks the chance of an energy recession is greater since the Arab oil embargo.

Warner's answers to a year end United Press International poll of major corporations and financial institutions follow:

Q..There has been much talk about.the.possibility.of.a 1974 recession. Do you .have .any such .concern? .How ·do .you view the outlook for the economy for next year?

A. Any consideration of the outlook for the economy in 1974 has to be conditioned upon future developments in connection with the energy shortage. Prior to the oil embargo we were anticipating a slowdown in the economy in 1974, but not a recession. While we still believe that a recession can be avoided, the risks of an "energy recession" are now much greater.

Q. Some business executives, economists, .and..newspapers have.characterized.Mr..Nixon as..a .lame .duck .president three years before his .term expires. If that proves true, what effect would it have on the economy?

A. I do not think that it will prove true, but if it does, it obviously would have serious effects upon the economy. These would include the inability to cope with the energy shortage, the inability to control inflation, and less effectiveness in both domestic and international situations which could accelerate and broaden their impact.

Q. Do you feel present price and .wage..controls..help..or hinder.the·economy?.What, if anything, should be done about them?

A. Prior to the energy crisis, I favored prompt decontrol. Now I feel that a more cautious approach should be followed until we can assess the inflationary effects of the energy shortage.

Q. In your opinion, what are the.two.biggest.problems facing the U.S. economy today, and what can be done about them?

A. The energy shortage and inflation are our two principal concerns in today's economy.

While stringent energy conservation measures such as rationing may be necessary as a short-term remedy, adequate supplies of energy in the long run are absolutely essential to maintain economic growth. We fully support present measures to conserve energy.

As indicated in my response to question No. 3, all reasonable and practicable steps must be taken to reduce the rate of inflation, but the extent to which price and wage controls should be maintained will depend upon the economic effects of the energy shortage.

Q. Some have said that the U.S. is becoming a second-rate economic power because of dollar softness and the emergence of Japan and Germany .as..world..traders. What can the U.S. do to regain international.trade.dominance?

Q. Some have said that the U.S. is becoming a second-rate economic power because of dollar softness and the emergence of Japan and Germany as world traders. What can the U.S. do to regain international trade dominance?

A. The dollar has actually been strengthening since the second devaluation, and in the eyes of many experts this reflects the fact that the dollar is probably the best currency bargain in the world today. The fact is that our trading picture has brightened considerably in recent months, enabling us to better compete with the other major trading nations, especially Japan and Germany.

International trade, of course, is a two-way street. A nation pays for its imports through the foreign exchange earnings of its exports of goods and services and the return on its capital invested abroad. For a healthy world economy—one less likely to be upset by political disruptions—there should be a vigorous flow of goods, services, and capital among the world's trading nations, and not trade dominance by any one nation.

On balance, it seems to me that the dollar devaluation is a decided plus for the U.S. in international markets. And the dollar overhang, while not to be minimized, does not look to be as serious a problem as it did several years ago when the dollar was weakening instead of strengthening, as is currently the case.

Q. Has the Watergate investigation of corporate campaign contributions given you any thoughts on how campaigns might better be financed? Do you have any specific recommendations for change or do you feel the present system is .workable?

A. It is clearer than it has ever been that there must be a better way to finance political campaigns. The present system is simply not good enough.

It's not clear at this time, however, what features a new election financing law should include. But there are a number of possibilities—all of which should be seriously considered by Congress. These include a stringent limit on individual contributions, restricting contributions to check or money order and not in cash, using some form of public financing, limiting use of television and other media, extending the present voluntary $1 check-off on income tax returns for financing presidential campaigns, and limiting the campaign period itself.

In any final analysis, however, the effectiveness of even the best of election financing laws must inevitably depend not only on how effectively that law is administered, but equally important on the personal integrity of the candidates, the people who run their campaigns, and the people who contribute to them.

of controls, there is likely to be some sort of post-controls bulge in prices, especially in those items now in short supply. But for the longer pull, getting rid of controls should be in the best interest of all concerned.

Q. In your opinion, what are the two biggest problems facing the U.S. economy today and what can be done about them?

A. There are, it seems to me, three major problems facing the American economy—inflation, economic controls, and the energy crisis. And all three are obviously related.

Inflation is fed by large federal deficits and massive infusions of money and credit by the Federal Reserve System. This is what's been happening in recent years. A successful fight against inflation depends to a large extent on sound national economic policies that effectively balance our capabilities with our overall spending plans. Controls are obviously not the answer because they deal with symptoms—rising prices and wages —rather than the causes— excessive credit creation and deficit spending by the Federal government.

Therefore, a check on federal spending and a curb on excessive money and credit growth by the Federal Reserve are essential if we are to achieve lower rates of inflation.

And the energy crisis, which affects and pervades all segments of the economy, highlights the critical need for an immediate national effort to deal with current shortages and a long-range program to increase oil reserves and to develop alternate sources of energy.

Q. Dollar devaluation.and the immense international .dollar overhang have led to ·heavy foreign investment in.the U.S. economy. Do you see this as a boon or a threat?

A. In the short run, the inflow of capital resulting from foreign investment in the U.S. is beneficial because of the positive effect it has upon the balance of payments. From the long-term viewpoint, the return of earnings made in the U.S. to the countries making the investments will lessen that positive effect. Although the size and diversity of the U.S. economy can support moderate levels of direct foreign investment, we would be opposed to significant foreign investments in key industries related to national security.

U.S. tourist spending ebbs

COLOGNE, West Germany (UPI) — American tourists counted their dollars twice this summer and spent 20 per cent less in West Germany, according to an estimate by the Central Tourist Office.

Rising costs and the second devaluation of the U.S. currency in only 12 months were the main reasons for the decline.

2 free gifts on Christmas

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Here is a rather peculiar Christmas hand. South was very kind to poor West. Who else could take two clubs tricks with that nine card suit to the queen. At the same time it was false generosity. West got two tricks, but East lost three he would have made oherwise.

We won't spend much time on the bidding. Anything can happen with freak hands and if this were a duplicate game there might well be as many bidding series as players.

Opening lead—Q♣

South played the king of clubs from dummy rather unhappily. It looked as if there would be no way to avoid the loss of three tricks in the red suits. Then East played a red card and after long thought South saw that he was going to make his contract after all.

He overtook dummy's king of clubs with his ace. Then he drew trumps with three leads and cashed his king of diamonds.

West discarded a club whereupon South led a heart to dummy's ace and threw West in with a club.

That was West's first Christmas trick. West had to lead another club. South let West hold that trick also while discarding a heart loser from dummy and a diamond loser from his own hand. West led another club. South discarded dummy's last heart; ruffed in his hand and claimed his contract.

Topless bathing for men only at Santa Barbara

SANTA BARBARA (UPI) — A simplified interpretation of a new ordinance banning nudity on county beaches is men can go topless, but women can't.

The ordinance was passed by the Board of Supervisors Monday by a 3-2 vote as an overflow crowd of some 250 persons, most of them opposing the measure, jammed into the meeting room.

The two supervisors who voted againt the ordinance said they believe it will be overturned by the courts because one section prohibits women from appearing topless.

Opponents of the measure contend it could be construed as discriminatory because it permits males to wear topless swimming suits.

Half million in German army

BONN (UPI) -- West Germany's armed forces total nearly half a million men.

Defense ministry figures say there are 319,000 soldiers, 111,000 airmen and 37,000 sailors on duty.

Top businessmen view economy with concern

By DEAN C. MILLER
UPI Business Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ten of 13 chief executives of major American corporations and financial institutions polled by UPI feel serious concern about the 1974 economy. The other three in this year-end survey were more optimistic but foresaw an economic slowdown.

The leaders in steel, banking, autos, insurance, utilities, railroads, rubber, electronics, computers and brokerage investments represent a total of $65 billion in sales, another $41 billion in operating revenues and assets and 2.18 million employees.

In response to six other questions, the bosses at IBM, General Motors, General Electric, Bank of America, RCA, 3M, Goodyear, New York Life Insurance, Bethlehem Steel, Union Pacific Railroad, General Telephone & Electronics, Gulf & Western and Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis generally agreed that:

—Inflation and the energy crisis are the greatest dangers to the 1974 economy.

—Wage and price controls should be removed.

— Dollar devaluation has helped the United States reestablish its world trading position.

—Recent and heavy foreign investment in the United States is a positive, not a negative, force for the economy.

—Reforms are needed in the financing of political campaigns.

Asked how the economy would be affected if Mr. Nixon became a "lame duck" president because of Watergate, seven declined comment. The others said that the economy would suffer if the administration could not generate congressional and public support over the next three years.

None of the executives polled flatly predicted a recession in the classical definition of the word: two or more consecutive quarters of declining Gross National Product growth. A few came close. And most saw significant declines in the real growth of GNP.

"We're at a stage of deceleration which could result in a recession or a 'soft landing,'" said James W. Davant, chairman and chief executive of Paine, Webber, a big Wall Street firm.

Leslie H. Warner, chairman and chief executive of GTE, the country's second largest utility, thought there was a "risk of an energy recession."

''I do not foresee an outright recession, but I do foresee 'stagflation,'" said Charles G. Bluhdorn, chairman of Gulf & Western. Stagflation, a word crossbreeding of stagnation and inflation, produces below average economic growth amid inflation and significant unemployment, similar to the conditions in 1970 and early 1971.

"A significant slowdown, if not a recession, is a matter of genuine concern," said R. Manning Brown, Jr., chairman of New York Life Insurance.

In the middle range of pessimism were GE and Bank of America.

"It (a recession) is possible but improbable in our judgment," said A.W. Clausen, president of the big San Francisco bank. "But we see the economy growing only from 1 to 2 per cent."

"We expect a sharp slowdown in the real GNP growth rate, from about 6 per cent this year to about 2.2 per cent next,'' said Reginald H. Jones, chairman and chief executive at GE.

Frank T. Cary, chairman and president of IBM, Robert W. Sarnoff, chairman and chief executive of RCA, Stewart S. Cort, chairman of Bethlehem Steel, and Charles J. Pilliod, president of Goodyear, all were in agreement that the economy will slow.

Among the most optimistic was Harry Heltzer, chairman and chief executive of 3M. "The economy is basically strong, so 1974 should be good," he said. "But it all depends on how the country responds to the energy crisis.

Frank E. Barnett, chairman and chief exeuctive of the Union Pacific Corp., echoed this thinking. "The economy as a whole is good but could experience a severe dislocation because of the ener-

All the company leaders agreed alternative sources of fuel should be developed as quickly as possible to eliminate our dependence on oil. Cort of Bethlehem and Sarnoff of RCA suggested a crash energy program be instituted similar to the one the United States used in putting a man on the moon.

Many of the executives thought rationing of fuel eventually would come and all agreed that new and tighter governmental and individual disciplines will be necessary to avoid an energy debacle.

On the question of how political campaigns might better be financed, the exeuctives generally agreed a new system must be devised. They also had some solid suggestions.

Cort of Bethlehem thought that contributions and campaign spending should be limited. "The spending has gotten out of hand at all levels," he said.

Brown of NYLIC said the present system is "not good enough" and suggested individual contributions should be limited and restricted to checks and money orders. No cash. Heltzer of 3M wanted to widen the base of contributions.

"The present system is not working and should be overhauled,'' said Barnett of Union Pacific. "We might make campaigns shorter and encourage broad based support through tax or other incentives."

There was general agreement that campaign time should be cut drastically, spending sharply reduced and the public encouraged to participate in the financing.

ISN'T THE SAME — William F. Bailey of Salem, Ore., went along with the President's request to cut down on outdoor displays—he put a kerosene lantern in Santa's hand. He says without lights, the Christmas season is not quite the same.

Smog element causes wide crop damage

RIVERSIDE (UPI) — Smog scientists aren't sure why, but a little-known pollutant nicknamed PPN caused widespread crop destruction last month during a two-day siege of smog here.

Scientists at the state Air Pollution Research Center at UC Riverside identified the culprit as peroxypropionyl nitrate, an element of smog discovered just 10 years ago.

PPN levels reached 10 parts per billion during the smog attack Nov. 9-11 in Riverside and San Bernardino counties.

Researchers could offer no explanation why widespread crops of leafy vegetables reacted to PPN, but suggested the smog attack might have struck during the plants' rapid growth period, making them especially vulnerable.

Police advised 'take bus to deter crime'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The city's patrolmen are being advised to take the bus once in a while.

The move is not to rest their weary feet but to fight crime on the municipal railway buses.

Supervising Capt. Jeremiah P. Taylor said recently that officers' presence might help cut down the number of assaults by youths on elderly passengers.

Policemen were asked to take the bus "where practical and feasible."

Earthquake capital of the U.S.

Rancher rides range astride San Andreas fault

HOLLISTER, Calif. (UPI — Scientists do more earthquake-watching on Howard Harris' ranch than anywhere else in the world. But the 64-year-old rancher rides the constant-trembling San Andreas fault line with nary a worry.

His ranch is located eight miles south of Hollister, a city of 7,500 persons called the "Earthquake Capital of the United States."

The area has been unusually quake-free so far this year, despite a prediction in the spring by government scientists that there would be a heavy temblor centered on the Harris ranch.

The 3,500-acre Harris ranch runs along both sides of the San Andreas fault for about five miles. It has so many earthquakes that he turned over part of his property for the scientists to play on. They come from the University of California, Stanford and the U.S. Geological Survey to test out schemes for predicting quakes.

It is easy to see the fault line cutting through the terrain on the ranch, and how the earth is moving about two inches a year on one side. At one place the fault cuts a deep crack, 50 feet wide. Harris has built a road into it for the curious geologists.

"At the upper end of the ranch you can see where our creek has moved four miles north in the last 20,000 years," he says. "Sometime, thousands of years away, Los Angeles will be moving north past San Francisco."

The visiting scientists have installed elaborate devices for measuring every movement of the earth, the sound of the rocks creaking, and the magnetic fields which they say are related to earth movements.

Early this year the government scientists proudly made their first official prediction of a quake. It was to happen on Harris' ranch within a couple of months. When nature did not cooperate, the scientists admitted they would have to go back to the drawing boards on predicting.

"I can predict one for next Tuesday," says Harris. "And I couldn't go far wrong. If you look at the statistics, once a year we have a really sharp quake. Every three or four months we have one maybe 4 or 5 on the Richter scale . . .We have one here every day, depending on how severe it has to be to be called a quake.'

The rancher says he can tell when an earthquake is imminent by watching his cattle or the birds. "They sense these things," he says. "We hear a low rumble before a quake. The cattle and birds pick this up long before we do."

CULVERT SLIPPAGE — Howard Harris stands in culvert near his ranch in Hollister and points to break in the culvert wall. There has been a horizontal slippage of nearly 6 inches due to tremors.

EARTHQUAKE OBSERVATORY — Instrumentation on his ranch is inspected by Howard Harris. The sophisticated devices report even the most minute seismic shock or slippage along San Andreas fault.

Men turning to 'sissy' needlework

By MAXINE YEE

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — With a cry for relaxation and creativity, some men have shoved aside their footballs and basketballs and replaced them with needle and thread.

Businessmen all over the country are trying their hand at what they once called a "sissy" hobby—needlepoint.

It is needlework done with wool thread and cnavas, or scrim.

Barbara H. Donnelly, who is one of the foremost authorities on crewel and needlepoint, has written a book on the two hobbies, entitled "The Crewel Neelepoint World," published by Morgan and Morgan, Inc., of New York.

Miss Donnelly said during an interview here that men all over the country are trying their hand at it to relax and to create.

"Men have more leisure time, and they want to see something they've created," she said.

"Everything is done for them. Everything is mechanized, and they want something that is personal to them that they've created."

Miss Donnelly said needlepoint can relieve everyday tensions and act as an "ego reinforcement."

Anyone can learn to needlepoint, she said.

"If you can count to four, you can do any kind of needlepoint stitch."

Most of the stitches are done over a count of four threads on a piece of linen or canvas, she explained. There are two types of stitches—the straight and the slanted—and from these two, hundreds of variations can be made.

In crewel, there are 2,000 variations; in needlepoint, there are 200.

"The art of crewel or needlepoint," Miss Donnelly said, "is merely the mixing of these variations for a design. Once you've learned the basics, you can do it as you like. You can use your imagination."

But a person doesn't have to learn the hundreds of variations to do either crewel or needlepoint. She said a person can learn as few as one variation and be able to complete a design, and that variation can be he basic "in and out" tent stitch.

Cost is minimal, she said, as compared to other hobbies. The only real investment a person puts into needlework is time.

For a woman, Miss Donnelly said "it's fun just to pass time. It's not like housework that you want to get through as soon as possible. It's a hobby—not work."

Arab tells how oil squeeze can be halted

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The Arab oil squeeze will continue until the United States pressures Israel to pull out of the Sinai Desert and the Golan Heights, the head of a pro-Arab organization said Monday.

Dr. T. M. Mehdi, secretary general of the Action Committee on American-Arab relations, also called for an intensified public relations campaign to get the Arab side of the issue over to the American public. "So far the urgent stories have been about what to do about the energy crisis, rather than explain why the Arabs are causing it," he told a news conference. He proposed that each oil-producing Arab nation contribute $1 million to a fund to finance the campaign.

Steel firms unsure of '74 picture

By RUDY CERNKOVIC
UPI Business Writer

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Steel production boomed to a record 110 million tons in 1973 and an industry spokesman believes that 1974 should produce not too much less—unless the fuel shortage becomes critical.

"While production will dip somewhat, mills should continue to operate at full capacity next year," the spokesman said." In 1973, we produced and shipped at capacity levels. Many mills had high inventories which they sold, adding to total shipments. But next year there will be no inventories."

On Nov. 30, three major steelmakers said fuel shortages may force production and employe cutbacks in early 1974.

While there were no immediate energy problems, U.S. Steel, Jones & Laughlin Steel and Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corps. said oil shortages could strike at the heart of the steel industry unless sufficient fuel allocations are maintained.

"We need oil for fuel injunctions in our blast and coke furnaces," a J & L spokesman said. "If it got real bad, the whole industry could be hit at the level of steel production."

A U. S. Steel spokesman said the No. 1 steel producer did not face "any curtailments as of this monent except a minor one at our ammonia plant at Clairton (Pa.), and that's because of a curtailment in the natural gas we need to drive certain equipment."

The No. 6 plant was shut down in early November, the spokesman said, but few workers were affected and were shifted to other operations.

"As of now, no one can really predict what's going to happen," the spokesman said.

The Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel spokesman said all energy and most raw materials are in tight supply.

"What we are getting is like pulling teeth."

In 1972, the industry shipped 92 million tons of steel, two million under the previous record set in 1969.

Specialty steel, previously hit by foreign imports, enjoyed a boom year. Allegheny Ludlum, the world's largest specialty steel producer, said stainless steel would reach 1.1 million mill product tons of production in 1973. This is a substantial increase from 855,000 tons in 1972 and 718,000 tons in 1971.

Noting the relative decline of foreign imports and the strong U.S. demand for specialty steels, Roger S. Ahlbrandt, chairman of Allegheny Ludlum Industries, Inc., said:

"These factors combine to make 1973 an exceptional year for stainless—with prospects that 1974 will be another outstanding year."

But the prosperous picture for 1974 could be blurred by the energy crisis and pollution control.

A spokesman for Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel, the nation's ninth largest producer, said pollution control affects production to the extent of obtaining the right type of coal.

"But we face another problem," the spokesman said. 'We had a good 1973 but next year we face continued shortages in critical supplies, especially zinc. Copper, aluminum and lubricating oils also are in short supply. Scrap prices are now $100 a ton, about twice as much as last year."

The industry spokesman said the energy crunch will affect transportation.

"Limited supply of fuel may hamper truck movement," he said. "There already is a shortage of box cars and railroads which are financially pressed may not be able to furnish more. Will the trains have more runs? Will their be enough fuel for diesel-operated trucks? Right now we don't know."

Pollution control has been a nagging problem. In November the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) slapped U.S. Steel with 63 additional pollution violations at its coke works at Clairton.

Earlier, Allegheny County and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania accused the corporation of violating a consent decree pertaining to pollution abatement at Clairton. The decree was worked out last year in Allegheny County Common Pleas Court.

U. S. Steel contended the EPA has "no proper role" in the issue because it was "being pursued vigorously" by the county and state. It said it was willing to listen to any new proposals made by the county or state.

The industry spokesman claimed steel companies generally operate with 90 per cent clean efficiency level.

Bethlehem Steel Corp., No. 2 producer, said the cost of meeting air-pollution control standards forced the eventual cutback at its plant in Johnstown, Pa.

Last June, Bethlehem announced it would eliminate 4,700 Johnstown jobs over the next four years. This would reduce the work force from the present 11,800 to 7,100 by 1977. The payroll will dip more than 30 per cent, from $130 million annually to about $90 million.

A spokesman for Bethlehem said the energy crisis has clouded the economic outlook for 1974.

"But, barring any unforeseen dislocations caused by energy shortages, it does not now appear to us that there will be a recession next year, although the economy may slow down," he said.

"Capital spending should continue at a good rate; business inventories are now at a low level and there should be some rebuilding of stock; and the dollar devaluations have made export trade generally more attractive. The economy may be cooling down, but the demand for steel is still very strong, and at this time, we expect it to continue to be strong in 1974."

He said the energy crisis is very serious —"especially as it could affect the steel industry."

Steel is a basic material used by all parts of our economy," he said.

"A shortage of steel would only make the energy problem worse." He said steel is a vital ingredient in development of oil wells, gas wells, coal mines and in the construction of electric generating plants and petroleum refineries.

He noted the steel industry now employs 550,000 persons.

A 15 per cent reduction from the industry's estimated 1973 fuel oil consumption would cost America about 6.8 million tons of steel and more than 30,000 steelmaking jobs, he said.

If the industry were limited to its 1972 oil consumption, it would result in a loss of 12 million tons of steel and 60,000 steelmaking jobs," he said.

Turning to pollution control's effect on the steel industry, the spokesman said environmental protection was having a severe impact on all aspects of operations by increasing both operating costs and capital spending while holding earnings down.

"For Bethlehem alone we foresee nearly a half-billion dollars in capital spending to meet existing pollution control laws," he said.

U.S. Steel's income for the first nine months of 1973 was $221.3 million, or $4.09 per share on sales of $5.1 billion. This compared with the 1972 nine-month income of $102.3 million or $1.89 per share on sales of $3 billion.

The Cost of Living Council granted U.S. Steel a sheet price increase of 2.4 per cent in October, too late to be counted in the nine-month report. The firm has asked for a 6.5 per cent price boost on a wide range of steel products effective Jan. 1. These would include rods, wire, bars, semifinished plate, structural, tubular and railroad products. The products make up about 50 per cent of industry shipments.

Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., the fifth largest producer, said it expects to earn about $48 million this year, its best since its record year in 1966.

The firm shipped out more steel this year although the ranks of workers were cut from 41,000 in 1969 to the present 33,000.

There was a major change in J&L's management. Chairman William R. Roesch, leader in the firm's turnabout from a $21 million dollar loss in 1970 to the current substantial profits, leaves the firm Jan. 1 to be president and chief executive officer of Kaiser Industries in California.

Roesch was succeeded by Roscoe G. Hanyie, president of LTV Corp., Dallas, which controls 81 per cent of J&L stock.

The current three-year contract between the 10 major basic steel producers and the United Steelworkers (USW) expires July 31, 1974.

In the past, the specter of a strike hovered when union and industry prepared for negotiations. But there is a different climate for 1974. Buoying hopes a new contract will be reached amicably is the historic Experimental Negotiating Agreement (ENA) —popularly known as the "no-strike" pact —signed last March by union and industry.

Contract talks open in Washington in late January.

The cost-of-living clause restored in the present contract after a lapse of 12 years will be a major union demand in the new talks.

Since June, 1972, basic steel workers have received a total of 30 cents an hour increase because of the cost-of-living feature.

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS), the average hourly earnings of basic steelworkers is $5.75.

Solon says U.S. should vie with private oil companies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Contending that the energy crisis is a product of "our economic and political machinery," Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, D-Ill., said that a government corporation should be set up to compete with private oil firms.

"The energy crisis is not a crisis of nature's supply," said Stevenson. "The energy crisis is a crisis of our economic and political machinery —of big oil and big government."

His proposed legislation, he said, would "repair some of that faulty machinery."

Stevenson made the remarks as he opened a Senate hearing on his bill to establish a government corporation with authority to explore for oil and gas reserves and manage them in competition with private oil firms.

Sen. Dewey F. Barlett, R-Okla., a witness before the panel, predicted the corporation would be characterized by" bureaucratic incompetence.

"A federal oil and gas corporation would be a deterrent to the aggressive development of this nation's oil and gas resources," Bartlett said. "The taxpayer is being asked to finance a very expensive play toy of the Congress.

Frank N. Ikard, president of American Petroleum Institute, testified: "This new government-owned corporation, even if it enjoyed the most phenomenal success, could not hope to contribute even a trickle of oil to the nation's supply until late in this decade, at the very earliest."

The Bahamas in midst of crime wave

NASSAU, Bahamas (UPI) — A major crime wave has developed in the Bahamas in the wake of widespread unemployment among the young.

Rpaes, hold-ups, break-ins and car thefts have increased more than 100 per cent in the last year, and visitors as well as residents have been the victims.

Almost all offenses have involved the use of firearms despite strict gun laws that forbid even police to be armed.

Robberies are now so prevalent that police have instituted night-time roadblocks to check the contents of vehicles. One such surprise search of two cars revealed its youthful occupants armed with one shotgun, two revolvers, four cutlasses, one crowbar and a jack.

Although the government has tried to suppress information about crimes involving visitors, hotel guests walking along the beach, many in daytime, are known to have been attacked, robbed and beaten by armed youths. Earlier this year two Canadians, in separate incidents, were attacked and beaten while playing golf.

The mushrooming crime rate has produced an unprecedented demand for iron grilles, burglar alarms and guard dogs. One grill maker reports he is months behind on orders. The local animal society has more requests for dogs than it can fill.

Four years ago the Bahamas had virtually no unemployment. But an overly nationalistic immigration policy on the part of the newly-elected Progressive Liberal Party has brought investment to a standstill and driven out thousands of foreign residents.

The result has been large-scale unemployment, now believed close to 15 per cent. Most seriously affected are unskilled school leavers who, under normal circumstances, would have been absorbed into lower level clerical jobs.

Complicating the problem is the fact that the country's major industry — tourism — which might have been expected to utilize some of this manpower, is also ailing. Hotel staff has been put on rotation as a compromise to being laid off.

Commensurate with rising unemployment is the increase in the drug trade. Police say the Bahamas is now experienceing an 80 per cent annual increase in marijuana offenses.

Although recognizing the crime problem, the government appears to lack direction in solving it.

Modern Ben Hur finds a way to beat gas crisis

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Frustrated after he could find no gas stations open, a man donned a Roman helmet and long flowing cape to drive a Ben-Hur style of chariot pulled by two horses down a crowded freeway Monday.

"I decided to burn hay instead of gas," said the chariot owner, Nick Gazaxidas, owner of a downtown Greek restaurant.

"It really screwed up traffic," a California Highway Patrol spokesman said of the chariot, which Gazaxidas reported had been used in the movie "Ben Hur."

Gazaxidas was escorted off U.S. 50 at the nearest exit after authorities observed "the hazard he was causing" during morning rush hour traffic. He was not cited.

"Three days ago I couldn't find any gas stations open and I thought I better do something. Then I started thinking of my ancestors," Gazaxidas said later. "I decided to burn hay instead of gas."

Declaring the chariot will be his transportation from now on, Gazaxidas said the highway patrol "found it too slow with only two horses, so maybe I'll use four."

He said he purchased the chariot three years ago at a MGM movie lot auction.

Raylene Gaul married in Irwindale rites

Haynes Photo

MRS. JOHN SAUSEDO

Miss Raylene Marie Gaul and John Anthony Sausedo were married in Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church in Irwindale.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Shelby Gaul of Pomona was given in marriage by her parents at the double-ring Mass. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Ted Sausedo of Azusa.

The bride's gown of organza was accented with panels of venise lace on the high collar, bodice and cuffs of the long sleeves. The flounce of the skirt swept to a watteau train.

A Juliet-styled cap held the bride's three-tier, elbow-length veil. She carried white carnations with yellow baby's breath.

Mrs. Sharon Giddens, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Terri Lindebaum, Miss Suzy Roach, Miss Anna Licata, cousin of the bride, Miss Madelyne Sausedo, sister of the groom, Miss Yulanda Ramasos, cousin of the groom, and Mrs. Connie Gaul.

Gina Carlos was flower girl and Peter Sereono was ring bearer.

Serving as best man was Dave Morales. Ushers were Craig and Shelby Gaul, brothers of the bride, Jeff Marcus, Paul McCulley, Bob Pacheco and Art Vasquez.

A reception at the Covina Women's Club honored the couple who honeymooned at Las Vegas.

They will reside in Azusa.

Dance charted Monday

DECORATING WINNERS — Miss Joyce Lyon, R.N., Surgery supervisor, left, and Mrs. John Irwin, laboratory technologist, were winners in the annual Christmas ornament-making competition at Garfield-Cottage Hospital. Seventy-two hospital employes participated in the contest to make decorations for the hospital tree. Patients Mrs. James Reagan, Mrs. William Cunningham Jr. and Bill Lucas were the judges. Miss Lyon won the prize for the most beautiful ornament with her mobile made from melted pharmacy bottles, and Mrs. Irwin for the most original decoration of a Santa Claus in a test tube. Ornaments had to be made from materials used in the hospital.

Mr. Topete is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald R. Foss Sr., of Montclair. He graduated from Montclair High School and attended Chaffey College where he was a football player.

The groom-to-be is employed at Upland El Dorado Mobile Home Community.

Heinig-DeMercado

Miss Jeanine Marie Heinig and Danny Earl DeMercado will be married on April 7.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Heinig of Pomona, the bride-elect is a senior at Montclair High School and will graduate in February. She is employed at House of Fabrics, Montclair Plaza.

Her fiance is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Klamm of Pomona. He is a 1973 graduate of Garey High School and is employed at Boy's Market.

Bright birds

A baby's first toy idea: a good one might be the bright colored bird or fish mobiles that attach firmly to the crib so baby can follow the pleasant movements with his eyes. Soon he can hold things. When that happens it is time for the first rattles, the first squeaking rubber toy and the gym sets that fasten across a crib. Soft dollies and animals are fun to feel. Bright disks or strings of large beads to bang or chew are also good. In his bath, floating toys will keep baby happy.

S.S. France chef quits, goes home to do cooking

LE HAVRE, France (UPI) — One of the great chefs of France is hanging up his white cap and retiring from what gourmets call the greatest restaurant afloat.

Henri Le Huede, chef on the S.S. France, will sail from Le Havre on his last voyage Jan. 4, a round-the-world cruise. When the ship returns in April, passengers will have sampled the last Le Huede "moveable feast."

"The retirement age for men at sea is 55," said the chef, now 54, in an interview. "Anyway I have been at sea for 37 years, home only four months a year, and I started work at 12. It is time to think of my two daughters, wife and two grandchildren."

As a testament to Le Huede's renown, the ornate menus for the dining rooms on the France say in large letters, "Henri Le Huede, chef des Cuisines". The New York Times once called the first class dining room of the S.S. France "the best French restaurant in the world."

French food critics temper this compliment to "the best restaurant afloat" on grounds a chef can make truly great dishes only if he is cooking for no more than 60 people. Le Huede's feat is that he creates complicated French dishes for 3,000 people a day, three times a day, or around 9,000 meals.

Hugh supplies

For his latest 12-day trip to and from New York (restocking fruits and vegetables in New York), he laid in supplies for 1,600 passengers in tourist class, 600 in first class and 1,100 crew. His shopping list: 225 pounds of caviar, 700 pounds of foie gras (goose liver), 3,125 pounds of lobster, 9,680 pounds of sausages, 18,160 pounds of poultry, 58,000 eggs, 30,000 bottles of wine, etc.

Le Huede supervises the shopping, peering into fish eyes and pinching meat, because the secret of good cooking "is good ingredients. The finest Normandy butter and cream, very fresh fish, the best meat. Nothing canned, nothing frozen."

"I must be sure I have everything I need," said Le Huede, a small, round-shouldered man of modest manner. "A restaurant on land can send out for more bread but I cannot. You can't say to a passenger 'there isn't any more'. And it's difficult because you don't know how much or what they will order."

Giant Kitchen

While most chefs work in relatively small kitchens where they can keep a close eye on the simmering sauces, Le Huede practices his art in what he says is the biggest kitchen in the world, 10,763 square feet.

During meals he stands in a special spot in the middle of the kitchen to issue orders like a symphony conductor through a haze of steam to his 71 stirring, chopping cooks and two dozen hurrying waiters. Including his butchers and bakers, he commands a staff of 180.

On his last voyage, Le Huede as usual will get up at 6:30 a.m. for breakfast in his small stateroom. In his adjoining tiny office he will draw up the menus two days in advance. Since his diners are a captive audience "we never give them the same menu twice on the voyage. I must make different daily menus for tourist class, first class and the crew. I use my own recipes or the recipes of the great cousine of France.

"I look in the refrigerators to see what merchandise we have. Then I give the chefs the recipes for lunch. I taste, I supervise."

Long Day

In the afternoon he writes recipes for special requests from passengers, "nothing is ever refused." At 6 p.m. he is back in the kitchen, retiring from the field of battle around 11 p.m., seven days a week.

Le Huede has cooked for countless celebrities. Maurice Chevalier always asked for the "selle d'agneau marinette" (saddle of lamb with parsley, hearts of artichokes, black mushrooms in cream sauce). Ernest Hemingway requested quail stuffed with grapes and wild rice. Americans like duck with orange or cherries, while the French prefer less sweet dishes such as stuffed fish, said the chef.

Le Huede said he took up cooking at age 12 because "my father was a poor fisherman in Britanny and I wanted a job that would feed me. Also, I love to travel."

After his apprenticeship in a Nantes restaurant, Le Huede worked in the Paris restaurant, Prunier, for a year. Then he went to sea on the Mexique, the Degrasse, the Ile de France, the Liberte and finally in 1962 the France.

When his farewell voyage ends in April, the chef will take from his cabin his framed press notices and sketches of him made by passengers. The French Line plans to give him a medallion.

He does not plan to open a restaurant on land.

"At my home in Britanny I may write a cookbook," he said. "I do the cooking at home. My favorite dish is a veal chop with slices of ham and cheese, covered with spinach and two different sauces. I do the dishes, too. It's easy to cook for only three people."

Candles may have started fire fatal to 6

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — A 23-year-old woman who was lighting her apartment with candles because the electric company turned off the power perished along with her five young children Tuesday in a fire that swept through their two-story frame apartment house.

Authorities said the fire broke out in the apartment of Elizabeth Forest. A neighbor told sheriff's deputies the family had been lighting the apartment with candles since Monday when their power was turned off for non-payment of the electric bill.

Dead were Mrs. Forest and her five children, Michael, 3, Loreen, 4, Lilly Mae, 6, Cassie, 7, and Isaac, 8.

Two other families living in the building in the Holden Heights suburb escaped the flames.

One of the residents, Eddie Washington, told investigators he was awakened about 2 a.m. by the smell of smoke.

He awakened his wife and child, got them out of the building, then attempted to rescue the Forest family but was driven back by smoke and flames. Washington also awakened another family living in the building and led them to safety.

Fire offcals say their initial investigation showed the blaze started on the dresser of an upstairs bedroom used by the Forest family. The state fire marshal has been called in to investigate the blaze.

Police pledge crackdown on young smokers

LOGAN, Utah (UPI) — A crackdown on cigarette smoking teen-agers was vowed recently by police.

Triggered by parents' complaints, officers will check eating establishments, shops and stores to detect any smoking by persons under 19 years of age.

Utah law prohibits sale of tobacco to persons 18 or under, and prohibits a proprietor from permitting persons 18 or under to frequent his business while using tobacco.

Police said the campaign was launched after parents complained of several infractions.

U.S., European alliance: are we friends or foes?

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Whatever happened to the "Year of Europe"?

Nothing.

In fact, if the Atlantic Alliance between Europe and the United States ever crumbles, 1973 may go down as the year when the irreversible rot set in.

As 1972 and the Vietnam War crept to a close, Henry Kissinger, then President Nixon's national security adviser, said that 1973 would be the "Year of Europe"—the 12 months when the United States would turn from Asia and Russia to repair relationships with its best and oldest friends, the nations of Western Europe.

Implicit in Kissinger's comment was the belief that nothing ailed the Alliance that a little hand-holding wouldn't cure.

In April, Kissinger made a major speech calling for a "new Atlantic Charter." This, he said, would redefine the Alliance's values and purposes, to take into account the changes since World War II and to give it vigor and vitality in the last quarter of the 20th Century.

As the idea evolved, it became accepted by both Washington and the Europeans that the signing of this "charter" would make a fine climax to a European tour by Nixon in November.

So what happened?

Watergate, for one thing. Nixon had other fish to fry in Washington and never got to Europe. With Congress no longer following the White House's lead, a bill vital to U.S.-European trade talks got sidetracked, and Congressional pressures for trimming America's defense commitments to Europe built up.

Then there was the great soybean incident—an episode little noticed in the United States but traumatic in its effect on Europe. The Nixon administration, distracted by Watergate and unaware of the probable reaction in Europe, took fright at a sudden soybean shortage and embargoed all soy exports to Europe.

U.S. soybeans provide 80 per cent of all European cattle feed. To the Europeans, the embargo was nothing less than a treacherous breach of contract. After European protests, the embargo was eased, then dropped. But the damage was done.

Then there was the Middle East war. The European members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) refused (except for Portugal) to give landing rights to U.S. planes carrying arms to Israel. The United States, furious, neglected to tell its allies about its worldwide troop alert until after it was in effect.

To the Americans, this European attitude undercut the NATO alliance. The Europeans failed to see what Israel had to do with NATO and feared that America and Russia would sort out the Middle East situation to their own satisfaction—a fear of superpower diplomacy that surfaced often in this suspicious year.

And then there was oil.

Europe gets 72 per cent of its oil from the Arabs. The United States gets 11 per cent. Given this arithmetic, it was perhaps inevitable that the Allies would see the Middle East differently.

The European Common Market nations issued a pro-Arab statement. The United States rumbled about possible retaliation for a boycott. Washington suggested U.S.-European cooperation on oil sharing. Europe, fearing any link with America's pro-Israeli policy, refused.

The full power of oil to erode the Alliance probably has not been felt yet, but it is being discussed and worried about at every level of the 15 NATO governments.

At year's end, it became apparent that Kissinger's plan—to reshape and give new life to the Alliance—was so difficult itself that the other issues which have soured relations may lead to its failure.

Europeans already were thinking of a replacement for the trans-Atlantic Alliance. France revived the idea of an independent nuclear force, on grounds that America's detente with Moscow made Washington an unreliable protector. The Common Market continued to look inward, reflecting Kissinger's description of it as a "regional" power, and NATO studied what to do when U.S. troops go home.

During the year, the western nations also began work on a reform of the world monetary system, a delicate exercise affecting the future of their economies. This bogged down in the monetary upheavals following the dollar's devaluation in February, took on new promise in midyear, then fell into doubt again at the end of the year as the dollar recovered and oil shortages began damaging European economies.

Most of all, the Europeans complained of neglect. Kissinger himself canceled three scheduled visits to Europe during the year in favor of trips to Peking, Moscow and the Middle East. He spent a few hours in Paris in June—talking about Vietnam — and then stopped off in Brussels in December enroute to Cairo.

European governments complained Kissinger's style of personal diplomacy, coupled with the confusion in Washington over Watergate, kept U.S. embassies abroad so in the dark about official policy that, in the words of one ambassador, "it's impossible to find out what the Americans are thinking."

In this atmosphere, the "new Atlantic Charter" is grinding slowly through the bureaucratic mills. Actually it has become two documents—one on politics and economics being written within the Common Market and the other on security being drawn up within NATO. In their half-finished state, both are bland and, by American government estimation, disappointing.

The "Charter's" future is uncertain. No one knows if or when Nixon will come to Europe.

California unemployed could rise

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California's unemployment rate could rise to 6.5 per cent next year due to the energy crisis, according to Gov. Ronald Reagan's finance chief.

State Finance Director Verne Orr Monday told the Assembly Ways and Means Committee about 5.1 per cent of the state's work force is currently unemployed.

But Assemblyman Willie L. Brown Jr., D-San Francisco, committee chairman, said estimates of the unemployment rate developed by a legislative "manpower" committee showed it would soar to 7.3 per cent next year.

Orr also said state revenues for the current fiscal year will be about $137.4 million lower than originally expected because of the energy shortage.

He said banks and corporation taxes will drop by $50 million due to reduced business activity, which he attributed to the stock market decline and the energy crunch. He said sales, income and gift taxes also produced less revenue than originally projected.

"No one can accurately predict the impact of the oil situation," he said. "The fu-

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll have to use your head today to get you out of the tight spots. Aggressiveness or bravado won't work at this time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Take another look at your long-range plans. There's something amiss. You'd better catch it in time. Avoid impulsive decisions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Have your answers ready if you've reneged on an old obligation. Today could be the day of reckoning.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) An important relationship has been seesawing back and forth. Today, most of the negative aspects will again be emphasized.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Whatever type of work you do today, be sure you do it under the safest conditions possible. Don't take chances.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Something you expected materially may not develop at this time, but don't lose heart. The delay is temporary.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Outside pressures will arouse feelings of insecurity and self-doubt if you let them. Don't make mountains from molehills.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) An important judgment you make today will be based more upon anger than logic. It will not be a beneficial decision in the long run.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Continue to watch your expenditures very closely. You would not be wise to buy now things you need for the future. Wait a bit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't mix business with plasure. You will come out on the short end in both instances.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You'll be more ingenious in thinking of ways to get out of what you should be doing rather than meeting responsibilities head-on.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Avoid associating today with erratic individuals. Someone in your crowd has a chip on his shoulder. You might accidentally knock it off.

Judge decides against state on 50 m.p.h.

OLYMPIA, Wash. (UPI) — A superior court judge has held that the State Highway Commission exceeded its authority in reducing speed limits to 50 miles per hour.

Judge Robert Doran has ruled that no reference to highway safety or road conditions was made by the commission when it took its action last month in the wake of the energy crisis.

He said the legislature had granted the commission power to impose speed limits only for reasons of safety.

The judge cautioned, however, that his oral decision does not have the immediate effect of restoring speeds to their previous limits on 4,516 miles of freeways and state highways.

First he said that his order must be made in writing and then be subject to appeal to the state Supreme Court.

Venezuela's President-elect Carlos Andres Perez is pro-United States, but in a seller's market that won't stop him from using Venezuela's oil wealth as a lever to force changes in U.S. Latin American policy.

In this he joins his closest opponent, Lorenzo Fernandez of the governing Social Christian party.

Both Perez, of the Democratic Action party, and Fernandez ran on moderately nationalistic platforms and both favored taking over the foreign oil companies operating in Venezuela before 1983, when present oil concessions begin running out. Both stressed the take-over should be through negotiations.

Perez has declared President Nixon's policy toward Latin America "not a happy one" and he has said frankly he will use oil to break U.S. trade restrictions.

The United States is Venezuela's largest oil customer, taking around 1.5 million barrels of the country's daily production of 3.4 million barrels.

Both major candidates promised the flow of oil to the United States would continue at present levels.

Rising oil prices already have given Venezuela a windfall of $400 million in increased earnings this year, and where differences between the candidates developed it was over how the oil revenues should be spent.

Fernandez, sticking to the policy laid down by outgoing President Rafael Caldera, has talked of using some of the extra money to develop the Orinoco tar belt in eastern Venezuela and on educational and health projects.

Others, including Perez, feel agriculture is the neediest sector of the economy.

Perez accused the government of failing to improve distribution of wealth, of increasing unemployment by emphasizing automation and of not utilizing national resources.

He promised tax and social reforms and greater support for labor-intensive industries.

The oil industry, while producing some two-thirds of the country's annual $3 billion income, furnishes employment to relatively few people.

Perez accused the United States and other developed nations of failing in their responsibilities toward undeveloped countries and said they should use their oil wealth to demand more technology for local industry and a voice in international policy-making, including money issues.

The outgoing government has made moves toward a more friendly relationship with Cuba. Perez, on the other hand, says that any change in the attitude toward Cuba should come through the Organization of American States.

Greatest loser in the Venezuelan elections appeared to be former dictator Marcos Perez Jimenez, who had hoped to emulate the victory of Juan D. Peron in Argentina. His party trailed far behind the leaders.

Overall, the greatest winner appeared to be the democratic system in Latin America. Through 15 years Venezuela has lived by the rule of free elections.

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Purdue University is encouraging the distaff side to seek degrees in engineering.

Although coeds still account for only a fraction of the engineering students, there are now 69 freshman women enrolled in the 11 schools and divisions making up Purdue's Schools of Engineering. Last year there were 29 women freshmen in the schools.

"We are going to intensify our efforts this year in the hopes of attracting 150 girls in 1974,'' Prof. Donna Frohreich, in charge of special programs in the Department of Freshman Engineering, said.

Over-all this year, there are 160 women pursuing engineering degrees, up from the 40 enrolled in 1968.

ECOLOGY TREE — Jan Smith, 21, of Spokane, Wash., strings the last aluminum cans on a wire that will become part of Expo '74's environmental Christmas tree. More than 40,000 cans have been used on the 120-foot cedar pole which stands on the World's Fair site.

Fair officials say the cans will be recycled. Fair opens May 4.

High court to decide who has authority to prosecute soldier

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court agreed today to examine the conflict between military and civilian authority over service personnel charged with illegally using marijuana while off base and off duty.

The Court will schedule oral arguments later this term on the Defense Department's appeal of a 10th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals decision that only civilian courts have jurisdiction in a Ft. Sill, Okla., marijuana case.

The circuit court last July issued an injunction blocking an Army court-martial trial of Capt. Bruce R. Councilman on charges of possessing and selling mariuana while off duty and off the base.

Councilman was accused of giving and selling marijuana to an Army enlisted man while both were out of uniform in the captain's apartment and ostensibly off duty. The enlisted man actually was on an undercover assignment.

Councilman was arrested by civilian authorities who turned him over to Ft. Sill officials for a court-martial. He won a U.S. District Court decision that the military did not have jurisdiction and the circuit court affirmed it.

The circuit court held that Councilman's case failed to meet 11 of 12 tests the Supreme Court set up in its 1971 decision and expressed doubt about the 12th test. This test is whether the "victim" of an alleged crime by a serviceman is also a serviceman.

The lower court held the case did not meet tests set up in a 1971 Supreme Court decision for deciding that an alleged crime is "service-connected" and subject to jurisdiction of a military court.

HAPPY ENDING — These three youngsters are happily reunited with their pet dog, Fred, after they gave him an overdose of tranquilizers for a flight from Illinois to California, where the family is moving to Fullerton. United Airlines employes at O'Hare International Airport in Chicago found the dog in a coma, gave him mouth-to-mouth resusication and rushed him to a doctor. The youngsers, with happy grins, are from left, Jack, Brett and Cheryl Parton.

DO WANT ADS WORK?

DO MICE LIKE CHEESE?

The answer to both questions is a roaring "yes".

Why mice prefer cheese over all other types of food is something we two-legged creatures will never understand.

Why Want Ads work, at a lower cost and greater effectiveness than any other form of advertising, is easy to understand. It is because Want Ads provide people-to-people communication, bringing buyer and seller together.

If you've never used a Want Ad, you have a pleasant surprise in store for you.

What's your reason for not buying a home NOW?

TROUBLED OVER HIGH INTEREST RATES

It is true interest rates have risen, but they do seem to have stabilized in the past several months. And while the rates may seem high, they are not climbing as rapidly as are labor and material costs. An increase or a decrease of ½ percent in interest rates only amounts to 30c per month per $1000 on a 25 year loan. Is it really wise to deny yourself the security, pleasure and pride of home ownership on the vague hope of interest rates going down. thus saving you only $3 or $4 a month? The value of your home will increase at a much faster rate than can be gained by any lowering of interest rates. NOW is a good time to buy!

WONDER WHERE TO BEGIN LOOKING?

Worry no more . . . most folks have found that the best place to shop for that new or lived-in home is in the Classified Real Estate columns of the Progress-Bulletin. It's here (and only here) that each day you'll find the very latest offerings of homes 'for sale' . . . advertised by the area's leading real estate firms and builders. Check the want ads today—and every day—to find the home that satisfies all your needs.

FRIENDS,
Here are just a few of the many written comments we receive from our happy customers:

Courteous, cooperative, considerate attention on every detail from all your personnel.
H. & B. RUSH, Mira Loma

Cooperation and concern of your personnel made the transition to mobile home living a pleasant experience.
L. HUTCHINSON, Pom.

Thanks for the fine way you have treated us in our new mobile home and we love every minute of it.
R. & M. BLAND, Pom.

Your Service Personnel have been exceptional, both in workmanship and pleasant attitude. Thanks so much.
A. & D. KRUGER, La Puente

Yes folks, our entire staff of efficient, cooperative personnel are at your service to provide you with courteous customer relations for the rest of your life!
Sincerely

Radial Tire Sale

Sears Highway Passenger Tire Guarantee

If you do not receive the number of miles specified because of your tire becoming unserviceable due to (1) defects, (2) normal road hazards, or (3) tread wear-out.

We will: At our option, exchange it for a new tire or give you a refund charging in either case only the proportion of the then current selling price plus Federal Excise tax that represents mileage used. If the tire is unserviceable due to any of the above causes before 10% of the guaranteed mileage is received, the replacement or refund will be made with no charge for mileage received.

Nail punctures will be repaired at no charge.

Guarantee applies to tires on vehicles used for private family purposes.
